as for the last twenty-five years, Canadian Canners' Brands of Canned Goods will be the leaders.

Make it your New Year resolution to confine yourselves to Canadian Canners' Brands, viz.:—"Auto," Aylmer "Canada First," Bowlby "Horseshoe," "Little Chief," "Log Cabin," "Kent," Simcoe "Lynnvalley," "Lion," "Thistle," Delhi "Maple Leaf," Lalor's "Grand River," Lakeport "White Rose."

Old Homestead Brand

are made to please your customers. The stock we use is of the highest quality only; while our plant and processing methods are admitted, even by our keenest competitors, to be strictly up-to-date and thoroughly clean and sanitary. It will certainly pay you to specify Old Homestead Brand when ordering canned goods from your jobber.

THE TEST OF TIME

is after all the surest test. If anything has merit, it surely gains. If it lacks merit, it falls by the wayside. For seventeen years "SALADA" has consistently—unswervingly maintained its high standard of quality. We have put out a good article—we have told the people of its goodness—the people have bought it and have continued to buy it. We have always aimed to "serve the public well." Have we not done so?

Then think of what this means to you.

1908.

The accompanying geometrical table of "SALADA" increases sets forth simply and clearly the marvellous increase in our sales from year to year. It reflects the confidence of every grocer and consumer in "SALADA"—the appreciation of both for honest, consistent service—the reward of merit.

1908 was a splendid year for

BORDEN'S BRANDS

of Condensed Milk and Evaporated Cream. The trade of Canada found that quality, purity and cleanliness counted with their customers.

1909 will be a still better year for you if you stock and push

"EAGLE BRAND" CONDENSED MILK and "PEERLESS BRAND" EVAPORATED CREAM

Unsweetened

Compliments of the Season

To our many customers throughout the Dominion we wish a most prosperous New Year.

We trust that the past year has been a good one for you from a business standpoint, and that 1909 will be even more satisfactory in every respect.

Our many lines have helped you do a good year's business in 1908 because of their unvarying excellence, and we trust we may continue to be of similar assistance to you in future years.

The Lever that will lift in 1909

Any merchant can increase his business with the quality-goods lever. Quality-goods make pleased customers, more customers, more trade, hence, more profit.

You cannot apply the lever at a better point, beginning 1909, than your tea trade. Red Rose Tea is known by every merchant as "good tea." It will be my aim during the coming year to keep it, as in the past, better tea than any other tea on the market.

Try a package in your home, you will then know that Red Rose Tea is the lever that will increase your tea trade in 1909.

Christmas Fair---Country Trade Boomer

Several Ontario Towns Have Adopted the Idea to Hold Trade at Home and Help Holiday Business—Lindsay Tried the Experiment Last Week and Found it a Splendid Success—Some Novel Features.

(By the Canadian Grocer's Travelling Representative.)

A novelty, though perhaps not an innovation, in the way of drawing business to local country centres, is the "Christmas Fair" idea, which, of late years has taken a hold on the merchants in the towns of central Ontario. The credit for propagating this idea is due more particularly to the merchants in the smaller country towns, who, recognizing the fact that some business that by right belonged to them was going to the large cities, decided that some inducement or attraction should be offered the country people in the surrounding neighborhood to do their trading in their local country market town. The "Christmas Fair" was the result.

An Exhibition of Produce.

The central feature of this fair idea is an exhibition of country produce—fresh dressed beef and pork; poultry, eggs, butter and lard, the exhibits and preparation of the exhibits being the property and work of the exhibitor. A set of prizes is offered to stimulate interest, and certainly the contest is keen and occasionally intense, as may readily be supposed.

The claimants for the origination of the idea are many, and it would be a difficult matter to decide to which town the credit is due. However, the principal point is that the fair idea is a success and abundantly justifies its inauguration wherever it has obtained a trial. Newmarket, Goodwood, Sunderland and Little Britain, in York, Ontario and Victoria Counties, have tried the fair a couple of times, and are in the field again for next year. Some elaborate preparations are made in the smaller centres. This year Goodwood had its business street decked out with arches and pillars of evergreen, and the picture was Christmassy and holiday-looking indeed.

"Continual dropping wears the stone," is a proverb used in connection with a drop of water, and the continual and markedly successful yearly repetition of the "Christmas Fair" in the smaller towns is having an effect on some larger centres and county towns.

TAKEN UP IN LINDSAY.

This is the reason why Lindsay, in Victoria County, was taken with the idea. Admittedly a country-buying centre par excellence, and during this passing year of trade depression one of the least affected centres in the country, Lindsay, through its Board of Trade, conceived the notion of following the example of the surrounding small towns and villages, and hold a combined winter fair and Christmas-buying day. To think was to act, and though the time for preparation was short, yet the enthusiasm was such that the fair was destined to be a success from the start. Scarcely two weeks elapsed since the subject was first broached by W. B. Sparling, President of the Board of Trade, who, by the way, is a wholesale grocer and represented the grocers on the committee afterward appointed at a meeting of the Board and the date of the event, December 22, was set. The idea was thought on all sides to be a good one, and right away a committee was appointed to look after the event. That committee was representative of all lines of business, and included J. A. Williamson, B. L. McLean, John Carew, Wm. Galbraith, W. B. Sparling, F. W. Sutcliffe and D. Cinnamon. The farmers' representatives were Jos. Hickson, Mount Horeb, and Wm. Channon, Oakwood. Johnson Ellis, President of the Lindsay Fair Association, was named chairman and H. B. Clemes, of Dundas & Flavelle, Secretary-Treasurer.

Enthusiastic Merchants.

This committee arranged all details. One point which shows how enthusiastically the idea was taken is the fact that the $300 given in prizes was raised in a half-day by the merchants of Lindsay, each man giving on an average $5.

The fair was held in the Market building, which proved too small for the exhibits, many of which overflowed into the square. Prizes were given for dressed and drawn fowl of all kinds; beef, hogs and lambs, and butter and eggs. A number of special prizes were also given by buyers who took possession of the prize winning produce.

A Horse and Baby Show.

Besides this, a horse show was held on Kent Street, the principal business thoroughfare, and on account of its width undoubtedly one of the finest business streets in Canada, and a baby show in the Academy of Music, which latter was conducted by Mayor James Begg.

The Market and Academy are in different ends of the town. One is in the east and the other in the west end, and Kent Street, on which are located the principal business houses, connects the two. As a result, all day long a constant stream of people flowed up and down past the shops and into the stores, and when The Grocer representative, wishing to find out for himself just how the merchants regarded the result of the fair from a business standpoint, entered the shops to speak with the proprietors, he was hustled about in the crowd, and if at all fortunate in seeing the proprietor was met with a "You-bet-ye; haven't time-to-talk; too-busy" reply to his query.

Eighteen Hundred Visitors.

Some 1,200 to 1,800 visitors were in Lindsay for the fair, and they made quite an addition to the 8,000 inhabitants of the town. The stores were crowded all day and many a tired clerk was glad when night came.

To Be An Annual Event.

It is impossible to state in figures the amount of business transacted, but that it well repaid all outlay and expense is more than vouched for by every merchant in Lindsay. Opinion is unanimous on that point. The "Fair" covered but one day, but the event was so appreciated by the farmers and merchants that it promises to be an annual fixture, second only in importance to the Victoria County Fall Fair, which is known as one of the finest autumn fairs in Ontario. As most of the grocers expressed it, "It is the best thing ever held in town."

The stores presented attractive fronts and specially decorated windows, which helped out the general holiday appearance. The grocers were not behindhand in this regard, and some pretty nice window and interior displays were shown.

Graham Bros., the newest grocers in town, had two nicely arranged windows. Fruits and groceries were in one, and an-upset barrel of candy in other. Christmas decorations helped out the show. Adams Bros., grocers and butchers, besides decorating stores and windows, had an attractive display of choice meats and dressed fowl on exhibition at the fair. This exhibit was prettily decorated with holly, evergreen and artificial roses. W. E. Baker, the dean of the grocery trade in Lindsay, devoted his window with a showing of chinaware, which is a prominent side line with a number of grocers in Lindsay. A. Campbell's fine store set one window aside for Christmas fruits and groceries, and the other to a display of chinaware. T. A. Fisher and J. R. O'Neill, away from the main business thoroughfare, had the Christmas decorative spirit prominently shown, as did also John Fleury and A. Primeau, near the market. The latter expressed himself on the value of the fair when he said: "It makes two Saturdays in one week. The only objection being that it did not take place earlier."

The fair will be an annual fixture.

Merchants Generally Enjoyed Good Christmas Business in Most Cases Ahead of Last Year—Fire in Montreal Grocery.

ST. JOHN.

December 29.—Grocers, both wholesale and retail, feel very well satisfied with the Christmas business for 1908. Several of the wholesalers report that the month of December has been the best in their existence. The retailers did a very satisfactory business despite the feeling that the depression of the past year would affect the sales adversely. There has been practically no change in the wholesale quotations, the only one being a decline of 10 cents in the price of beans. Turkeys, which were sold at 23 to 26 cents up to Thursday, climbed the ladder on Christmas eve and 30 cents was asked. This price is a record for St. John.

The majority of the wholesale grocers did not open their places of business on Saturday following Christmas. The holiday was extended from Thursday night until Monday morning. T. H. Estabrooks, wholesale tea merchant, also closed his establishment from Thursday to Monday, in fact; the movement was started by Mr. Estabrooks, and it was greatly appreciated by the employes.

Mrs. Louise T. Williams, mother of F. E. Williams and James D. Williams, of F. E. Williams Co., wholesale and retail grocers, died on Thursday, Dec. 24.

HALIFAX.

December 29.—The Christmas grocery trade in Halifax was brisk last week, and a large amount of goods were turned over. The demand for some lines was very heavy, particularly for dried fruits. On the whole, trade was fully up to that of last season. A record price was asked for fresh laid eggs in the local market during the past week. Fifty-five cents per dozen was the price asked for guaranteed stock, and even at these figures they were bought up, as the supply was very limited.

The market was well supplied with poultry the receipts of stock from Prince Edward Island this season being very heavy. On account of the large quantity of stock sent in at Thanksgiving, the receipts from Nova Scotia were not as great as at Christmas seasons in former years Turkeys sold from 16 to 18 cents, geese 13 to 14 cents, and chickens and ducks 15 cents per pound. The Island poultry this year was of very fine quality.

The jobbers state that the demand for poultry is becoming greater every year, and this notwithstanding the prevailing high prices. Butter is firm and in good demand. Some of the jobbers this week received a small consignment of 5-pound tubs of choice dairy butter, and these found a ready sale at 30 cents per pound. Creamery is in good demand. The supply the dealers are now receiving is only sufficient to meet the demand of their customers.

There has been a considerable falling off in the shipment of apples during the past week, and it is not expected that any large quantities will be moved during the present cold spell of weather. Some fairly good apples were marketed for the Christmas trade, but the majority of the stock was of very poor quality. Some fancy Gravensteins were offered for sale by several of the leading grocers. These apples were kept in first-class condition and they retained their natural color and flavor. This class of stock found a ready sale.

The Government fruit inspectors called a meeting of the growers and shippers at Kentville last week, and the inspectors informed them that in future the law would be rigidly enforced as regards size. All No. 1 and No. 2 fruit will have to be a certain size. The growers contend that it is impossible to keep within the law, and they point out that the best Nonpariel apples do not come up to the requirements of the law, and, therefore, they cannot comply with it.

MONTREAL.

Dec. 29.—Christmas Day had nothing extraordinary to mark its passing. Storekeepers are trying to size up the trade as compared with other years. A large variety of opinions have been expressed regarding this matter. Some say the volume of their business was larger than previous years, while others claim it fell much below the level of other Christmas seasons. When all these opinions are weighed, however, it can be safely said that there has been a falling off. Nearly all express the opinion despite this fact that the pendulum is commencing to swing towards renewed prosperity.

Geo. Newcomes, of Boston, who has been visiting friends and relatives in the city gave an interesting interview recently on conditions in the United States. After a general review of the situation, which, in its general features, is about like our own condition he spoke of the stringency of the Pure Food Law, and the rigour with which it was being carried into effect.

He said that while Dr. Wiley, the chief analyst at Washington, was undoubtedly rendering the nation a great service he was also making a lot of enemies as many sources of revenue accruing from adulteration were now cut off. He paid some attention to the collection agencies, which were springing up and his comment upon these was far from favorable.

J. H. Lefebvre, one of Montreal's progressive east-end grocers, had a narrow escape from death Saturday evening, when, through spontaneous combustion occurring in a barrel of liquor he was severely burned. Damage to the extent of several hundred dollars was done to the store and its contents.

Shipping Salmon From Vancouver to England—New Warehouse in Saskatoon —Calgary Grocers Elected to Municipal Offices.

SASKATOON.

December 28.—Currie Bros., of Second Avenue, intend extending their departmental store next year. The addition will be in the rear of the building.

Speers & Paul, the west side grocers, have brick veneered their frame store which adds greatly to its comfort as well as appearance.

Avery Smith, whose place of business is on Avenue A. has taken a sudden spasm for advertising. He not only sent his customers handbills announcing special prices for Christmas, but he took considerable space in the local papers and has come to the conclusion that it pays.

The A. McDonald Co., wholesale grocers, have now settled in their new place of business, which has just received the finishing touches. The electric elevator is not yet in operation, but will be as soon as power can be supplied by the city. The building is three storeys, with full size basement, and is a handsome addition to the wholesale section. The general offices occupy the front part of the building, while behind is the shipping room. On the first floor directly over the offices, is the packing room.

Another new warehouse almost complete is that of the Rogers Fruit Co. Although not yet finished, the staff are occupying the building. A heavy trade has been done these last few weeks in the fruit trade. The building itself is commodious. In the basement there are four heated rooms capable of holding three carloads of bananas. There is also space enough for about twenty cars of other kinds of fruit. The building is well equipped for handling this business. Next year this branch will be known as the Northern Fruit Co.

VANCOUVER.

December 26.—Grocers are interested in the action of the companies which manufacture the Canada First and St. Charles brands of condensed cream. The Canada First, produced at Aylmer, Ont. is a comparatively recent arrival on the market here, and in introducing it one case in ten was given free to the retailer. Recently, however, the local representative, Mr. McIntosh, was notified that if this continued the St. Charles people would enter the lists, so it was stopped. Some time ago the price of the 20-ounce tins of St. Charles was reduced to $5.10 per case, which made it possible for some of the larger dealers to drop the price to the consumer to two tins for 25c. This was not what was intended, as the family size, a little smaller, which sold for 20c a case less, was the two for a quarter seller. The 20-ounce size was intended for 15c straight. The result has been, of course, that the consumer calls for the larger size, as other grocers have had to meet the cut, and the family size remains on the shelf. Now that there is talk of bringing up the price of the larger size so that it would not be profitable to sell it retail for two for 25c, grocers are wondering if it will be possible to bring the price back to 15c straight. Once the price goes down it is pretty hard to get it back, for when it is done, the consumer always thinks it is another means of extracting just a little more on a necessary article.

The Empress Manufacturing Company, of Vancouver, has placed on the market for the first time a home-made mincemeat in 20-ounce glass packages.

An effort is being made to place the unfermented wines put up by T. A. Lytle & Co., Toronto.

Merchants generally have done a good business this holiday season. The weather was fairly good, several fine days bringing out the people in very large numbers. Every bargain sale, no matter what line, had an unusually large number of buyers, showing that advertisements were eagerly scanned. It is very probable when the totals are counted up, that this year's business will exceed that of any previous.

Carload shipments of bananas are being received twice weekly, and they are being sold lower than at this time in previous years. The quality is good.

California radishes, parsley, etc., have begun to come in, and are a little high in price. The demand, though, is fair.

Navels have advanced at the shipping point 10c and 50c per box, but the quality is only fair. Shipments are arriving on the green side, and none of the stock has the nice orange color that this fruit should have. Last year, too, the oranges were pale and sour. Japs are short in quantity, but better than usual in quality.

Excellent progress is being made by the Hygienic Dairy with its building at Matsqui, and it is expected that operations will begin soon. At a general meeting held this week a permanent board of directors was appointed, as follows: Dr. S. Tunstall, Messrs. C. E. Hope, M. P. Thomson, A. Cruickshanks, R. A. Mather and M. Desbrisay. F. M. Logan is general manager.

An experimental shipment of fresh salmon from this city to England was recently made by George L. Clayton, of Vancouver, with a view to ascertaining the possibilities of establishing a trade with the English fishmongers. The salmon were packed in ice and sent by express. Mr. Clayton received word this week that the shipment arrived in London in good condition, and he is convinced that if refrigerator cars are used a good business could be worked up.

E. A. Ramsay, senior partner and business manager of Ramsay & Phillips, of Kamloops, who have the largest store of groceries and general goods in the province, outside the large coast cities, has disposed of his interest in the business in exchange for property in Red Deer, Alta., owned by J. P. Rice. Ill health has made it necessary for Mr. Ramsay to secure some relaxation from business worries. The property purchased is in the business portion of Red Deer, and is valued at $26,350. Mr. Rice will enter the firm at Kamloops, but Mr. Ramsay will also remain financially interested, investing $10,000 in additional shares, which will increase the working capital by that amount.

Safecrackers operated at the general store of B. B. Smith, Cloverdale, last week and got $25. No goods were taken.

Mr. Wilson has left Vancouver to take charge of the sales department of Harvey & Dobson, general merchants, of Enderby.

Mrs. R. P. Bradley, with her younger sons and daughter, have arrived from Enderby, to join Mr. Bradley, who lately purchased a grocery store in Kitsilano, one of the western sub-divisions of Vancouver City.

Encouragement is given to land owners in the Okanagan district to grow tobacco by Louis Holman, who offers to take all the leaf that is produced there. He is a tobacco grower of some experience, and since coming to British Columbia from Wisconsin four years ago, has cultivated this profitable plant. Following his advice, a number of others have started growing, and now there is a total tobacco acreage about Kelowna of about 43 acres, from which it is expected that 38,000 pounds of leaf will be obtained. Climatic and general conditions are very favorable, and the indication is that this industry will expand rapidly.

Broder Bros., of Bellingham, are operating a clam cannery at New Westminster. The raw product is obtained from an island in the Gulf of Georgia by Indians, and conveyed to the factory in sacks. Orientals are employed in the work of preparation, but the more important parts of the process are carried out by eight white men. Nothing is wasted, the shells being shipped to Bellingham, where they are manufactured into chicken feed.

CALGARY.

December 26.—The appearance of the stores last week, not only proves conclusively that Calgary is second to none as a modern city, but that the grocers possess both business ability and the skill and taste of the artist. To form an idea of Calgary's prosperity, and the efficiency of its business houses, one could not do better than take the store of the Calgary Milling Co. as a criterion.

Mr. Turcotte, who for the past two months has been in charge of the Calgary grocery store, in 1st Street West, has lately opened another store in the rapidly growing suburb of Sunnyside.

Among the many passengers going east for the Christmas season was J. G. Savage, of Plunkett & Savage, Rumor has it that he will not return to Calgary alone.

The dairymen of Alberta report very good progress during the season just passed. The fifty creameries and cheese factories in the province have done a much better business than last year. Twenty-one of the creameries established on the co-operative principle and owned by the association of farmers, were operated by the Provincial Department of Agriculture on their behalf, and have proved a great boon to the farmers of the various districts.

There appears to be a scarcity of peel this year. The wholesalers, owing to the big demands, have run short. As this was partly anticipated, many of the retailers held on to their stock and will probably be able to meet all requirements.

R. R. Jamieson, for many years superintendent of C.P.R., Calgary, has been elected mayor by about 500 majority. The experience he has had in handling large railway affairs will stand him in good stead in his new position. The coming year will be an important one in Calgary. Several big undertakings will be pushed forward, the street railway being one of them.

The Calgary grocers are honored by having three of their number, F. J. Green, J. C. Speer and G. N. Erb, elected as aldermen, and if they attend to the work of the council as they have to their private affairs, the citizens will have reason to be proud of them. F. G. Green is of Wood & Green, 8th Avenue W. Their business is one of the largest in the city, and Mr. Green's business ability, as well as popularity, counted for much in his election. J. C. Speer runs a store with his brother in 9th Avenue E., where they have been in business about two years. Mr. Speer will be a good addition to the council. G. N. Erb, of Erb & Anderson, flour and feed merchants, 8th Avenue E., is a quiet, unassuming man, but with a good grasp of affairs.

Recently a meeting of the wholesale section of the Board of Trade was held to discuss the question of legislation with reference to the sales of goods in bulk. Wm. Georgeson, of the Georgeson Co., wholesale grocers, was in the chair and read the Bulk Sales Act, as passed by the British Columbia Legislature, and advocated legislation on similar lines. Under existing circumstances it is possible for a retailer indebted to wholesalers to sell out his entire stock, pocket the money and leave the country, when, as many cases have proved, the creditor receives nothing. It seems that an act to remedy this state of affairs would be welcome, and be of benefit, not only to wholesale houses, but retailers, too, by doing away with fraudulent merchants. A resolution in favor of this act was unanimously passed at the meeting, and will be submitted to the council of the Board of Trade at their next meeting.

Jas. Logan, who for the past five years has been running a general merchant's store in Olds, has assigned to George Gray, official assignee, of Calgary. When everything is straightened out his assets will in all probability quite cover his liabilities.

L. T. Mewburn, of L. T. Mewburn & Co., wholesale grocers was recently elected president of the Hunt Club just formed in Calgary.

Many Grocers Interested in Municipal Elections—Christmas Business Reported Generally Good—Brantford's Christmas Excursion a Success — London Grocers Enthusiastic Bowlers.

LONDON.

Dec. 29.—Local retail grocers agree that this year's Christmas trade has been at least equal to that of last year, while the business of Christmas eve surpassed any previous record.

This is stock-taking week in the wholesale houses and all the travelers are in.

Brokers report trade rather quiet, with little change in prices of staples. Canned goods are moving very slowly.

At the next meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, to be held on Jan. 12, the matter of holding the annual banquet will be taken up and the date and place named.

Local retail grocers have not yet recovered from the bowling fever. Next week there will be a match for blood between teams representing grocers north of Dundas Street and those south of it. Treasurer Ed. Ryan, will captain the south-siders and ex-President Harry Ranahan will be in command of the north-enders.

Only two grocery men were put in nomination for municipal office on Monday. Samuel Screaton, of Edward Adams & Co., (wholesale), chairman of the Hospital Trust, who is seeking re-election, and T. H. James, whose name is on the list of aldermanic nominees.

It is understood that John Garvey, wholesale grocer, intends erecting during the coming summer a handsome five-storey warehouse on the site on King St. of the Murray Shoe Company's premises, which is the property of Mr. Garvey. Mr. Garvey has long had this project in contemplation, but certain leases have prevented its being carried out.

The local cheese trade has been rather lifeless during the past three weeks, as buyers generally have sufficient stock with which to finish the year. Though there are fairly large quantities in Montreal, the wholesale exporters refuse to let go their holdings at present prices. Their reason for so doing is that cheese stored here is mostly of September and October make, and was purchased at higher prices than the later makes. They are, therefore, willing to hold on and take chances rather than suffer a loss at the present time. One large dealer states that prospects look brighter now, and he looks for an advance in January, although not a large one. The same authority stated that England's supply is nearly exhausted, and they will have to import Canadian cheese in the near future. He does not, however, believe cheese will soar very high.

Thieves entered Gyde's grocery, 508 Grosvenor St., the other night and made off with a quantity of goods.

Roy Moore, driver for Ryan & Russell's grocery wagon, had a close call from serious injury, if not death, at the Richmond St. crossing of the C.P.R. on Saturday. While driving over the tracks he failed to notice an approaching yard engine until it was almost upon him. Then he whipped up the horse, but the engine struck the end of the wagon, throwing it around to one side and pitching Moore and a companion out. Their escape with a few cuts and bruises was little short of miraculous.

CHATHAM.

December 29.—Following the busy Christmas season, keen interest is being taken in the municipal elections. Members of the grocery and allied trades figure quite prominently in the list of candidates placed in nomination to-day.

There is a straight fight for the Mayoralty between Ald. John Edmondson, the St. Clair Street butcher, and Ald. W. H. Westman. Ex-Ald. Wm. Potter, who contested the Mayoralty last year, was in many quarters expected to again enter the race, but a few days ago gave out a statement to the effect that he was not seeking municipal office. He was nominated for the Council, though it is uncertain whether or not he will be a candidate. In addition to ex-Ald. Potter, Ald. Harry Andrew is a grocer candidate out for re-election to the Council, after one year of service. Wm. Anderson, ex-chairman of the Public Library Board, is also in the race, his candidature meeting with widespread approval. Mr. Anderson is president of the City Retail Merchants' Association, and has a general reputation as a hustler. John D. Stark, St. Clair Street, is another grocer nominee, though it is uncertain as yet whether or not he will stand. John McCorvie, for the past year chairman of the Board of Education, is this year in the aldermanic race, and is counted one of the likeliest candidates in the list of 40. John Mahler, of the Chatham Evaporating Works, and Chas. E. Lister, of the Maple City Creamery, are also in the race. All things considered, dealers in foodstuffs have a pretty goodly representation in the list of candidates. Harry W. Jacques is the only grocer in the list of candidates for the Board of Education.

Though it was at one time thought likely that the repeal of the market by-law, prohibiting grocers from purchasing on the market before 10 o'clock, which was put through early in the year, would prove an issue in the municipal elections, so far it has been brought up by only one candidate, Fred. H. Brisco. Mr. Brisco comes out flat-footed in favor of the restoration of the 10 o'clock proviso, with respect to grocers and butchers, as well as its extension to include wholesale buyers.

The Christmas season is over. All things considered, it was a very successful season for the grocery trade. Grocers all round are well satisfied with results. "It was miles ahead of last year," was the enthusiastic statement of one merchant to The Grocer representative, while grocers who condescended to be specific reported in some cases that their business for December, 1908, was approximately $500 to $600 in excess of that for December, 1907. Christmas displays were on the whole far better than those last year, though in many cases simpler.

Assignee W. G. Burrows states that the estate of R. I. Weaver, the St. Clair Street grocer-butcher, whose assignment was reported last week, is in pretty good shape, the assets being far in excess of the liabilities. The assignment was probably hastened by the pressure of some of the larger creditors to secure payment of their claims. The assignee intimates that the estate will not only pay 100 cents on the dollar, but will leave Mr. Weaver a tidy balance. The business is being carried on by the assignee, pending the winding-up proceedings.

E. H. Ruttan, grocer, of Wallaceburg, has added a new National Cash Register to his store equipment.

O'Flynn & Burgess, Wallaceburg, have brightened the interior of their grocery by installing several additional electric lights.

Gilbert Lombeard has opened a new butcher shop in Wallaceburg, in the front part of Jas. Dunlop's premises.

Elmore Selkirk has joined the staff of E. Coulter's grocery at Wheatley.

Harry Gill, of Ouvry, is offering his grocery and other property for sale.

GUELPH.

December 29.—The Christmas trade, the grandest time of all the year in the grocery business, is come and gone, and from outside indications the trade did not pan out as well as usual this year in Guelph. The grocers in some instances were responsible themselves. The window dressing this year was away behind other years, in fact, I do not remember seeing the windows here as a whole so poorly dressed and so little decoration shown. It does not cost so much that any merchant need be afraid of the cost even if they did not pay for themselves. In a few cases some attempt was made but only in a few. The boot and shoe, also the dry goods windows, were all that could be desired, but the grocers for once were not in it at all. George Williams, with a beautiful display of candies, stockings, etc., had the nicest window in the city, but for a right out-and-out grocery window display we did not have any. Some of the grocers claim they had not time; but that is a too far fetched excuse. There was just as much and, perhaps, more time this year, and if there was not it should have been made, as nothing helps Christmas trade more than a well dressed window, and most grocers are well aware of it. "How was the Christmas trade with you?" was the general question among grocers this week and most claim just as good as last year. But then again on the side each one has his own version, and you can put it down as a fact that it was not up to other years. Business in the china and crockery line was all that could be desired, but then again this year one of our dry goods stores put in a line of china at cut prices and most of the grocers who handle these lines had to meet competition, and while a good many more goods may have been sold, the profits were not nearly so large on account of the cut prices. As it was this year, a lot of merchants had a chance to clean up their stocks at a reduced price, for which the public got the benefit.

The market Saturday was conspicuous by its absence, which is not often the case in Guelph. But the other days of the week had spoilt it. Thursday's market made up for it.

The only scarce article this year again was turkeys, and as high as 20c a lb. was paid here.

We were wondering up in Guelph what Charley Smye had to eat at the banquet to change his face so much. Charley's "Tartan Brand" did not do that surely?

Doesn't it take some grocers a long time after the Christmas season is over to change their advertisements? Guelph is not alone in this; long after the new year is in they will still be shouting out their Christmas specials.

The Co-operative Association had an idea for their window at Christmas which helped to draw the crowd. They had a large cake of shortbread with a Merry Christmas done in icing on the top. It was given free to the nearest guesser to its weight.

1909 will soon be here. One of the new leaves in the grocers' case this year who says, "Just as good as last year," ought to be, "The largest trade we ever did and keep it up all the year." Just as good is not good enough for Guelph.

BARRIE.

Dec. 29.—Christmas business this year has been better on a whole than last, as this year we have had four days leading up to the holiday whereas last year we only had one day practically to do it in. This season was a good one for fruits and confectionery and more fancy groceries than usual were sold. Two leading local firms mailed circulars to the buying public announcing Christmas suggestions which they claimed helped them very much, another had a chair contest in which nine fine chairs were given to the parties in town and the surrounding district who received the highest number of votes—every twenty-five cent purchase calling for a vote. This scheme worked well and helped swell the sales of that merchant, as there actually were a couple of ladies in the contest who went around town asking people to buy from that store and give them their votes.

The merchants around town, more especially the older ones, were very much grieved to hear of the sudden death of Chas. E. Kyle in Toronto on Monday. Mr. Kyle had visited this town as a traveler for grocery houses for the past twenty-five years, and a host of old and young friends of this town join in deepest sympathy for Mrs. Kyle.

Christmas turkey was at a premium on the local market last Tuesday and Thursday, there being only a few offering. The farmer could ask any old price he wished—which he did—on Tuesday. Seventeen cents a pound was paid and people were putting off till Thursday market thinking they would buy cheaper, when up went the price to 19c and 20c, and even at that the fowl were unprocurable. Thursday evening the several merchants who had any were retailing them at 25c a pound and cleaned up all they had at that. Geese also followed the prices of turkeys in proportion and were sold at fifteen cents a pound. There were no ducks offered, this being the first year that this has ever occurred.

Edward Luck, late of Luck, Wisdome & Company, has joined the staff of James Vair & Sons.

J. Boyde, of Telfer Bros. Collingwood, has resigned his position with that firm.

Budd, Lawson & Co., have undergone a recent change, Mr. Lawson withdrawing from the firm which is now called Budd & Co.

The elections are now at fever-heat. James Vair looks the likely candidate for Mayor, while W. D. Bothwell is trying hard for a re-election as alderman for No. 3 ward. Sam Calwell is trying to land No. 5 ward.

PETERBORO.

Dec. 29.—The nominations of candidates for municipal honors took place here yesterday and the slate includes a couple of men interested in the grocery trade. Geo. A. Gillespie, of White & Gillespie, grocers, was named for the council. Mr. Gillespie has already spent a year in the city council of Peterboro and will in all probability remain in the field again. E. F. Mason, grocer, was nominated for the board of education. A few years ago Mr. Mason occupied a seat in the city council here and before he retired was chairman of the finance committee. He is proprietor of three grocery stores.

Among the attractive grocery windows during the Christmas season was that of Peter Connal & Son, George St. The feature of the display was a large wax doll in holiday attire, standing beneath a throne-shaped canopy. The latter was erected on an elevated pedestal, giving the whole display a commanding appearance.

GALT.

December 29.—The merchants in Galt are exceptionally well pleased with the Christmas trade. It was better than for some years past. Of course, the Saturday trade was killed, and the streets in town on that day were more deserted than on an ordinary week day. The big Christmas market in Galt was on Wednesday before the holiday, and it was a record-breaker. The council expended considerable money in advertising, but still the quantity of produce was insufficient to meet the demand. Turkey sold at 22c per pound.

John Sloan, grocer, has been elected president of the Galt Board of Trade.

At the nomination meeting on Monday evening, Ald. Pat. Radigan was elected by acclamation for a second term. He has served the town faithfully during 1908 and his re-election is well deserved.

Thos. G. Robinson, the Waterloo Ave. grocer, will seek election to the aldermanic board from Ward 5. "Tom" is well up in municipal affairs, an energetic worker and a strong labor man, and although he is up against strong opposition, it is quite possible that he will be elected.

The clerks in the various grocery stores were handsomely remembered by their employers at Christmas.

There is practically no destitution in Galt, a statement which any other town could hardly truthfully make.

BRANTFORD.

December 29.—The excursion from outside points under the auspices of the local business men, the week before Xmas, was a great success. The radial companies gave a good service and reported that 1,600 people secured return tickets. The return rates were: From Galt 10c, Paris 5c, Ancaster 5c.

Percy Greensides spent Christmas with friends in Preston.

The wholesale houses reported that stocks of Christmas goods are very low.

Philip Truss, wife and family, spent Christmas with friends in Hamilton.

Christmas is again as far away as ever and your correspondent has received many favorable reports of this year's business. While the majority of merchants report that sales have been smaller in comparison to the usual amounts, when totaled up they amount to more than last year. The stores all appeared attractive this year, much more time than usual having been spent on the Christmas decorations. The window displays were exceptionally good, as great interest has been taken in the window dressing competition.

Most of the stores kept open the week previous to Christmas until ten o'clock. The last five days were busy ones for everybody. While Brantford is not noted for a large market during the week, it was, nevertheless, thought by all that Thursday's market would be a good one. In this many were disappointed, and especially those who had not purchased their turkeys before. One farmer asked 30c per lb., but most of them were sold at 25c lb. New laid eggs are still scarce and are retailing at 35c per dozen.

Civic nominations on Monday brought out an unprecedented array of candidates for municipal honors. Ald. Suddaby, the West Brant grocer, is in the field for Mayor. He has been chairman of the Board of Works for the past two years, and has done faithful work, especially in connection with the street paving which has been inaugurated this year. Ald. Burns is also a candidate for re-election in Ward 3. Both of these gentlemen's past records should commend them to the favorable consideration of the citizens.

ST. CATHARINES.

December 29.—Many merchants were caught unprepared when the final Christmas rush came last week, simply because they had come to the conclusion weeks ago that the Christmas trade would not amount to much.

Almost every grocer in the city reports the Christmas trade equal to, if not surpassing that of last year. Large quantities of groceries were disposed of and for once stocks were short of many lines. Cranberries were hardly obtainable at any price, table raisins were all sold and there were only one or two varieties of nuts in any quantity. Housekeepers could scarcely believe their ears when, inquiring for these goods, they heard in each instance the same response, "All sold." To guard against a repetition of this a suggestion might be offered which by experience has proven itself quite practical. Take all the invoices of your Christmas stock purchases and list the amounts of each item on a sheet of writing paper, as well as the cost price. After each item fill in as remarks whether your purchase was sufficient to meet the demands of your trade. If not sufficient, estimate the quantity you could have sold and enter it in your remarks. If you find you are overstocked in some lines note these and the quantities sold. This should be done carefully with every line you buy for Christmas trade. Then when you have completed your remarks, place them in an envelope marked, "Pointers for Christmas Buying, 1909," and store it in the safe. With price conditions the same a year from now a grocer will be able to place his Christmas orders intelligently and without the chance of over-buying, which happens if he trusts to memory alone. If prices are changed, either higher or lower, some allowances should be made for these altered conditions. If prices are lower on any line naturally larger sales may be expected, whereas if they are higher sales will be curtailed.

Stock-taking is the next event every grocer has in mind now. Do you take stock? If not, why not begin this year? You can't realize the odds and ends of stock that may have accumulated in unknown corners in twelve months or longer. These represent capital—dead capital—not earning its share of the profits. Stock-taking will reveal these. Then why not know exactly how you stand? You may have worked hard during the past year and if you knew exactly how much your net profit for the year was over and above all expenses you would perhaps be ashamed to tell it.

It follows that after the periodical summing up, the successful grocer will plan ahead for the new year. Don't overlook your advertising. How can you ascertain what amount you should devote to advertising? Take the total of your sales for 1908 and allow one per cent. of that amount to be your advertising appropriation for 1909. If your sales were $10,000 that would mean $100 for advert sing next year. Plan now how you are going to spend your allowance for advertising. Use only the mediums that pay.

One of Toronto's Brightest Groceries, the Store of H. G. Macdonald, 223 Sorauren Ave.

The fixtures of the Simson store, of Thorold, are to be sold by auction on Dec. 31 and on January 2.

W. H. Merriman, one of our local wholesale grocers, purchased the Rawson stock at Humberstone at 55c on the dollar. It is expected that the estate will pay from 35 to 45 cents on the dollar to creditors. Mr. Merriman has not definitely decided as to how the stock wi l be disposed of, as he is considering a very favorable offer which he has received for it en bloc.

T. J. Farmer, of C. A. Farmer & Son, grocers, Perth, was a visitor in Toronto Christmas week.

THE APPLE SITUATION.

The apple situation just now, while not exactly exciting, presents some features which are decidedly interesting. The crop of 1907 was a light one and this present year's is but little better. The early varieties were plentiful enough, but the late fall and winter apples are very scarce. As is well known the past summer was an exceedingly dry one, and in consequence the keeping qualities of the fruit are very low. The buds in the early summer gave promise of an abundant yield, but the drought during July and August made growth too rapid, and a few windstorms which came on in the late summer played havoc among the trees and blew off a great quantity of fruit.

Early apples were fairly plentiful, although a number of barrels offering contained what seemed more than a fair proportion of windfalls. The later apples looked better, and were better, but the great defect this year with all kinds of apples is that they were too dry. They do not stand up well. That is why good apples are scarce and command a high price.

Nearly three months ago when apples were more plentiful than now and when the price of early varieties ran from $1.25 to $1.85, the statement was made in these columns that $2.25 a barrel was none too high for the firmer grades, and that later varieties might easily be worth $2.50. Our estimate proved correct, though the figures were a little conservative, good apples ranging from $2.50 to $4.50 per barrel.

A great many commission men who handle general fruit lines, more particularly in the smaller centres of the country, and have in the past dealt in apples, are not touching the fruit this season. They lost money a year ago, and do not wish to repeat their experience. Some of the growers, too, lost money last year, and this season are placing their fruit in a different way and in a different market.

Anyone who reads the reports of apple shipments from Canadian and United States ports to Europe. cannot but be surprised at the small quantities going forward this year. The season opened well enough, and two months ago it looked as though a new apple-shipment record would be established. Such, however, was not to be the case. Evidently the packer for export has not yet learned his lesson, many of the apples reaching Liverpool in an unmarketable condition.

Of course there was some sort of excuse for the earlier arrivals. Forest fires delayed ships in the St. Lawrence and navigation was all but tied up, and this unforeseen catastrophe caused delay in placing the fruit on the European markets. But when a great many later arrivals were seen to be in the same condition buyers grew shy and the price declined. Good stock was put in the same category as early fruit, though of late a good high price is offered in Liverpool for select apples.

The blame for sending unmarketable fruit forward cannot be laid at any one person's door. Some of the fruit from Ontario and Western points was shipped from Montreal, and some Eastern fruit from St. John and Halifax. Nor are Canadians only to be blamed, for not a little of this unfit fruit was shipped from United States ports.

Another feature which strikes one is this. Of late the number of fruit growers who sell apples as they stand on the trees is increasing. It may mean more money for the grower, and it certainly means less work; but is it wise to do this without proper inspection? Let us consider a case. An orchard which looked worth $300 to a packer yielded but $200 worth of good fruit. What would the packer do? Perhaps he would try to make up the other $100 by putting in the culls and windfalls which would ordinarily go to the cider mill. In fact, this seems to have been done. Now a suggested remedy is that inspection be made on all fruit whether for export or home consumption, and that the inspection be made at the place where picked and packed.

That something along this line is coming to be recognized is shown by the way Annapolis Valley apples are now going forward. For the first time, apples from Annapolis are going out as such, and not under the general designation of Nova Scotia apples. The fruit growers of Kent County, Ontario, too, are recognizing the fact that it is well to look after their output in a personal way. Last year they lost money exporting their fruit through agents to Britain. This year they are shipping to the West and making money.

The West this year is the big market for apples, and that market is taking nearly all the fruit that otherwise would have gone to Britain. Southwestern Ontario has a slight advantage in the matter of climate and its fruit is placed on the market ten days before Niagara lines, and can be offered in Winnipeg two weeks earlier than British Columbia fruit. But other sections of the country are sending apples to the West, and are making money, too. One Toronto dealer a few days ago was offering $2.80 a barrel for apples which he was shipping to the West.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH JAPAN.

A Japanese merchant passing through Montreal, en route to England recently, when questioned regarding the trade relationship of Canada with Japan, said that he was gratified to know that the interchange of products between the two countries was increasing each year, and that trade had been established, on a good, healthy basis, which had every appearance of being a lasting institution. Canadian canned goods were in especially good demand. A great variety of other lines were also being introduced into the market.

A Canadian authority referring to these statements, said that the flour trade with Japan had dropped off considerably, in fact, almost altogether, owing to the imposition by the Japanese Government of a duty of fifty cents per barrel. The Japanese Empire produced about 15 million bushels of wheat, and the remainder of their supply was derived from Canada and the U.S. The trade in flour reached fairly good dimensions at the close of the Jap-Russian War, when this business received the discouragement above referred to.

IMPROVING THE DEPARTMENT'S USEFULNESS.

A circular received from the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa during the week shows that its officers are taking well-advised steps to make themselves conversant with the ideas of the business men in whose interests, as well as for the country as a whole, they are working.

The Deputy Minister invites Canadian exporters and manufacturers to give the department the benefit of their views on the following questions: (a) "What would you advise should be done to increase the export trade of Canada?" (b) "What improvement or change do you think desirable in the compilation of the trade statistics published by this department?" (c) "Can you suggest any improvement in the collection and publication of commercial information received from the trade commissioners?" Replies should be marked "Trade Suggestions" on the envelopes.

This is something which manufacturers and exporters in all parts of Canada should take an interest in and give due consideration.

LOOK FORWARD TO BETTER THINGS.

With the departure of the old year and the coming of the new, there naturally arises in the mind of the grocerman the question, "What can I do to better my business during the year 1909?" Resolutions are, therefore, in order, and if they are sincerely made they should be kept. The grocer must reflect on the past, find where he has blundered and lost money, and lay his plans for the future to avoid the recurrence of the mistake. If he finds he has paid too little attention to the art of window display and has noticed that his neighbor has profited thereby, he has a good foundation for a resolution.

Again a grocer may have neglected to keep his name and business before the public as prominently as he should have done and might easily have done. Publicity is a contending factor. The public should know who you are, what you have for sale and what you sell it for. The effect of advertising may be determined with little trouble by comparison. From present prospects the grocery business during the coming year promises to be excellent. Regardless of the financial stringency of the past year, reports from various Ontario towns and cities indicate a splendid Christmas trade—one which, it seems, was scarcely expected by the grocers. With the experiences of the past to go by, the grocers should have a much better year during 1909 than the one which has just closed.

MAY MEAN FAMINE IN LEMONS.

The earthquake and consequent disaster in Sicily on Monday is likely to have a very stiffening effect on the lemon market during the coming season. At the present time a large quantity of the season's supply is stored in warehouses on the docks at Messina, in the centre of the affected district and it is feared that the tidal wave which accompanied the earthquake shock will practically mean the destruction of this stock. Local brokers have been cabling this week trying to secure information regarding the matter, but up to the time of going to press nothing could be learned.

If the possibility spoken of above has occurred it will mean practically a lemon famine in Canada in May and June and prices will be likely to soar very high.

At the present time there are no lemons between Messina and Toronto and local stocks are very light. Shipments for local brokers were due to leave Messina on the 29th, the day after the disaster. Of course these will not be sent and it is possible they have been destroyed.

New crop Messinas will arrive in July, and this should ease the situation a little, but if the disaster has had the effect imagined the prices of lemons will be very high during the coming summer.

COURTESY AND CLEANLINESS.

Courtesy costs nothing, and as a good business investment cannot be surpassed. Everyone whom you know could tell you of numberless instances where courtesy has had a very large pecuniary value. to say nothing of any other aspect of the question. There is, however, a very grave danger of confounding courtesy with servility.

A writer in defining a gentleman, said "He was a man who was lord of his own actions, always expressing that lordship in his behaviour, not subservient nor servile." To draw the line is a very difficult matter, but it can be done. Some grocers complain that their social position is not what it ought to be, perhaps, however, it would be better to qualify this statement by saying their wives do the complaining in this respect, as the average grocer, is so busy he does not have much time to think over his social status.

The writer was amused some time ago by an incident which occurred in a grocery store. Some time previously the proprietor had sold his business to a younger man. Finding life very dull without something to do, he found himself spending much time on the scene of his past endeavors. He greeted those who came in with the same old smile and enquired in an intensely interesting way regarding their health. What, however, was the most amusing part of this comedy was the fact that the inevitable "Thank you, thank you," escaped him as he still politely opened the door. All of this was force of habit, and so long as he lingered about his old haunts his old habits clung to him. With some people who are in trade, and meet the public this courtesy is studied and oppressive, being obviously for a purpose. while with others it comes with a natural grace.

Many and varied are the comments which are passed on the personal appearance and deportment of those who serve customers. Not long ago in a certain store, a lady was heard to remark to her companion "What a nice clean looking lad that is who served us, and he is so courteous." In this young man the employer had an asset, whose full value it would be difficult to estimate. Psychological as well as material impressions play a large part in our daily life, and if these are not pleasant, we are not likely to visit again the places where we receive them. On the other hand, if they are good we are impelled to seek out these places at another time. When a woman moves into a new community, and consequently has to change her grocery patronage she has been heard to say on reaching her home after visiting a nearby grocery: "The man who served me had on a disgustingly dirty collar, and his shirt looked as though he had not changed it for a month." Mentally, she pictures his goods as suffering from the same complaint and immediately transfers her patronage to the grocer whose clerks are immaculate in clean white frocks, and aprons. In regard to politeness and courtesy it may be said that the average grocer is in this respect guilty of the sins of commission rather than omission. In the great majority of cases politeness is overdone, and nothing is more objectionable to people of discernment than this. See to it that you are not too effusive as this offends people quite as readily as the other extreme, especially since they may think that it is only assumed for a material end.

TRAVELERS' MEETING AT LONDON

Decide to Admit Saleswomen as Members—Travelers' Club Elects Officers.

The annual meeting of the Travelers' Club was held on Saturday night. President Townsend, in opening the meeting, said the year had been one of the most successful in the history of the club. The membership had increased greatly, and was now the largest in the history of the club. Financially, they were in a splendid position, and the profits for the year were the greatest yet. The election of officers was then called for and resulted as follows: Honorary President, Hon. C. S. Hyman; Honorary Vice-presidents, Ald. Donald Ferguson, C. W. McGuire, H. E. Buttrey; President, J. S. Townsend (re-elected). 1st Vice-President, S. Frank Glass (re-elected); 2nd Vice-president, A. H. Brener (re-elected); Secretary, Fred Lind (re-elected). Directors, J. W. Ferguson, B. S. Murray, H. W. Lind, Frank Lawson Edwin Paul, Benj. Noble, J. T. Green and F. S. Fisher. Auditors, A. H. Moran and J. K. Spry.

Association Meeting.

The annual general meeting of the Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association was held on Saturday last. The officers were elected by acclamation at the meeting a couple of weeks ago and there were only a few vacancies on the directorate to fill. To these the following were elected: Directors for London—E. M. Hannah, A. S. Wallace, H. W. Lind, Frank Lawson, W. Smith-Sen, R. H. Turnbull and P. M. Millman. For Galt—C. Turnbull.

The re-adjustment of the mortuary benefit fund was the cause of considerable discussion.

It was impossible to arrive at any conclusion in the meeting and a committee composed of W. R. Grant, William Gray, William Turnbull, J. M. Dillon, W. L. Underwood, P. M. Millman and Col. J. W. Little was appointed to thoroughly consider the whole question and report at the next meeting.

The right of a member to give the power of attorney to another member to vote was abolished at the suggestion of R. E. Davis, and in the future each member must vote himself. It was also decided that the trustee should receive the ballot paper instead of the secretary, as in times past. It was also decided to increase the duties of the treasurer, and he was voted a salary of $200 per annum.

William Gray moved that all the funds of the association should be invested in the name of the president, the trustee and the treasurer. J. M. Dillon seconded the motion, and it was carried.

There was considerable discussion on the motion not to extend the privileges of membership to the ladies, but it was voted down, by a considerable majority.

E. J. Dawson and J. F. Kern were re-appointed auditors for the coming year.

The annual report was received and unanimously adopted. The officers were congratulated on the splendid showing of the year.

The sum of $300 was voted to the charitable fund.

The new board met directly after the general meeting and elected Col. J. W. Little as trustee, and Alf. Robinson as secretary.

DEATH OF CANADIAN TRADE COMMISSIONER.

Alexander Maclean, an Old Newspaper Man, Passed Away in Shanghai.

The news of the death in Shanghai, China, of Alexander Maclean, trade commissioner of the Canadian Government, which came in a cable dated Shanghai, Dec. 22, has been received with a great deal of regret by his many friends in the Dominion. The deceased was widely known throughout Canada, even prior to his appointment, Dec. 1st, 1903, as trade agent at Yokahama, when the Government opened its first agency in China. Mr. Maclean was born in Brant County, Ontario, and after teaching a short time in his early manhood, he became a newspaper writer. He established the Mitchell Reformer, published The Cornwall Freeholder from 1865 to 1872, and represented The Globe in the Parliamentary Press Gallery during the stormy period between 1872 and 1874. His next service in newspaper life was as publisher of the Ottawa Times and his final venture in journalism was as managing director of the Montreal Herald.

THE LATE ALEXANDER MACLEAN,

Canadian Trade Commissioner in Shanghai.

During the past few months Mr. Maclean had been too ill to attend to his duties in the east, but the department at Ottawa and his many Canadian friends believed he was on the road to recovery. On Oct. 30th, F. C. T. O'Hara, Deputy Minister of Trade and Commerce, received the last letter from him, and in it Mr. Maclean dealt with business matters, giving the impression that he was regaining his health. Last May he was transferred from Yokahama to Shanghai and since that time he had not been in the best of health. He was 74 years of age and was predeceased by his wife. John Maclean, of the Allis-Chalmers-Bullock Company, is a son, and M. Y. Maclean, M.P. for South Huron, a brother.

DEATH OF GEORGE RANDALL.

Wholesale Grocer, of Berlin, Passed Away Last Week.

George Randall, sr., of Randall & Roos, wholesale grocers, of Berlin, died on Wednesday, Dec. 23, at the ripe old age of 77 years. Mr. Randall was born in Chesterfield, New Hampshire, and at the age of 19 years came to Hamilton, where he entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Marshall Farr, as contractors. Among the buildings they erected were a large number of railway stations for the Great Western Railway. Other contracts which they filled were the Desjardins Canal, in the course of construction of which Mr. Farr lost his life. The contract was, however, completed by his partner, who afterwards went to Waterloo, joining the late Mr. Hespeler in operating a distillery and general store under the name Hespeler & Randall. This business was later known as Geo. Randall & Co., his partners being Joseph Seagram and William Roos, who had formerly been clerks. Just a quarter of a century ago this partnership was dissolved, and a new one formed, with W. William Roos, known as Randall & Roos. As this time Joseph Seagram withdrew and carried on the distilling business which has grown to its present large proportions. The wholesale grocery business was carried on until Mr. Randall's death, though he did not take a particularly active interest. In addition to his connection with these firms he was also identified with the Hespeler Woollen Mills, now the Forbes Co. He was president of the Waterloo Mutual Fire Insurance Co., of which he made a striking success. His wife was a daughter of Michael Roos, Preston, and he is survived by two daughters and one son. The funeral was held on Saturday to the Berlin Cemetery, and was largely attended by friends and business associates.

GUILD CASE HEARING JAN. 7.

The argument in connection with the Grocers' Guild case, which has been expected now for several weeks, is announced to be resumed on Monday, Jan. 7. The hearing will be in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, at 10.30 a.m., before Chief Justice Falconbridge.

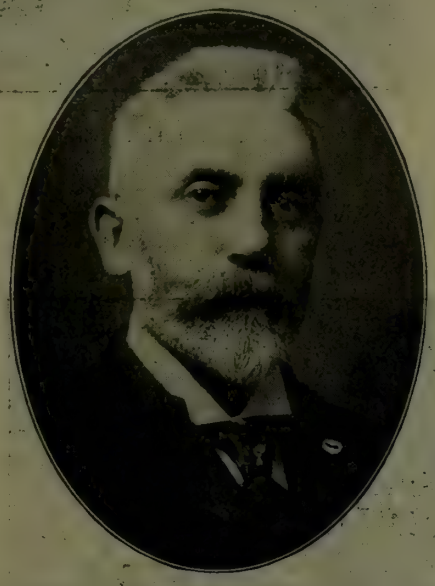
DALLEY EMPLOYES JUBILATE.

About thirty-five of the employes of the F. F. Dalley Company, Hamilton, including representatives of the company from France, England, the United States and Canada assembled at the home of Mr. Dalley, Main St. west, on Wednesday evening, Dec. 23, to enjoy the hospitality of their chief. The chairs were occupied by F. F. Dalley, sr., and F. F. Dalley, jr., and F. Menzie acted as master of ceremonies. The music during the evening was rendered by Anderson's orchestra and an elaborate supper was served in the large double parlor of the Dalley home, beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion.

After supper an enjoyable programme was presented. It was principally of a humorous character and kept everyone in a state of laughter until the company dispersed long after midnight.

The numbers included were:

Piano solo, "The Death of Paderewski" W. E. James; song, "Shadows on Burlington Beach," F. O. Creed; recitation, "Did the Cat Eat Father's Mush," J. W. Mill; song, "How Dry I am," M. B. Tufford; oration, "The Upper Ten That's Down," Bay Hill; song, "Why Does He Like to Come Home?" J. B. Mundie; recitation, "What I Dreamed About Shakespeare," J. M. Williams; musical selection, "The Piano's Full of Snow," J. S. Wallace; speech, "How Much Travelers Knock Down," E. O. Zimmerman; piano solo, "Must I Leave on Tuesday," J. B. Mundie; quartette, "Ain't It Awful, Maud," "2 in 1" Bunch; song "I've Troubles of My Own," F. Menzie; song, "What They Do to Me in Brantford." Geo. Smye; song, "Johnnie Come Home With the Soap," C. L. Farnworth; oration, "That This Could Last Forever," M. B. Tufford; speech, "Jim-Jams," Bay Hill.



DIFFICULTIES IN EVERY CALLING

Every trade or business has its peculiar trials or drawbacks. The difficulties encountered in one calling are perhaps not met with in another which has tribulations unknown to the first. For instance, the jeweler has some setbacks to contend with, the boot and shoe merchant never thought of or, perhaps, never heard of. The whole gamut of business experience may be run. The baker has thorns which never cross the pathway of the grocer and the grocer has to overcome obstacles of which the stationer never surmised the existence. Thus it is that we see the briars in our own pathway, and only the roses in the flowered embowered route of a rival. Every man in every trade, every competitor in the same line as you, has difficulties and perplexities all his own. The motto should, therefore, be to look upon the cheerful side; not upon the gloomy or forbidding. This can be largely done by attending strictly to our own affairs. Too much watching the other fellow is apt to engender a jealous spirit which is not healthy or conducive to contentment or equanimity. The grass in yon pasture may appear greener than in the field near at home but a careful scrutiny may disclose that distance has warped our view and that there are bleak and barren spots in the field beyond not observable at long range. Contentment is a good element to cultivate. It breeds happiness of mind and disposition and helps one to enjoy the pleasures and joys that are at his very doors.

TORONTO BROKER PASSES AWAY.

Charles E. Kyle, of Kyle & Hooper, Died on Sunday.

On Sunday, Dec. 27, there passed away at St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, Charles E. Kyle, for four years connected with Kyle & Hooper, grocery brokers, 73 Front Street East. His death followed an illness of ten days, due to an intestinal trouble, the immediate cause being the shock succeeding an operation.

THE LATE CHARLES E. KYLE
Of Kyle & Hooper, Wholesale Grocery Brokers, Toronto.

The deceased was born at Thornhill, Ont., and was in his sixtieth year. For seventeen years he was in business in Toronto with H. P. Eckardt, under the name of Eckardt, Kyle & Co., wholesale grocers. During that period he traveled for this company and was considered one of the best men in this line of business. As an indication of the standing he held with the traveling fraternity it may be stated that for a term of two years he occupied the position of president of the Commercial Travelers' Association. He was a member of the York Pioneers for seven or eight years, a member of the I.O.O.F. and of the Central Methodist Church, Toronto. In politics he was a Liberal. He is survived by a widow and two daughters. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon from his late residence, 166 Jarvis Street, to Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The pall-bearers were H. P. Eckardt, W. G. A. Lambe, M. C. Ellis, R. R. Rice, Hugh Blain and John Gibson. Among those who attended the funeral was G. W. Prescott, representing Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal.

ADDITIONS TO MELAGAMA STAFF

Several changes will be made at the first of the year in the staff of Minto Brosf, Toronto. Billy Meen, who has been with Fred J. White, head of the firm, in different capacities, for eleven years, latterly selling Melagama in a section of Northeastern Ontario, where he has proved his worth, is being taken into the office as assistant manager and will relieve Mr. White of some of the details of business. John Jamieson, who has covered the same territory for ten years, will take Mr. Meen's position on the road.

Robert Algie, of Alton, the hard-working home secretary of the "Snack" Club for several years, is also being taken on the Melagama staff, doing inside work.

THE NEWEST SKIN GAME.

"I have always acted on my own judgment after sizing a man up," said a Toronto traveler who has a reputation as a good sport. "For 20 years I have believed that I could tell a rascal or an honest man on sight, but something happened the other day to make me doubt myself. I was loafing around the depot, waiting for my train to go, when a man approached me and started a conversation. We were talking away when a second man came sneaking up and told a hard luck story, and asked to be helped out of a hole. After one look at him I was satisfied that he was a skin, and turned my back on him. Not so with the other man, however. He seemed interested and impressed, and finally gave the fellow a $5 bill to go and get changed, promising him a quarter when he returned.

"'That's the last of your money,' I said as the hard luck man disappeared.

"'No; I think he will come back,' was the reply. 'He looked to me like an honest man.'

"'And to me like a deadbeat. Consider yourself $5 out of pocket.'

"'I can hardly do that. Something tells me that I am not mistaken in that man.'

"'Perhaps you'd like to bet another five that he will show up again?'

"To my surprise he said he did, and we found a stakeholder and put up the coin."

"And what happened?" was asked as the drummer paused.

"Why, the hard luck man came back with the change."

"He did!"

"As straight as a string, and was given the promised quarter; I lost my five, of course."

"And—and—"

"And a little later on the depot policeman told me that they were pals working together, and that they skinned half a dozen suckers at the game every day in the year."

"But you—you are a drummer."

"Just so; but it's my business to sell valves and not look for gum games. When you want a soft mark look for a drummer."

A STRIKING STORE ARRANGEMENT

A particularly striking feature of store arrangement is that adopted by the grocers of St. Thomas, as will be seen by the accompanying illustration of the interior of Angus McKenzie's store on Talbot Street, in the prominence given canned goods. Instead of having the side of the store opposite the counter given over to a conglomerated showing of all kinds of goods, a shelf narrow or wide, whatever the taste of the grocer may be, and whatever the width of the store will allow, is devoted to a display of varied lines of canned meats, vegetables, fish and fruits, Canned Goods' Pyramids.

In Mr. McKenzie's display he has made an alternate showing of concave and convex pyramids, each pyramid being devoted to some one line of canned goods. The arrangement is simple, neat, attractive and effective—what else is desired? At a glance the customer desiring canned goods sees what is wanted, and in some cases where other necessities are asked for, there is a suggestion conveyed which may mean a sale not thought of before the customer entered the store.

The arrangement has much to commend it, as a swift glance at the picture will readily show, but to prove this more conclusively it is only necessary to note that the great majority of the St. Thomas grocers have adopted this plan of showing their canned goods.

Interior A. McKenzie's Grocery, St. T homas.

Who was the first person to inaugurate the plan it would be hard to say, but besides in Angus McKenzie's store there is an especially fine display in J. F. Pelan's grocery.

Mr. Pelan also devotes much atention to his window display, and a year ago was successful in winning a prize for his splendid taste in this regard. His experience has been, according to himself, that "a good window display attracts customers and a neat interior arrangement enlarges orders." Mr. Pelan learned the grocery business in Angus McKenzie's store.

A Party of Montreal Business Men in Northern Quebec.

HUNTING IN NORTHERN QUEBEC.

Business men from all over Canada and many parts of the United States find the call of the hunting grounds of northern Quebec more than they can resist as autumn annually comes around, and the group depicted in the reproduction of an amateur photograph on this page will give a very good idea as to the kind of parties that so spend fall holidays. Included in the group are Armand Chaput, of L. Chaput Fils & Cie, No. 1; C. St. Louis, No. 2; T. H. Merrill, Ogilvie Flour Mills, and other prominent Montreal business men, with several guides. They put up at the Club Chapleau, which is located north of Nomining, and in the heart of one of the best hunting districts in Canada. Any of the members of this expedition will give further particulars to interested parties as to the results of their shooting.

DOUGLAS & RADCLIFF ENTERTAIN STAFF.

On Monday night, Dec. 28, the firm of Douglas & Radcliff, Toronto, entertained its members at a pleasant banquet at the home of Fred. L. Radcliff, Rosedale. Among the evening's pleasures was the presence of a Christmas tree. The enjoyable function was also the occasion for the presentation to both heads of the firm of handsome pictures.

The chairman was A. S. Grocott, who introduced a programme which was given entirely by employes of the firm. Among the guests in attendance was J. M. Patterson, the Hamilton manager, and congratulatory telegrams were received from the Winnipeg and other representatives.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—

Sugar—Declined.
Provisions—Unchanged with a weak undertone.
Fish—Steady.
Eggs—Advanced.
Cheese—Weaker undertone.

Montreal, Dec. 31.

Trade during the week has been as good as usual for this season of the year, in fact, in some quarters is reported as even better than for the corresponding time of last year. There is more money in circulation this year than last, and this, of course, has led to a steadier trade. A year ago public confidence was very much shaken, but now this condition has disappeared before a process of restoration.

Large wholesale men state that they can make a better estimate of the condition of affairs after the 1st of January, as a large amount of country paper will be maturing then.

The enormous harvest in the West has had its effect here as collections in that quarter have improved vastly, and this Western money is finding its way all over the Dominion. The feature of the week is the drop of sugar prices of ten cents all around. The new prices went into effect Monday morning, Dec. 28. This local condition is a reflection of a like condition, which prevailed in the New York markets last week.

Fish lines are still active owing to the holiday trade. Beans have been rather unsteady during the week, but seemed to have settled down fairly well during the latter part of the week. Butter and cheese are displaying no alarming features, being practically unchanged, with the exception of perhaps a little easier tone indicated in the market. Eggs have been advanced by local dealers owing to small receipts. Nothing of any consequence has happened during the week in any other lines.

SUGAR—Monday morning, Dec. 28, the local refiners made a cut of 10c all round. The New York markets declined last week, and the local people followed their lead shortly afterwards. Locally trade is fairy good.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Fruits and vegetables continue in good demand this week. Fish is not quite as active as it has been, owing to the close of the Advent season. Canned meats are beginning to move better.

TORONTO.—Business in these lines is rather dull this week, as a result of the travelers being off the road. Some mail orders have been received, however, for vegetables, showing that sales are fairly good. The new year promises to open up with considerable activity in both fruit and vegetables.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Declined 10 cents.
Spices—Firm.
Dried Fruits—Scarce.
Evaporated Apples—Firmer.

Toronto, Dec. 31, 1908.

The wholesale markets are decidedly quiet this week with the travelers off the road and most of the houses are devoting themselves to stocktaking. Some firms report a very encouraging mail order business, but others have done little in any way. The city travelers have been out during the week picking up what they could get, but their orders have not been very large. Business, however, is expected to pick up early in the new year. Retailers' stocks of staples cannot be very heavy, and this should mean good buying in the next few weeks.

There have been a few changes in quotations, despite the ruling quietness. Sugar dropped 10 cents on Monday, and now stands 10 cents above the price on the same date last year.

SUGAR—A decline of 10 cents on Monday came presumably as the result of large sales at low prices in the United States, and the fact that grinding is being carried on quite extensively in Cuba. The local market was fairly steady, but followed other influences. At present prices are 10 cents above the price at the same date last year, but the parity between raw and refined is such that there can scarcely be any further decline. With the beginning of a better demand, which is expected in the early months of the year, it seems probable that the market will firm up somewhat.

TEA—Business in local markets has been fairly active during the past week, with a better demand for common grades. Highly flavored teas still remain scarce and are likely to continue so. The general situation is summarized in a recent report from Thompson Bros., London, as follows: "The auctions for the year close with a strong and improving market for tea for price which is now higher than it has been since August. Teas of all descriptions are in good demand, and with values by no means excessive, seem to justify a good trade early in the year. The most noticeable feature of the present season has perhaps been the free market with sustained buying throughout November and December, which so often proves a rather unsatisfactory time for sellers. This continued steady business passing in the country coupled with a low bank rate, has no doubt induced buyers to go into larger stocks than is usually the case. It is interesting to note that the total Indian sales to date are 61,000 packages in excess of last year."

COFFEE—Local business continues exceedingly good with no variation in prices. The situation in regard to the growing crop markets in Brazil is not so assuring as it might be, as is evidenced in the following summary by Willett & Gray: "Reports recently received from Brazil begin to admit that the growing crop in Santos has not only suffered damage but that the prospects are more unfavorable from the now certain fact that a large proportion of the blossoms did not set at all, and furthermore a great amount of immature berries have fallen off. Climatic conditions, however good they may chance to be, cannot retrieve damage and loss like these. The importance of all this will be manifest because a really large crop is altogether out of the question—and it brings closer to mind the point that the coffee world has to reckon with a yield below the quantity of the present crop, or, in other words, less than 9,000,000 bags.

"Evidence is not wanting that the coffee trade begins to appreciate the importance of the 'Agreement' between the San Paulo Government and the bankers regarding sales of valorization holdings. None at all will be sold here in Europe during the next twelve months and the first 500,000 bags will only be offered to the trade in the six months from January to June in the year 1910, say about 375,000 bags in Europe and about 125,000 bags in this country. After that, another year is to expire before more is sold, when 600,000 bags will be offered in about the same proportion from January to June, 1911. It is because this agreement is so positive and binding that it should be correctly read and understood, since it removes beyond all peradventure the pessimistic fear that seized the public mind that the Government stocks were doomed to slaughter promiscuously. The great success of the loan itself goes to confirm the high credit reposed in the Government contracts and agreements."

DRIED FRUITS—While a scarcity is still evident in some lines, the demand is not at all active since Christmas and the fact is not so noticeable. Locally, prices continue steady.

CORRESPONDENCE

HAMILTON.

December 29.—The Christmas trade among the grocers here was very good. None of them have been heard to complain. The day prior to the holiday their stores were well crowded with good buyers, and in most of them there was made a new cash record for one day's business. The buying of fancy groceries and holiday novelties was larger than ever, making it appear that we must have turned the corner and put our backs to the late depression. This week the grocers have plenty of time to clean up and make good resolutions. The majority of them are getting a little nearer to a cash business, and while it may not be entirely feasible to sell groceries always for spot cash, there is no doubt that with a little effort the large credit accounts might be curtailed. These top-heavy accounts tend to produce sleepless nights. It is reported here that the Grocers' Association is going into this matter thoroughly.

The travelers are absent for a couple of weeks, and the grocers are now getting an opportunity to have a little to say themselves. The travelers, however, are not bad fellows, as they always bring a bag of gossip or a good story.

The municipal elections take place on Monday next. The Grocers' Association are out with two candidates, the president and vice-president. John Forth, the president, was nominated in Ward 3 as an independent candidate, endorsed by the Temperance League. Geo. Cann, the vice-president, was nominated in Ward 1, and endorsed by the Conservative Association. The grocers expect both will win. They live in their wards and have a large following in business and social circles. If both are elected the next meeting of the association will be worth attending.

ST. THOMAS.

December 29.—Both markets on Saturday before Christmas were unprecedentedly large. Turkeys were on sale in abundance, selling fast at 15c per lb. Chickens sold at 12½c lb. On nearly every street leading from the markets could be seen men, women and children returning from the busy squares each laden with a basket of produce and a large fine fowl chosen from the variety on sale. Geese were plentiful and sold from 90c to $1.20 each, while ducks went at from 60c to 75c each. Butter sold at 28c per lb., although a large quantity was offered. However, it dropped to 25c before the close of the market. Eggs were offered at 28c dozen.

Many citizens went to the ever-accommodating grocer, selected their turkeys, had them charged, and delivered to their homes at the same price, viz., 15c lb., as the cash buyers paid on the market, and who had to carry their purchases home besides. Wednesday's market was not as large as Saturday's, and the price of turkeys, which opened at 15c lb., before the close of the market sold readily at 17c lb.

P. L. M. Egan, of Egan Bros., who has been confined to the Amasa Wood Hospital for the past three weeks, suffering from typhoid fever, is home again. G. R. Rinn, grocer, St. Catherine Street, who spent six weeks in the hospital from the fever, is able to resume his duties again.

St. Thomas grocers agree that this year's Christmas trade was much better than last year.

A "SNACK" CLUB DINNER.

The executive of the Travelers' Snack Club with a few friends, to the number of about twenty-five, held a goodfellowship dinner at the Queen's, Toronto, on Wednesday of this week and afterward a meeting was held to talk over certain matters concerning the "Snack," its probable place of location next summer and its future. At the time of going to press the details of the meeting cannot be learned, but a full report will be given next week.

W. S. Greening, of Todhunter, Mitchell & Co., Toronto, is in New York State this week on a business trip.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST.

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—The Canadian West is taking a breathing spell after the largest, most profitable and satisfactory Christmas trade in its history. It is not that a very high-class trade has been done in some lines, thereby rolling up the actual value in dollars beyond other years, but the trade has been general in every line and the aggregate is very largely made up of what is spoken of in business circles as an "A1" middle-class trade.

For the entire month of December the shops in Winnipeg were crowded in the morning, a sure sign of prosperous times, and commercial travelers returning from late sorting trips, report trade in village, town and country stores good, and farmers buying early and in larger quantities than last year.

Nor is the evidence of prosperity confined to the mere buying of Christmas gifts and Christmas cheer. Payments on loans and mortgages have been met steadily all month, in fact, so much so that some of the mortgage companies almost wish that some of their borrowers were not quite so prompt, as good farm mortgages at the present time look better to them than large sums of money for re-investment. Real estate men report an increasing demand for good inside property in Winnipeg and a steadily growing demand for farm lands, especially improved farms in well settled districts. Another indication of growing activity in real estate is the number of applications for letters patent for companies to handle real estate, more especially suburban sub-divisions. There were no less than three of these new companies gazetted during the past week and all of them with good sized capital. This is no plea for the advantage or desirability of handling real estate by this method but is merely given as an indication of the trend of business at the present time.

The energy with which railway contracts are being pushed and the extensive preparations for next spring are all good and hopeful signs of the times.

In grain circles there is nothing to talk about, the markets are enjoying the usual Christmas lull, at the same time holding very firm, with receipts keeping up well for the time of the year. The superb weather which lasted right up to, and included Christmas Day, which was mild enough for very light spring overcoats, extended the cattle-shipping season and export cattle have been shipped right up to Christmas, which is unusual for the Canadian West.

MANITOBA MARKETS

The turn of the year finds the trade of the West, wholesale and retail, looking forward with confidence to a prosperous new year. Wholesale houses report many inquiries from dealers about to start in business in the newer towns and everything points to a good opening in the new year.

MANUFACTURERS AND FIXED PRICES.

Vancouver Retail Grocers Secure Legal Opinion on Interesting Points.

The Vancouver Retail Grocers' Association has obtained the opinion of Davis, Marshall & MacNeill, lawyers, of the city, on points which will be of considerable interest to the trade in general. The matter came up in the notice appended to goods shipped by manufacturers, and which is as follows: "The goods contained in this case are sold on the condition which is made a part of the consideration of sale, that the purchaser, if he retails them, will maintain our fixed retail price on these goods, and if he wholesales them, he will sell them subject to the same condition. The acceptance of these goods is sufficient evidence that the purchaser is familiar with these conditions and will abide by our requirements. Our fixed retail price on ———— for the Pacific Coast is ————." The questions submitted for legal definition, and answers, are:

1. Has the manufacturer of an article, of which he holds the proprietary right through having the name registered, a right to fix the retail price of such an article? Ans.—We would say that the manufacturer of such an article has the right to fix the retail prices at which the same shall be sold.

2. Is the foregoing notice attached to the case containing such article sufficient notice in law to all concerned? Ans.—We do not think it is sufficient to enable the manufacturer to bring action against the retailer in cases where the sales pass through a wholesaler for cutting the price, as there is no privity of contract between the manufacturer and the retailer. There should be an agreement between the manufacturer and the retailer that they will not retail under the retail price, and with the wholesaler that the wholesaler will not sell to the retailer except under the condition of obtaining a similar contract from the retailer.

3. What action has the manufacturer against anyone who cuts the price? Ans.—We would say that if the manufacturer sells direct to the retailer who cuts the price, his action would be for damages. If the manufacturer sells to the wholesaler, and the wholesaler sells to a retailer without obtaining a similar agreement, and the retailer cuts the price, the action would be against the wholesaler for damages for not obtaining a similar agreement. We cannot see how a document can be so drawn up, to be put on the case, as to be binding between a manufacturer and retailer where the package passes through the hands of a wholesaler, except as above lined.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Dec. 30.

Latest reports from England state that Canadian cheese will figure largely in the requirements of the English public. This looks as though our product was an established fact on the other side of the water. During the week more enquiries have been received from Engand than for some time, and this is encouraging when we take into consideration the fact that cheese of the choicest variety is held here in comparatively few hands. Realizing this fact, it goes to show, that the English importers expect to pay good prices in future for their stock, which they obtain in Canada. At the present time, however, the market is in a waiting attitude until after the holidays. Locally, the market is steady, and prices rule at 12¼c to 12½c for westerns and 11¾c to 12c for easterns. Receipts for the season since May 1 up to Dec. 26, have been 1,898,722 boxes against 2,052,851 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

The butter market is not active at the present moment, although there is more enquiry this week from outside points for fresh fodder stock at comparatively low figures. September and October creamery is still high, and not much is available even at high prices. There is considerable activity in dairy stock which is in good demand. Advices from England state that the market there is in a more healthy condition this week, and the future looks better. The English importers are anxiously awaiting the arrival of fresh grass stock from New Zealand and Australia, which will undoubtedly meet with a good demand upon its arrival. If the weather does not change soon, the Townships will be in a bad condition so far as the prospects are concerned for next year. The farmers are having to draw water for their stock, as many springs which have hitherto never failed have now given out. The soil is in a deplorable condition, and farmers agree that the hay crop next year will be practically valueless, if a thaw does not soon relieve the situation. The soil in many places is so dry that despite the cold weather, it can be moved without a pick. This is due to a total absence of moisture, and consequently the cold has little if any effect upon it. Such a condition as this is always followed by a light hay crop, as the life of the roots in the ground is completely destroyed.

Locally the market is steady, and prices are quoted at 26c to 26½c for fresh creamery, and September and October at 27c to 27½c. Receipts for the season since May 1 up to Dec. 26, have been 408 121 packages, against 404,930 packages for the same period of last year.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

The dull condition of the local market has considerably improved, and business is active, with good demand. The run of hogs is light, as is usually the case at this time of the year, and the price is $5.75 live weight f.o.b. in the country. The British market is dull and unsatisfactory, with light shipments from here, merely to supply their regular customers. With a better local demand for their product, which is always more satisfactory than the foreign, packers expect a good healthy trade.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Demand for practically all lines is limited, and is confined to a small jobbing character. The poultry trade is visibly affecting this market, as dealers have turned their attention to these lines for the holiday season.

BUTTER—The butter market has not changed much during the week, and the prices reported last week represent about the current levels. Some sales have been made for odd lots at smaller quotations, but have not exerted any influence on the market to speak of, with the exception of an indication perhaps, of a slightly weaker undertone this week.

PROVISIONS—On account of the high price of poultry and perhaps through a desire for a change there is a better demand for cured meats, although no perceptible change in prices. Some dealers report business very active, which is more than is ordinarily expected right after the holidays.

EGGS—The egg market is decidedly firm and the held stock is rapidly being reduced, selling at about 2c higher. With the mild weather there are more new laid eggs coming in, yet these will not effect the price of held stock for some time at least.

POULTRY — The wholesale houses have very little stock in hand. On account of the light arrivals for Christmas, the retailers picked up everything in sight at almost wild prices, in order to be able to supply the supposed demand. They met with some disappointment, however, when very many rather than pay exorbitant prices, decided to take a roast of beef instead of a turkey. While the wholesale men made well, a good many of the retailers have lost money. The arrivals for new year will necessarily be light, but retailers will not pay as much for them this week and will likely not be able to hold their own on their left over stock. Turkeys at time of writing are selling for 18c to 21c.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Holiday Season Accounts for Quietness in All Lines—Retailers' Stocks Low—Good Outlook for New Year.

The holiday season continues to have a dulling effect on all lines in these markets and as a result business is prevailingly quiet, a feature which is quite usual and to be expected at this season. The holding off of really cold weather, which was expected to have a stimulating effect on demand, has also had its effect.

Notwithstanding the present quietness, however, the outlook for the new year looks bright. Judging from dealers' reports, both wholesalers' and retailers' stocks of flour must be comparatively light and it is expected that this market, which has been active up till a few weeks ago, will brighten up again shortly. One large miller said this week that he expected heavy buying would be general within a few weeks and that this might very possibly have some effect on prices.

In the cereal markets conditions are somewhat similar. While business all fall has been somewhat quieter than usual, dealers' stocks are thought to be low and this should mean more activity early in the year.

Little attention is being paid to export business, the holiday season interfering both in the British and home markets.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Considering the season of the year the volume of trade passing is fairly good. Country trade is fair where stocks are reported low. There has been during the week some inquiry from England for low-grade Canadian flour, prices, however were not mutually advantageous, so no business to speak of has resulted.

TORONTO.

As is usual at the holiday season, business is rather dull. The markets, however, continue firm though no changes are in evidence. So far as can be learned, both wholesalers' and retailers' stocks are rather low and it seems probable that the early weeks of the new year will see a material strengthening of markets and possibly an increase in prices. Little attention is being paid to export business just now.

CEREALS—The market continues unchanged, with somewhat of an easier feeling. Business is rather dull, the lack of really cold weather having been felt in these circles. The outlook for the new year, however, is very encouraging. Dealers' stocks are thought to be low and some fairly heavy buying should follow shortly. Nothing more has been heard of exports of oats to the United States so this will not be any factor in future conditions as was anticipated a few weeks ago. Prices ruling this week are:

CHRISTMAS PRESENTATIONS TO CEREAL MANUFACTURER.

R. K. McIntosh, the head of P. McIntosh & Son, cereal manufacturers, Toronto, was remembered very pleasantly by the employes of the firm last Thursday afternoon, Dec. 24, when he was presented with three pieces of hall furniture.

The presentation was made by J. F. Howitt, one of the oldest employes, who in a w tty speech spoke of the high esteem in which Mr. McIntosh was held by the employes, who regarded him as a friend, as well as an employer.

Mr. McIntosh made a happy reply, expressing his appreciation of the remembrance and of the regard evidenced by the staff and spoke of the good outlook for the growth of the business and a continuance of the present happy relations.

L. R. Wolfe, grocer, Toronto, has disposed of his business to Louis Turofsky.

J. H. Deeks, general merchant, Williamsburg, has assigned to Osler Wade.

The Cream of Wheat Company

To the Retail Grocers of the United States and Canada.

Mr. C. M. Wessels, of the Grocery World and General Merchant, of Philadelphia, has published what purports to be an interview between him and Mr. E. Mapes, the secretary of the Cream of Wheat Company, which interview he has embodied in an affidavit in which he states that Mr. P. A. Robinson, of this city, was present during that interview. As Mr. Wessels and others have in different ways given wide publicity to his version of that interview, we have decided to publish a refutation of what we consider a scandalous, malicious and entirely unwarranted attack upon this company. We herewith attach the affidavit of Mr. Mapes with reference to that interview, which includes the statement as to the same by Mr. P. A. Robinson, who was the only person present besides Mr. Mapes and Mr. Wessels. We call attention to the fact that Mr. Robinson's statement is in reply to a request for a statement made by the secretary of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association, and that it is made up for the most part of a transcript of statements made by Mr. Robinson to Mr. Wessels himself prior to the time of publication of Mr. Wessels' affidavit. The latter was published on November 30, 1908. We believe that the grocers of the United States and Canada, with whom we have been upon the most friendly terms, and whose interests and welfare are identical with our own, will agree with us that Mr. Wessels' attack is entirely unwarranted.

Dated, December 15, 1908.

CREAM OF WHEAT COMPANY.

Affidavit of E. Mapes.

State of Minnesota, } ss.
County of Hennepin, }

I, E. Mapes, being first duly sworn, on my oath say.

I am the secretary of the Cream of Wheat Company, of Minneapolis, Minnesota. On or about the 20th day of October, 1908, C. M. Wessels, of Philadelphia, and P. A. Robinson, of Minneapolis, came to my office, where Mr. Wessels was introduced to me by Mr. Robinson. Mr. Wessels' call was, as he stated, for the purpose of selling the Cream of Wheat Company advertising space in the grocery publications of the United States, practically all of which he claimed to control so far as their advertising space was concerned. We talked from half to three-quarters of an hour and discussed the advertising proposition quite extensively. He was arguing as to the advantage to the Cream of Wheat Company of advertising in the grocery trade papers. In answer to his arguments I explained the policy of advertising pursued by the Cream of Wheat Company, which was in general to reach the trade through the consumer, and not vice versa, and I declined to make a contract with him. There was nothing, however, said by me in that discussion which would in any way warrant the statements attributed to me by Mr. Wessels.

Taking his statements seriatim (each of which Mr. Wessels says is a correct transcript), I call attention to them as follows:

1. Mr. Wessels states that I said: "We don't care a continental for the grocer. He has to sell our goods whether he wants to or not. We make him. We used to give the retailer a profit, but we found that the best way to keep him good was to keep him poor. Now we give him very little profit."

This statement, and every part of it, is false. I never expressed any contempt or disregard for the retail grocer; neither did I say that we made him sell our goods. The substance of what I said upon this point was that we created a demand by reaching the grocer through the consumer, and that we could best increase sales, both to our profit and to the retailer's profit, by such policy of advertising. Neither did I say that we gave the retailer less profit than before, nor that the best way to keep him good was to keep him poor. On this point I explained to him that the margin of profit allowed had been fixed as a fair margin, but at the same time that it was not so large as to induce a cutting of prices, and that it was a common experience that the allowance of a larger profit would bring about a cutting of prices either by the jobber or the retailer, and to the detriment of both the manufacturer and the retailer. As a matter of fact, we have not changed our prices for the past ten years.

2. Next Mr. Wessels says that I said: "But we have competitors; Vitos (made by the Pillsbury-Washburn Company) is exactly the same as Cream of Wheat. If the retailer has so much influence, why don't he substitute Vitos for our goods?"

This statement is absolutely false. The question of competitors had been mentioned, and Mr. Wessels had stated that there was no product like ours on the market, whereas there were plenty of flake foods. I told him that there were other products on the market which, like our product, were not flake foods, and I mentioned Vitos as an example. That is the entire substance of my statement upon this point.

3. Mr. Wessels next says that I, referring to the friendly feeling of the retail grocers, said:

"We don't want it—don't need it—don't care anything about it. The grocer has not any say about handling our goods. We make him handle them—he must. The grocer has got to handle Cream of Wheat, no matter what he says."

This statement is also entirely false. In no part of the discussion did I for a moment feel or express any ill feeling toward the retailer nor lack of regard for his good feeling. More than that, the question of my feeling toward the retailer was never raised in that discussion. The only question on this point that was raised was with regard to the good or ill feeling of the grocery papers, if we did or did not advertise in them, and in that connection I explained to him the impossibility and inadvisability of advertising in every trade paper, or any of them, that is from our standpoint, and that we had the good-will of all the jobbing houses, although we did not advertise in any of their publications. This was all in connection with my main argument that in the end it was the best for us and the best for the retailer to reach the retailer through the consumer rather than the reverse.

The above covers every one of the statements made by Mr. Wessels. He was naturally disappointed at my conclusion, and showed his disappointment both in statement and in his manner, his last remark being, as he left the room: "Well, Mr. Mapes, of course, we" (meaning the grocery papers), "are going to stand by our friends, and, as you can naturally imagine, the reverse of this proposition will be true regarding those who are not." The fact that Mr. Wessels immediately started upon a campaign of attack against the Cream of Wheat Company and that at the same time requests were made upon wholesale and retail grocers to boycott Cream of Wheat, shows clearly, I think, without further explanation, the animus of his attack.

The Cream of Wheat Company has always endeavored to treat the retail grocers, with whom we do not come into direct contact, fairly, and to protect their interests as far as possible. With this end in view, we have always refused to sell direct to department stores, mail order houses, or any house which we considered an unfair competitor of the retail merchant. In addition to this, we are one of the few cereal companies that absolutely guarantee their goods and take back all goods damaged by becoming weevilly, etc.

I attach hereto, as part of this affidavit, the letter of Mr. P. A. Robinson, which was recently written to the secretary of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association in reply to a request for a statement as to Mr. Robinson's recollection of the discussion referred to.

E. MAPES.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 12th day of December, 1908.

[Seal] SIDNEY R. MATHER,

Notary Public, Hennepin County, Minn.

My commission expires June 8, 1912.

Mr. T. O. DAHL, Secretary,
Minneapolis Retail Grocers' Association,
Minneapolis, Minn.

Dear Sir: As my name has been used in Mr. Wessels' affidavit in a way that may be construed as implying agreement on my part with the statements contained therein, I cannot do otherwise than respond to your request, based on this mention of my name, for a statement.

My answer to your direct question as to whether I agree with Mr. Wessels' statement as published, is that I do not. I am on record to that effect in a telegram sent to Mr. Wessels Nov. 25th (on receipt of a letter from him in which he stated he was going to use my name in his affidavit), and as my letter confirming the wire covers the second clause of your question—if I do not agree, wherein do I differ?—I think the simplest statement I can make to you, and the fairest to all concerned, is to repeat to you these communications, which are as follows:

Telegram of Nov. 25th.

"Do not use my name in connection with Mapes interview. My recollection and understanding of same do not agree with yours as published."

Letter of Nov. 27th.

"On receipt of your letter of the 23rd saying you were going to use my name in an affidavit covering your statement of the interview with Mr. Mapes, I telegraphed you not to do so. Your published version of what he said goes beyond what I heard him say and puts words in his mouth which I did not hear him use.

"Even aside from this, I should object very much to being dragged into this controversy, which has been precipitated against my protest and for which I have no responsibility, and having expressed myself at the start against your idea of exploiting the situation, I have, of course, no apology to offer for not taking your view of the matter now, nor taking a hand in it. My attitude is not based on any fear or favor as to the Cream of Wheat Co., but on my own views and the value I place on the confidence I have gained from the advertisers of my acquaintance generally, by never abusing it.

"While I have not received copies of your paper or proofs of your articles, I have seen them, and it seems to me they go considerably too far in attributing to Mr. Mapes expressions of wholesale contempt for the grocers.

"I have not seen Mr. Mapes, but he telephoned me and called my attention to what he had 'drawn' as the result of my introduction, as he put it. When I mentioned the remark he made about keeping them honest by keeping them poor, he claimed that he did not apply it to the retailer, but to the jobber, for he had no dealings with the retailer; he said that he spoke facetiously, not seriously, and had often said the same thing to a jobber customer without giving offense. This was the particular remark that you and I discussed afterward, and understood it as having been applied to the retailer; but I did not take it as seriously as you did, and it is true that his tone was more bantering than serious.

"The rest of what he said, so far as I took it in, struck me as simply an argument for the opposite side to your proposition, and not as expressing contempt for the grocers, though perhaps rather strongly independent. Naturally in combatting your plan (as applying to his business) and upholding his own system, his attitude would not be to your liking; if everyone agreed with you, you would have no soliciting to do; and your plan being based on getting the co-operation of the grocers, the other side of the debate, conducted by a pretty outspoken man, would in the nature of things give opportunity for offense, if not carefully handled. That is one reason why I differ with you as to the ethics of going into print with an advertising interview; the advertiser is bound to make his opposing argument as strong as he can, and has not time to weigh every word or expression he uses. He has the right to feel, however, that the solicitor appreciates this and will not take advantage of it. You and I know, for instance, that the expression, 'keep them honest' meant simply 'prevent their cutting prices'; but in print it conveys far more offense than if otherwise expressed.

"I intended to write you on Wednesday following my wire, but was unable to do so, and then Thanksgiving Day intervened, and absence from town, so pardon delay."

In response to the telegram, I received a letter stating that in accordance therewith my name had been cut out; so I am at a loss to understand why it appeared in the affidavit.

In a letter dated November 30th, Mr. Wessels mentioned that he had used my name as it appears, but gave no explanation. I wrote him December the 5th a letter which ought to bring some explanation, but have not received a reply. Having been obliged to refer to this phase of the matter to make my position clear, I will also advise you if I receive a reply, and the explanation of this complication.

Yours very truly,

P. A. ROBINSON.

Since the above is written I am in receipt of a letter from Mr. Wessels, in which he states that he ordered my name cut out of the affidavit, and telegraphed all publishers to whom he had mentioned it in this connection, cancelling such references; that he then went out of town and on his return found his instructions had not been complied with, as far as the affidavit was concerned.

NEW WESTERN WHOLESALE HOUSE

The John King Company, of Fort William, Now Occupying New Warehouse With Good Facilities—A Firm That Has Grown Up With the Town.

The John King Co., which has just opened a wholesale grocery business in Fort William, has, in one form or another, been intimately connected with that city since the first settlement followed the construction of the railway connecting the Great Lakes with the Western Prairie Provinces.

JOHN KING,
President and General Manager of the Company.

F. W. FRASER,
Secretary-Treasurer the John King Company.

John King himself came to Fort William in 1877, and was in charge of a portion of the construction work of the railway in its earliest inception, and was here when the wheat crop of 1884 was unloaded from cars on the banks of the Kaministikwia River, and placed on board a vessel by means of barrows, before the age of mammoth elevators at the lake terminal had arrived, the first shipment being only 800 bushels. A year later, in 1885, he opened a general store in the town which was some distance from the mouth of the river, and which forms to-day the west ward of the present city, and in which the works of the Grand Trunk Pacific are located. Three years later, when the C.P.R. moved their works down the river and formed the present city, a branch of the firm was established in the east end under the name of King & Pelletier, Mr. King, in 1890, buying out Mr. Pelletier. In 1900 the present firm of John King Co. was incorporated and conducted a departmental store in one of the largest business blocks of the city, carrying on a constantly increasing business with uniform success, until on July 20th of the present year a fire breaking out in a storehouse to the rear of the block spread into the main building and completely destroyed the building and stock.

This fire, which put a sudden end to the retail business of the company, may have decided the firm to take a step which had been previously contemplated, leaving the retail business in favor of the wholesale trade. On Aug. 25, barely a month after the fire, they had commenced work on the construction of the big three-storey warehouse which is now occupied, and by November they were occupying the new premises. Meanwhile, they have almost completed the rebuilding of the block on Victoria Avenue destroyed by fire which will be rented for retail purposes to other firms.

New Warehouse of the John King Com pany, at Fort William.

The new wholesale block, which has a capacity of over 80 carloads, is situated on Hardisty St., which is now practically established as the warehouse street of the city, being alongside the C.P.R. with facilities for running spur tracks from the local spur into the private warehouses and elevators that have been established along several blocks of this street.

GREEN FRUITS—The Christmas rush is over, trade is at a standstill, and dealers are looking at each other, waiting for some one to move. All report no change in the prices, yet admit that there is a decided weakness, especially in oranges. The stock on hand is heavy with several cars of excellent California navels on the track. The quality is exceptionally good, and prices are about 25c a box cheaper. A small consignment of Florida strawberries were sold at 75c a quart box.

ALLEGED INFRINGEMENT.

In the Practice Court in Montreal on Dec. 24, application was made by the Walter M. Lowney Co., for a writ restraining Demetrious G. Pergauton, Montreal, doing business as P. G. Demetri & Bros., from using a trade-mark similar to theirs. In 1906 the Lowney Company registered a medallion style trade-mark, which, they allege, has been infringed. The case has been taken en delibere.

WM. CLARK'S XMAS CARD.

Perhaps one of the finest Xmas cards which has made its appearance during the holiday season is that of William Clark, Montreal, manufacturer of canned meats. The cover of the card referred to consists of the coats of arms of the various Provinces arranged in a circle, in the centre of which is a fine Gothic C. The whole is done in gold, embossed in colors on a white background. For taste, quiet elegance and artistic design this Xmas greeting card is difficult to beat.

$3,000,000 FOR VICTORIA COUNTY FARMERS

Local Merchants Say Appointment of Agricultural Inspector will Benefit Country Immensely—Will Improve Merchants' Business Also.

That the spending money of the farmers of Victoria County will be increased by $3,000,000 yearly, through the appointment of an agricultural instructor for that county, is the belief of J. D. Flavelle, one of Lindsay's foremost merchants. This amount looks like a pretty big sum, but so far there are none to gainsay it. Rather the feeling is the other way, for while no other Lindsay merchant would commit himself to stating any certain amount, when seen by The Grocer representative, they all felt that by the Provincial Government helping the farmer along educational lines a great deal of benefit, financially, will accrue to the local merchants

It has taken some time to impress on the Government the necessity of helping the farmer to increase the output of his farm. Very good work has been done by the Agricultural College at Guelph, but it has been recognized that only a small proportion of the farming community is able to avail itself of the advantages offered at Guelph. A step forward was made some years ago when the farmers' excursions to the college were fostered, and a still further step was taken a year ago last spring when the Government allowed the Department of Agriculture to appoint instructors for the counties of Victoria, Essex, Simcoe, Perth, Waterloo and Dundas. This year Prince Edward and Ontario have been added, which speaks well for the success of the scheme. The inauguration of this instruction plan, no doubt, is due to the representations made to the Government by those in a position to know. For instance, Prof. Creelman is credited with saying that the extra profits derived by the farmers of the Province from the growing of Manchurian barley, which yields about five bushels per acre more than any other kind, would more than pay for the building and equipping of the college at Guelph.

The Instructors' Work.

The work of the instructors may be summed up under three headings. Instruction in the Collegiate Institutes and special classes for farmers, experimental work, and actual work among the farmers. This latter, of course, will vary in the different sections of the Province, as Ontario is essentially a country for mixed farming.

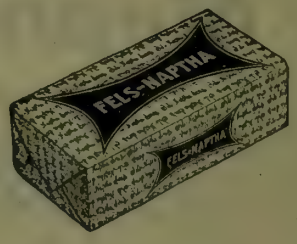
It cannot be said that all is smooth sailing as yet. The general run of scholars attending the collegiate institutes living in towns, know very little about farming and want to know very little more, and the farmers' sons attending the institutes who would directly benefit by the special courses want to get away from the farm. Then the teachers, while not frowning down on the innovation, treat the instructor and his course only with toleration

Victoria County was fortunate in securing the services of F. H. Reed, a man who mixed well with all classes of the community; so much so that the farmer and merchant, who were his friends, are brought closer together. The Saskatchewan Department of Agriculture, however, has now secured Mr. Reed's services for its seed branch, and D. A. McKenzie is looking after the work at Lindsay.

Making the $3,000,000.

To get back to the $3,000,000 and how it is to be raised, however. Victoria is a county of first-class farms, but there is also in it lots of low-lying, swampy land. Some of this land is naturally low, and swampy, but not a little of its swampiness is due to the building of the Trent Valley Canal. Streams have been dammed to help the construction of this work, and the water has backed up and covered some lands that should be raising crops. Apart from this, however, the county contains quite a lot of muck land, covered with a vegetable mold from three to eleven feet in depth, rendering necessary the use of commercial fertilizers, for this land otherwise could raise but one crop in four years. Here is where the work of the instructor comes in, and the above information is based on his report.

An experimental plot of about an acre in extent is situated on the outskirts of Lindsay, and in it many of the demonstrations take place. One thing necessary to be done is the under-draining of some of the land, and Mr. McKenzie is paying special attention to this work, as well as the tile-draining of many farms. The raising of stock is another work which will benefit by the appointment of the instructor, for Victoria is somewhat behind Ontario, its neighboring county, in this respect.



The Year's Work Outlined.

The work for the early part of 1909 includes a free course for farmers in stock and seed judging, to be held in Lindsay from Jan. 26 to 30, by Professors C. A. Zavitz and G. E. Day, and a number of evening lectures to be delivered by Dr. Fletcher, of the Dominion Experimental Farm, Ottawa, and Dr. Falconer, of Toronto University. A three months' course in agriculture will be given in the Lindsay Collegiate Institute, beginning immediately after the opening of the school in January. This course will include practically every branch of agriculture, and will be conducted by Mr. McKenzie. This is the means by which instruction is given, and is the preparatory step by which the farmer of Victoria is going to better his condition and his farm, and eventually make it a better paying proposition.

A Banner Township.

Though some may question the amount stated as accruing to the farmer ($3,000,000) there is no doubt at all in the minds of any persons interested that the sum will be very large, for right at Lindsay's doors is the Township of Maraposa, the banner township of the Province, where grain-growing is carried on to perfection, and where the farms and farm buildings are models to be copied by farmers located in less favored sections. That this is so is proved by the fact that Maraposa is the most highly assessed township in Ontario

It speaks well for the farmers and merchants of Victoria County that they have been able to prevail on the Government to have an instructor appointed, and already a slight impetus has been given to trade through the help of the instructor in bettering the farming industry and making it a more profitable business proposition.

NEW WESTERN WHOLESALE HOUSE.

The active personnel of the firm consists of John King, president and general manager of the business and F. W. Fraser, secretary-treasurer. Mr. King has risen from the comparatively small beginnings of a general merchant in what was practically a village, to be one of the leading business men of a large and rapidly growing city, combining unflagging ambition and restless energy with optimistic perseverance. In the face of difficulties that might have discouraged many others, he has built up a business house that anv city may be proud to possess. In the secretary-treasurer, he has an able lieutenant whose qualities fit him admirably to handle the finances of such an institution. Mr. Fraser is of Scotch descent and came to Fort William from Nova Scotia, and for six years has been in charge of the financial end of the affairs of the John King Co., and is to-day reckoned among the brightest of the young business men of the city.

Since the new wholesale house was opened for business the trade has been most gratifying in spite, too, of the fact that many of the local retail grocers had already laid in a considerable quantity of their winter supplies before the company was ready to do business, acting, indeed, upon the advice of Mr. King himself, who was unwilling to allow prospective customers to suffer in the event of any delay on the part of the builders preventing him having his stock complete before the lake and rail transportation closed for the winter. The firm is handling a very large proportion of the wholesale trade along the line of the Grand Trunk Pacific, now completed to the junction with the National Transcontinental Railway.

TRADE NOTES.

The Postum Cereal Co., Battle Creek, Mich., will establish a branch factory in Windsor. The building will cost $50,000, and about 25 hands will be employed.

B. A. McEwen, formerly of McEwen Bros., grocers, Goderich, has purchased the grocery stock of Linder & Watson, Clinton. The McEwens now have four stores, two in Goderich, one in St. George and one in Clinton.

The B.C. Packers' Association have installed a new plant in the mill recently leased by the association at Alert Bay. The company expect to turn out 400,000 bushels per year, besides supplying the local trade.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Cloves, the Unexpanded Flower Bud of a Large Tropical Tree—Canada's Supply Comes Largely From Zanzibar.

CLOVES.—This common spice is originally the unexpanded flower bud of a tree belonging to a particular order not necessary to mention here. They are so named from the French word "clou" on account of their resemblance to a nail. The clove tree is a beautiful evergreen which grows to a height of from thirty to forty feet, having large oblong leaves and crimson flowers in numerous groups. The flower buds are at first of a pale color and gradually become green, after which they develop into a bright red, when they are ready for collecting. Cloves are rather more than half an inch in length.

The tree is a native of the small group of islands in the Indian archipelago called the Moluccas or Spice Islands. The product was one of the principal Oriental spices which early excited the cupidity of Western commercial communities, having been the basis of a lucrative trade from an early part of the Christian era.

The Portuguese, by doubling the Cape of Good Hope, obtained possession of the principal portion of the clove trade, which they continued to hold for nearly a century, when, in 1605, they were expelled from the Moluccas by the Dutch. The latter power is said to have exerted great and inhuman efforts to obtain a monopoly of the trade, attempting to extirpate all the clove trees growing in their native island and to concentrate the whole production on the Island of Amboyna. The French, however, succeeded with great difficulty in introducing the clove tree into the Mauritius in 1770. Subsequently the cultivation was introduced into Guiana, in South America, and at the end of the century the trees were planted at Zanzibar in East Africa. The chief commercial sources of supply are now Zanzibar, its neighboring island, Pemba and Amboyna. Cloves are also grown in Java, Sumatra, Guiana and in the West India Islands.

Cloves as they come into the market have a deep brown color, a powerfully fragrant odor and a taste too hot and acrid to be pleasant. When pressed with the nail they exude a volatile oil with which they are charged to the unusual proportion of about 18 per cent. The oil is obtained as a commercial product by submitting the cloves with water to repeated distilation.

Cloves are employed principally as a condiment in culinary operations, in confectionery, and in the preparation of liquors. In medicine they are tonic and carminative, but they are little used except as adjunct to other substances on account of their flavor or with purgative to prevent nausea and griping. The essential oil forms a convenient medium for using cloves for flavoring or medicinal purposes, and it also is frequently used to relieve toothache.

The sources of the Canadian supply of this particular spice are Zanzibar, Amboyna and Penang, the latter place being an island in the Straits Settlements. Zanzibar is, however, the most important of these, principally because the cheapest cloves can be secured from there. These sell at 25 cents per pound, while the retailers have to pay from 35 to 40 cents for the other varieties.

The demand for cloves extends in Canada over the whole year, but more particularly, as above mentioned, over the pickling and preserving season. At times efforts are made to corner the market on cloves, but these are invariably failures. When the price advances few sales are made and it has to come back to normal conditions again.

PERSONAL NOTES.

W. H. Stewart, who up to six years ago was assistant editor of The Canadian Grocer, and since then on the reportorial staff of the Toronto Mail and Empire, has been appointed editor of the Daily Columbian, New Westminster, B.C.

J. J. McCabe, wholesale fruit merchant, Toronto, is distributing this week attractive calendars, in a couple of different forms, one in particular bearing the figure of an attractive young lady, and also the names of the foreign firms which Mr. McCabe represents.

The wholesale fruit firm of J. J. Vipond & Co., McGill Street, has assigned to Mr. McD. Hains. The liabilities are about $7,000 to $8,000. It seems a combination of singularly unfortunate circumstances has led to this result, and Mr. Vipond has the sympathy of the trade.

Until you break the shell of a nut you are wholly in the dark as to the quality of the meat therein. A fair exterior often covers an unsatisfactory interior. Quality depends largely upon reputation—you've got to be guided by that. Are Heavy Purchases, Large Discounts or Long Datings Conducive to the Success of Your Tea-Trade?

There are two classes of salesmen that approach the retail grocer. One is the representative of the wholesale house desirous of cultivating him as an outlet, willing to carry stock for him, help him with credit and see him grow for their mutual good. That house is his friend.

The other is the salesman working for his own personal gain who would load the retailer up with as much as he can be persuaded to purchase by offering him lurid bargains and long datings and sometimes large discounts.

Some retail grocers do not distinguish clearly between these two kinds of sellers, because in their anxiety to obtain good discounts, long datings and low prices they are blinded to the different motives of the sellers.

The grocer's anxiety to buy at lowest prices even if he has to over-stock in dangerous degree to get what looks cheap works out to his everlasting injury. Particularly is this true of his tea trade.

By buying "SALADA" in small quantities on short datings he would be enabled to turn over four or five purchases at a good profit while waiting for the "long-winded" transaction to materialize. The selling of "SALADA" would prove beneficial to him in every respect. His tea would be absolutely fresh—of the highest possible quality—of superior excellence in flavor and purity. He would have no dead stock—no freight to pay—no deterioration—and no peddler to combat.

By selling "SALADA" you can satisfy more people than you can with any other tea and at a lower expense to yourself for you do away with the necessity of carrying a heavy stock of goods that don't sell.

Think it over!

Try It Yourself
It's Good Tea

Try Red Rose Tea in your home. Then you will recommend it to your customers with the conviction that it is the best value on the market. Convinced yourself, you can convince others. Any grocer can sell nine-tenths of his customers by saying "Red Rose is the tea I use myself."

No grocer can afford to be without the reputation of recommending good tea. Red Rose Tea "is good tea," the best value on the market at each of its grades.

Crimson label, 30c grade, is better value than any other tea at 30c, and very much superior to any 25c tea. When they come to drink it, no customer begrudges 5c for the difference between "tea" and "good tea." Good tea cultivates taste and leads to higher grades, more select customers, choicer class of trade where the better profit is.

Grocers Win Civic Honors

The Trade Well Represented in the Municipal Offices of Several Ontario Towns—Hamilton, Kingston and Barrie Have Grocer Mayors—Ingersoll's Reeve a Trade Member—Some of the Successful Candidates.

Results of the municipal elections throughout Ontario show that members of the grocery trade have carried off their share of the honors. Grocerymen in all parts of the Province have in recent years been aspiring to civic offices, but never before have there been so many successful in becoming elected to responsible positions as at the late contest. In some places grocers have been chosen as the chief magistrates of the towns and cities in which they carry on their business, thus obtaining the highest honor that their fellow-citizens can bestow on them.

It has been generally felt during the past that only professional men had the ability to direct the affairs of a town or city satisfactorily, but of recent years they have in numerous places been supplanted by the practical business men.

ALD. JOHN FORTH,

In the City of Hamilton Ald. John I. McLaren was elected Mayor by the big majority of 2,285—the greatest in 21 years of the city's history. Mr. McLaren ran as an independent, and the result showed that he was the popular candidate. He is the senior major of the 91st Highlanders, and that regiment was evidently a great factor to his success. Mr. McLaren for years was a manufacturer of coffee and spices, and was very successful in his career as such. Some time ago he disposed of his business and is now a grocery broker.

D. Cooper, a Kingston grocer, was chosen Mayor of the Limestone City by a majority of over 630. In Barrie, Jas. Vair, grocer, and one of the town's most prominent business men, was elected Mayor.

Among the successful grocers elected to aldermanic seats in Hamilton are John Forth, president of the Retail Grocers' Association, who headed the polls in Ward 3. Mr. Forth is an energetic, active man and should be a good councillor. Geo. W. Cann, who is vice-president of the Retail Grocers' Association, succeeded in Ward 1, as did also T. S. Morris in the same ward.

In Peterboro, Geo. A. Gillespie, of White & Gillespie, grocers, headed the polls in a field of 20 candidates. He has spent already one year in the Council, and his return as the most popular candidate testifies to his work during the past twelve months. E. F. Mason, another Peterboro grocer, was elected member of the Board of Education there.

Wm. A. Anderson, president of the Retail Merchants' Association, at Chatham, was elected alderman there. He came sixth in the contest. John McCorvie, grocer, was second, and Harry A. Andrew, grocer, was re-elected by a handsome vote.

The result of the Lindsay municipal elections show A. C. Babcock, grocer, to be chosen as one of the councillors. This will be his first year in municipal life.

In St. Catharines, J. T. Petrie, proprietor of the American Bazaar, will sit in the Council of 1909, and is slated as the coming Mayor of that place. In his Bazaar is a large grocery department.

Ingersoll, too, has its grocers in municipal life. S. M. Fleet was elected Reeve by a majority of 334, and C. A. O'Neill was elected an alderman by acclamation.

A. G. Vermilyea, a Belleville, grocer, was successful in receiving the good-will of the Belleville people and will be one of the councillors during the coming year.

MONTREAL WHOLESALER'S DEATH.

Joseph A. Robitaille, of A. Robitaille & Co., wholesale grocers, Montreal, died last week in his 65th year. Mr. Robitaille has long been known in grocery circles in the East, and his sudden death will be a shock to his many friends.

DOMINION TRAVELERS' EXECUTIVE MEETS.

On Saturday evening last the first meeting of the new Executive of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association was held in the rooms of the society in the Board of Trade Building, Montreal. There was an almost full attendance of directors, and considerable necessary business was transacted. Standing committees for the year were appointed to look after various matters, while honorary directors were elected as follows: J. A. Bouthellier and L. E. D'Astous, Sherbrooke; Alf. Haywood and M. J. Buckley, Toronto; J. A. MacDonald and A. McGregor, Halifax; J. S. Harding and W. M. McKenzie, St. John; J. Wilson and P. Gauthier, Ottawa; Senator D. Derbyshire, Brockville; L. H. Higgins, Moncton; D. McLean, Belleville; Angus Orr, Kingston; M. F. Griffin, J. F. Lemieux, W. Maynard and Geo. L. Van Felson, Quebec; H. M. Belcher, R. R. Gallagher and F. G. Crawford, Winnipeg; P. C. Small and Thos. Foster, Vancouver; A. W. Ramsay, London; W. S. Louson, Charlottetown; Aug. Sequin, St. Hyacinthe; P. L. Lassonde, Three Rivers; Frank Merchant, Sydney; Geo. A. Campbell, Victoria; F. P. Benjamin and Ben Myers, Hamilton; Honorary Directors for Edmonton and Calgary have yet to be named.

Business in Nova Scotia Ahead of Previous Year—New Ideas From Montreal.

HALIFAX.

January 4.—Notwithstanding the financial stringency of the past year, Nova Scotia felt little of its effects, and the year closed with business in a healthy and prosperous condition. There are fewer failures in Nova Scotia than for the past ten years, and this shows the sound principles on which business is conducted. While the customs receipts at most other places show a decrease, Halifax is to the fore with an increase, and it is quite a substantial one, too, amounting to almost $40,000. For the week closing with Thursday, December 31, the bank clearings totalled $1,402,700.75, an increase of $431,189.22 over the previous week. This is considered to be an exceptionally fine showing. While it is a little too early to make any predictions for the future, the outlook is most promising for a continuance of the prosperous conditions of the past. Business changes in Halifax on the opening of the new year are very few. N. M. Smith, will hereafter be known as the N. & M. Smith, Ltd., and the business will be continued under the same management.

Alderman Andrew Hubley, who has conducted a grocery store on Windsor Street, has retired from the business and in future will devote all his attention to real estate.

The total importations of raw sugar at the port of Halifax for the year 1908 from the British West Indies and British Guiana, were 45,561 tons, a decrease of 319 tons from the previous year. There was also a falling off in the importations of molasses. In 1907 the imports were 2,850 tierces, 18,171 puncheons, and 3,037 barrels. Last year the receipts were:

	Tcs.	Pun.	Bbls.	Hgds
Antigua	289	1,824	286	265
St. Kitts	1	1,383	412	...
Barbadoes	491	7,298	1,302	210
Demerara	...	107	...	...
Trinidad	75	851	63	...
Total	856	11,463	2,063	475

It is estimated that the products of Nova Scotia in 1908 yielded more than one hundred and seven million dollars, of which the farm contributed products to the value of $26,500,000.

In a review of the fisheries during the past year Howard H. Smith, of N. & M. Smith, says: "The catch of last year totalled about 275,000 quintals of dry fish, and of that amount fully 200,000 quintals were in the consuming markets by the end of the year. There is still 50,000 quintals still unsold in the fishermen's hands. The stocks carried in Halifax and Lunenburg are not in excess of an average. The drop of fully 35 per cent. in the price has materially induced a much larger demand, and the world's consumption to-day is estimated at 20 per cent. above the average of the last three years. This is the big factor in the minds of the exporters who have faced such losing odds for some years now. Beef, pork, wheat and corn, are all at top notch figures. No wonder agents and brokers now report "fish consumption enormous," and there is little doubt the markets will be bare when the new cure is available in August of this year"

JOSEPH ETHIER,

Of Laporte, Martin & Cie., Montreal, Recently Elected President Montreal Wholesale Grocers' Exchange.

MONTREAL.

January 5.—The grocers of the city are suffering from a serious epidemic of burglaries. Hardly a night passes without one occurring. One of the grocers last week was J. H. Dupre, 373 Wellington St. An entrance was made by cutting the wire netting in front of the window. About $30 represents the amount of this theft. The same night thieves entered the store of Z. Laurin, 276 Sherbrooke Street West. Here they forced the front door, and made themselves at home. When the proprietor arrived in the morning he found they had taken a varied line of groceries, including provisions, butter and cheese, and liquors, as well as the contents of the till.

Managers of the various larger grocery stores of the city are divided in their opinions regarding the extent of Christmas and New Year's trade. When all are taken into consideration, they show that trade has not been up to last year's mark, although the difference has not been great. This condition is more of a reflection of the past year than an indication of the future.

J. H. E. Davis, Montreal, representative of J. McIntosh & Co., Toronto, has returned from a short trip to the Townships. He states that the shortage of water is becoming extremely serious in many parts. E. P. Dame, 182 Bleury St. has a little invention in his store which is of practical value to every grocer. It consists of a small cord arranged from the door along the ceiling to the back of the counter, so that the necessity of coming forward to open the door for a customer is obviated. By pulling a handle at the end of the rope, which hangs about halfway down the store, behind the counter, the door can be opened. The mechanism is extremely simple, consisting of two grooved wheels in the ceiling, in which the cord runs, and sufficient length of rope to reach to the door.

John Robertson & Son, St. Catherine Street West, had a very pretty Christmas window of seasonable goods, consisting of dried fruits, imported confectionery, green fruits, and liquors.

S. Robinson, Esplanade Avenue, who recently sold his business to J. Hurteau, is taking a rest before entering actively into business again. Mr. Robinson, who has been in harness since he was a boy, as grocery clerk, and subsequently as a proprietor, forty years, at least, states that he will not be ready to consider any proposition until next summer as he will take things easy this winter.

Lorne Stewart, Montreal, agent in Quebec Province for John Taylor & Co., Toronto, is attending the annual conference of the staff, at the head office, this week. A. H. Brittain, Montreal, who just returned from Boston, is in Western Ontario this week.

G. M. Gilmour, of the Gilmour Hand Cleaner people has left Montreal for a few days in New York.

J. H. Lefebvre, the Montreal grocer, who was severely burned during the course of a fire in his store on December 26, died as a result of his injuries last week. He was forty-four years of age, and had been engaged practically all his life in the retail grocery business. He was in partnership with his father at the corner of Dorchester Street East and Panet Street, for several years, but latterly had conducted the business himself.

Western Canada Notes

Reduced Freight Rates at Nelson—Lower Meat Prices Expected in British Columbia.

VANCOUVER, B. C.

January 2.—The holiday trade has been extremely satisfactory in all lines, and few dealers have a small business to report. Not only in the city did the trade come up to expectation, but retailers in the interior declare that this was as good a season as they ever experienced. The end of the year saw rapid recovery in many lines, with collections fairly good. The prospects for a heavy spring trade are of the best.

A feature of the market at Christmas, which did not materialize, was the expected cutting of prices of turkeys and fowl by the opposing interests of Swift & Co. and the Pat Burns Co. These two concerns are now battling for the coast district, and the first-named company, which has recently entered the field, is making a strong effort. A large abattoir and packing house has been established at Edmonton by the Swift people, and as this is in the centre of the cattle-raising district of Western Alberta, the slaughtering is done there and shipments of dressed beef made to the various cities of British Columbia, in which branches have been started. In Vancouver, the name is Cromwell Ormsby Company; in Prince Rupert, J. A. Glassman is manager; W. J. Ovans was in Revelstoke making arrangements for opening up there. With stores like these, the Swift Company is ready to make an onslaught, and on Christmas Eve it was announced that the prices of turkeys would be cut by either or both, and people were on the lookout. Many held back buying, but the reduction did not materialize. Still, it is expected that meats, etc., will not be so high if these two concerns battle for the trade. The demand for dressed beef, which is brought here in refrigerator cars is large.

The fact that merchandise is now brought from Europe via Mexico and up the coast to Vancouver by the recently established line of steamers between Vancouver and Victoria and Mexican ports, will mean a readjustment of trade relations with the Canadian East. In the past nearly everything has come via Montreal, the large importing houses in the East acting as distributors. This was changed somewhat when the Blue Funnel liners came here from Liverpool, bringing direct consignments, and now further change will follow with the new route opened by way of Mexico. The Lonsdale, which is now in port, brought the first shipment from Liverpool, which arrived here 47 days after shipment. With these goods coming from the north of Europe, and the Chargeur-Reunis liners bringing goods from the south of Europe, trade relations will be much altered.

Local grocerymen are watching with interest the war between the wholesale grocery firms of Schwabacher Bros. & Co. and the National Grocery Company, which operate in the territory just south of the line, and not far from Vancouver. The former firm has declared its intention of following the latter to every city on the Pacific coast in which the latter may locate, and the latest scene of conflict is Bellingham, which, with Seattle, holds considerable intercourse with Vancouver and Victoria, having direct boat connection.

The marriage took place this week of J. W. McIntyre, who conducts a grocery at Cedar Cottage, on the city limits, to Miss Gertrude Billedeau, of New Westminster.

Howard Thompson has taken over the grocery business in Mount Pleasant conducted by R. Y. Blackhall. Mr. Blackhall will not leave Mount Pleasant.

Cosgriff & Bonnor have opened a grocery in Kaslo.

J. M. Doyle has been appointed district manager of P. Burns & Co.'s numerous branches in the interior, and will move from Revelstoke to his new headquarters at Nelson.

Fleming & Son, grocers, of Nelson, B.C., have moved into their new store. They are located in the suburb of Fairview, where they started the first grocery store eight years ago, and have now erected the first two-storey brick structure in that part of the city. The building cost between $6,000 and $7,000, and, with a $3,000 stock and the best of fixtures, they have one of the finest stores in Nelson.

Merchants of Nelson have been successful in securing reduced rates on several commodities which will go a long way toward increasing business in that city, which is becoming more and more a centre of trade for the Kootenay and Boundary districts. In a recent conference with the C.P.R. officials, it was arranged that on certain commodities, such as canned goods, poultry, butter, eggs, and similar products, substantial reductions would be made, while reductions will also be made on other lines. The questions of class and commodity rates were thoroughly discussed, and the railway company promised to give reductions to average not less than a certain figure and will go into the question further and endeavor to make even a greater reduction. These reductions will apply to both summer and winter rates.

Fire Destroys General Stores at Bracebridge — Barrie and Kingston Have Grocer Mayors——Trade Represented in Councils of Several Towns.

LONDON.

January 5.—Stocktaking among the wholesale grocers is nearly completed, but not until the figuring up has been done will the results be definitely known. Enough is already known, however, to show that the year just closed was a good one. Some dealers declare it was better than 1907—and all view the outlook optimistically. Profits on sugars have been fair, fluctuations being fewer than in 1907. Local wholesalers were not seriously affected by last week's drop of 10 cents in price, as they have been living from hand to mouth so far as this commodity is concerned and were not caught with large stocks. In other staples there is very little change. Christmas fruits are pretty well cleaned out. Canned goods, which have been slow of sale, should begin to move shortly. Stocks in local warehouses are not very large.

Travelers started out on the road again Monday, after the Christmas holidays, although many remained in town long enough to cast their ballots in the municipal elections.

The retail trade is now experiencing the customary post-holiday quiet. As a rule, business during the past two weeks has been very good.

The only municipal office filled by acclamation was that of hospital trustee, Samuel Screaton, of Edward Adams & Co., wholesale grocers, being re-elected to that office for the third time.

BRACEBRIDGE.

January 7.—The Wm. Ross Co. have purchased the grocery stock of the late W. J. Leader & Co.

Christmas trade in our town was above the average, each firm doing a good, lively trade. Fortune favored the merchants with good sleighing and brisk weather. One feature noticed by everybody was the beautiful and carefully dressed windows. The grocers vied with one another in a friendly spirit, making all the displays very attractive. One traveler remarked that Bracebridge can hold its own in window displays.

Hutchison Bros. speak highly of trade since they introduced the cash system, on account of its bringing many new customers, and formally creating a better friendship between buyer and seller.

George Hale, late of London, England, has taken a position as accountant with Hutchison Bros.

The fire of last week proved a very disastrous one. Six merchants were completely burned out, with a loss of fully $100,000. Those interested in the grocery trade being Axler Bros. and John Carruthers, both general merchants At one time, owing to the increasing gale, the north side of Manitoba Street seemed in danger. The stores occupied by Fenn, Anderson & Co., J. P. Humphries and Hutchison Bros., were so close to danger that a hasty removal of valuables was resorted to. But the wind changed, and the town was saved. Already since the fire the owners of the blocks destroyed are arranging for new material, and by June a row of new, handsome stores will replace the old land-marks destroyed by fire.

Christmas window display worthy of mention was one in a large grocery store in town. A wolf, shot in Muskoka on November 6, and set up in Bracebridge, was the feature. It was surrounded by Christmas fruits and candies, with a large sign overhead reading, "Keep the Wolf from the Door by Buying Your Xmas Goods Here." It brought the people, too.

OTTAWA.

January 7.—Fowl dealers who carried heavy stocks for the New Year's market were certainly in luck this year, and smiling faces are in strong contrast to the somewhat attenuated cast of features exhibited by the sellers of the finny product of ocean, river and lake, on the Ottawa market the day before New Year's. No dispensation having been received as to the eating of meat on New Year's day by Roman Catholics until the noon previous, the fishermen had already begun to display that happy smile characteristic of dealers who know their stock is going to sell like hot cakes. Some had even begun to whisper of a rise in prices similar to that in turkeys before Christmas day. It was not to be, however, and a cruel fate again drove home the meaning of the proverbial "fisherman's luck." But if the fishermen could not put up the prices the turkey men did, and the day before New Year's was as good as the day before Christmas. Apparently thinking that as some of the people hadn't expected to be able to eat turkeys they should be charged extra for the surprise, prices were boosted away up. The average figure at which turkeys were selling was about 25c per lb. and in some cases it worked out to 30c. Chickens were also high at 90c to $1.25 for specimens that evidently had not died of fatty degeneration; while ducks sold from $1 to $1.25 per pair, and geese for $1.50 to $1.75, which figured out about 22c per pound. Beef was from 4½c to 6c and there were large quantities offered for sale, while pork on the contrary was scarce and was rated as high as $10, in fact it could not be purchased for less. Butter was a little easier than for some time past and prices for pail did not go above 37c. Eggs, however, were dear and as high as 60c was asked for the strictly fresh variety.

John D. McGregor, wholesale fruit merchant, Ottawa, has assigned to Wm. A. Cole.

The holiday season is over and the Ottawa merchants speak in gratifying terms of the result. Good roads, mild weather and the Christmas spirit brought out the buying public in large numbers, which is satisfaction indeed to the grocer who spends so much time in "fixing up" for the holiday trade.

The course of instruction in smiling which is proposed in the public schools of one of our large cities ought to be popular. Will it be given by the teachers of gymnastics or psychology? Will it be compulsory for the girls and elective for the boys? Will it be possible to escape it by passing a satisfactory examination? Clerks, one would think, should be the first patrons of such instruction. What is there about the task of selling groceries which casts a gloom over the countenance of the seller? It is stated to be a curious fact that "drummers" are a smiling race, and clerks a sad one. Yet one would suppose that begging folks to buy would be a less cheerful occupation than being entreated to sell.

PETERBORO.

January 5.—After one of the closest races for aldermanic honors in the municipal history of Peterboro, Geo. A. Gillespie carried off first honors with a majority of ten over his next contestant. Last year he was a close second and by his work during the past year he has gained the confidence of the public in his ability to deal wisely with public matters, influenced only by the best interests of the people.

Ald. Gillespie is one of Peterboro's leading grocers, being in partnership in the firm of White and Gillespie. He was formerly a cheese-maker at Central Smith factory, to the north of the city, and after a number of years' experience came to Peterboro' and has been particularly interested in dairying, their store carrying a special line of supplies for the manufacture of butter and cheese. He has been the largest cheese buyer on the local market during the past year and has been recently chosen as the representative from Peterboro' district on the Board of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, having been re-elected to that honor. Ald. Gillespie is also vice-president of the Board of Trade of this city and altogether occupies a prominent place in the business and public life of Peterboro. He left on Tuesday to attend the convention of the Eastern Dairymen, which meets in Prescott on Wednesday, January 6. Ald. Gillespie will hold office for two years, being among the six securing the highest votes.

E. F. Mason, proprietor of three retail grocery stores in Peterboro, was elected a member of the Board of Education. He was given the distinction of being the only new member elected out of the three aspiring for the honor. Three of the old members out of four in the field were also returned. Mr. Mason has been in civic life before, having served in the city council for some years, part of which time he was chairman of the finance committee. By the system of electing school trustees in vogue in this city he will hold office for two years without having to come before the people during that time.

BARRIE.

January 5.—James Vair, one of Barrie's best business men, is our new Mayor. He defeated John Bennett, the Mayor for the last two years, by 255 votes. Sam Calwell, another old grocer, was elected by a large majority to the office of Second Deputy Reeve.

W. D. Bothwell, the last year's candidate for Ward Three, was defeated by a small margin of thirty votes. John Little, one of the Sixth Ward business men, was elected First Deputy Reeve. Chas. Powcher is the Sixth Ward's new alderman.

New laid eggs are coming in more freely this week, and are selling at from 28c to 35c a dozen. Butter can be bought for 25c a pound. Turkeys sold at 15c to 17c, chickens 14c, geese 12½c, and old fowl at 9c and 10c a pound.

CHATHAM.

January 5.—A warmly contested municipal campaign has resulted in placing three grocers in the city council. For the mayoralty, John Edmondson, the St. Clair Street butcher, went down before W. H. Westman, of Westman Bros., hardware firm. The three grocers who comprise one-third of the membership of the 1909 council are Wm. Anderson, John McCorvie and Harry A. Andrew. Mr. McCorvie, who was chairman of the Board of Education last year, polled the magnificent vote of 1,251, coming within six votes of heading the list—a striking tribute to his general popularity amongst all classes of citizens. Mr. Anderson has been for several years a member, and is an ex-chairman of the Library Board, and president of the Retail Merchants' Association, and, for a newcomer into the hurly-burly of municipal politics, made a good run, taking sixth place with a total vote of 855. Ald. Andrew secured ninth place, with a vote of 700. He has served one year already in the council and is one of the two members of the 1908 council who will occupy seats in that body for 1909.

It was thought by many that the famous market by-law would be a substantial issue in the municipal elections and from all accounts quite a few voters were influenced by it. Several candidates followed the lead of Fred H. Brisco in declaring themselves in favor of closing the market against butchers, grocers and wholesale buyers until 10 o'clock Saturday mornings, instead of leaving it open as at present. Though the market by-law undoubtedly influenced some votes, its influence was not as far reaching as had been imagined, Mr. Brisco, who brought up the issue in the first place, himself going down to defeat.

The Niagara power plebiscite on which Chatham in common with many other western towns voted to-day, carried by an overwhelming majority, the vote standing 859 for, to 377 against.

On the occasion of the concluding meeting of the Board of Education for 1908, held last Tuesday evening, the retiring chairman, John McCorvie, entertained his colleagues to an oyster supper at Crump's restaurant.

Poultry was scarce on the market last Saturday, and prices continue high. Eggs sold for 30c a dozen, and it is claimed that the vendors are endeavoring to boost butter to 30c a pound.

There has been a certain stiffening in the pork market of late, the price this week for live hogs being $6, and for dressed, $7.50. Dr. Bruce, Government Inspector for this district, while in the city, stated that Kent County hogs are in an exceptionally healthy condition, the percentage of hogs even slightly affected with tuberculosis and other diseases being very low.

Robert E. Pillsworth died on Tuesday last at his home, Thames Street. Interment took place at Brantford on Friday. Mr. Pillsworth was formerly in the grocery business here and was 46 years of age.

W. G. Burrows, assignee of R. I. Weaver, advertises the auction sale of the grocery and meat shop stocks, fixtures and good will for January 7, at 2 p.m.

On New Year's eve a very pleasant celebration took place at the Sunday school room of the First Presbyterian Church, the occasion being a congregational gathering in honor of the 90th birthday of Kenneth Urquhart, the "grand old man" of the church. Mr. Urquhart, who is still hale and hearty, was one of the pioneer grocers of Chatham, coming here 64 years ago.

John Simpson, of New Ontario, is visiting in Merlin, where he formerly conducted a grocery and general store.

ST. CATHARINES.

January 5.—B. W. Robertson, wholesale grocer, of Kingston, has purchased the greater portion of George B. Darker's fruit farm on Ontario Street, just outside the city limits. G. A. Robertson, son of B. W. Robertson, has a large fruit farm directly across the road from the land purchased by his father, and it is understood that the new purchase will be under the control and supervision of G. A. Robertson. Fruit farming in this district pays well.

Mr. Searles, proprietor of the Niagara Falls Grocery Company, Niagara Falls South, purchased the bankrupt stock of Rawson, Humberstone, and is disposing of the same at retail.

J. T. Petrie, proprietor of the American Bazaar, was the only candidate elected for municipal honors that is interested in the grocery business. Mr. Petrie was elected for another term as alderman, following which, it is stated by those who know, that he will be entitled to be elected for Mayor of the city. Mr. Petrie has a grocery department in connection with his establishment.

The local wholesalers report the usual after-holiday quietness in the trade, and the usual tightness of money. Otherwise conditions are very favorable for a heavier volume of retail business this January than that of last year.

LINDSAY.

January 5.—The Christmas trade for the year 1908 was on the whole good, and good cheer and prosperity at present is felt on all sides. Those in the business who know whereof they speak state that they have never experienced a better season. The money market has loosened up considerably, as far as Lindsay is concerned, and prospects look bright in the grocery line. Even during the week following Christmas, trade has been brisk.

The Christmas Fair, which was so well covered by your staff representative, proved to be a boon to the merchants. People flocked to town and spent their money freely. In fact, many a store had more customers than their augmented staffs could cater to. Adams Bros., proprietors of one of the oldest established grocery stores in town, state that they had an overwhelming number of customers.

The grocers are now looking forward to another busy week on the days of the annual exhibition of the Lindsay Pet Stock and Poultry Association. The dates have been fixed for January 26, 27 and 28. It is expected that the show this year will exceed all past records and large crowds will visit the town on the above dates. The farmers in the surrounding country are evidencing an interest in the show, and will exhibit fowl, etc.

Some time ago the grocery firm of Laidley & Newton severed connections and sold out. Bert Laidley leaves this week for Huntsville, where he has accepted the managership of the grocery department of one of the largest general stores. Mr. Laidley has had considerable experience in the grocery trade, coming to Lindsay from Omemee. W. E. Kelcher, of Gough's clothing store, is also leaving to accept a position as manager of the above department of the same store at Huntsville. Both young men held offices in the local Court C.O.F., and last week were presented with emblematic stick pins and rings by their fellow members of the lodge.

Graham Brothers have secured the grocery business formerly conducted by Laidley & Newton.

Louis Primeau, who has conducted a grocery business in Lindsay for several years, and who has enjoyed a splendid patronage, is advertising his business for sale.

INGERSOLL.

January 5.—Two of Ingersoll's widely known and enterprising grocers will occupy seats at the council board of 1909. They are S. M. Fleet and C. A. O'Neill. Mr. Fleet was elected reeve in Monday's contest by the large majority of 334 over F. Richardson. Mr. O'Neill was elected alderman by acclamation. Mr. Fleet for several years has taken a prominent part in municipal affairs. He is a convincing speaker, shrewd at figures, and both in the town and county council has rendered valuable service. That this is the case was emphasized by the overwhelming majority which he received. Mr. O'Neill is not a new member of the council. He has rendered good service in the past and is always wide-awake to the best interests of the town.

More than usual interest was attached to the municipal election on Monday by reason of the voting on the local option by-law. For weeks a vigorous campaign had been conducted in the interests of local option and the outcome of the vote was awaited with keen interest by citizens generally. The situation was one of peculiar interest to the merchants in view of the conflicting testimony that was frequently adduced as to the working of local option in other municipalities. As far as the activities were concerned in regard to getting out the vote, both sides appeared to be on about the same footing. They were thoroughly organized and the result was that the largest vote in the history of the town was polled. From the moment the polls opened until their close there was a keen race for the voters and there were very few who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to mark the ballots. There was a total of 1,233 votes polled. The by-law was given a majority of seventy-nine, but was defeated, as it received eighty-four less than the required three-fifths of the total vote.

TORONTO.

December 5.—The Toronto Wholesale Fruit Dealers held their third annual ten-pin tournament on Wednesday night, Dec. 30, at the Toronto Bowling Club alleys. The contest was by far the most successful yet held as about a hundred bowlers participated. The scores were:—

Class A—J. E. Thompson, highest single frame, 191; W. B. Stringer, first highest aggregate, 532; F. A. Matthews, 513; Geo. Alcott, third, 504.

Ladies—1, Mrs. C. Langskill, 94; 2, Mrs. W. B. Stringer, 78; 3, Miss Ryan, 68; 4, Mrs. McBride, 67; 5, Mrs. Geo. Everist, 67; 6, Miss Knott, 60; 7, Miss C. Hands, 59.

Class B—Highest single frame, Ed. Millen, 179; first highest aggregate, O. E. Stringer, 445; 2, C. Dawson, 432. E. Millen also highest aggregate, 497.

A NEW GROCERY CATALOGUE.

A new catalogue of grocery supplies has just been issued by Eby-Blain, Limited, wholesale grocers, Toronto. The catalogue is comprehensive, covering practically everything handled in the grocery trade, is well illustrated with cuts of the various articles and goods described, and contains a great deal of valuable information for grocers, such as tables of measures, the standards of various lines of goods, and pointers about business. The Eby-Blain Co. will send a copy of the new catalogue to any grocer on request, if The Canadian Grocer is mentioned.

The travelers of St. Hyacinthe will hold a banquet on Saturday evening, January 9. A good programme has been prepared.

UNIQUE METHODS WIN SUCCESS

Michael Fury a Woodstock Grocer, With Ideas of His Own—The Cash System and No Delivery Features of His Store.

"Honest" Michael Fury, of Fury & Thompson, Woodstock, is a grocer who has made money in his business, and he has been successful in a way that is contradictory to present-day methods. In length of service he is the oldest grocer in that city and after Mr. White, the dry goods man, the oldest merchant in business in Woodstock. He is well known to the grocery travelers of Ontario, every one of whom speak of him in the highest terms. It is his method of conducting business, however, which makes this sketch interesting.

Mr. Fury was not born to the grocery trade, nor in his younger days did he give much thought to it as a means of livelihood. Born in Ireland, as a boy he came to Canada and settled at Hamilton, where he learned his trade as a cabinetmaker. This was about the time of the Civil War in the United States, and tempted by a flattering offer Michael went off to St. Louis. He returned, however, and went to Dundas, where he worked for a while. A chance for a good position as foreman at his trade took him to Woodstock, and so well was he satisfied with that city that he decided to make it his abiding place.

Started in a Small Way.

Work fell off and one by one his men lost their places, and Mr. Fury bethought himself that before his turn came round he had better prepare himself for eventualities. He bought a lot near the market on Dundas Street and opened up a little grocery store with some candies and a few general lines. That was about 40 years ago; and his business is at the same stand to-day. The Buffalo and Goderich Railway line had been but completed at that time and as Mr. Fury knew his grocery business would not stand too great a strain: he saw a chance to make money by bringing in fish from the lake ports and he seized the opportunity. At first on foot and afterwards (when he could afford it) with team he went to Tavistock, the nearest railway point to Woodstock, for the fish sent on to him from Goderich. He disposed of some on his way back to the city and the rest he sold in Woodstock. The profits went towards building up his grocery business.

Afterwards he was able to bring groceries to the settlers along the road between Woodstock and Tavistock and on his return sell them his fish. He was doing very well, but the building of the Great Western road through Woodstock brought that city in closer touch with the outside world and to some extent curtailed his business. Mr. Fury now devoted his energies to building up his grocery business and the rules he laid down then continue to govern the business to-day. The rules were simple, and but three in number—honest in every business transaction; sell only for cash; and deliver to no person. To-day Fury & Thompson are the only grocers in Woodstock who have no delivery wagon.

Makes No Deliveries.

Now at first sight there seems to be a lack of business foresight in this, for a person would naturally expect to have goods which are bought and paid for delivered to one's home, but Mr. Fury avers it works another way. The expense of delivery saved him he chops off the price of the goods and so he has customers attracted from all parts of the city to his store.

The Cash System.

Another peculiar thing about Mr. Fury's business is that until lately he did not use a book in the whole store, not even a counter check-book, and it was only on his retirement from business a few months ago that at the earnest solicitation of his clerk that he agreed to try them. The clerk found that persons who bought say four articles one day would come in the following day and ask for a fifth article, saying it was bought and paid for the day previous, though this might not be the case. Mr. Fury would without question accept the word of the customer and hand the goods over the counter. How much he lost in this way will never be known. Another point; Mr. Fury was never known to press a sale; nor did he ever praise the merits of any of his wares. His only comment on filling an order was "Is that all?"—and he let it go at that.

Though himself out of the business worries (his son-in-law, Mr. Thompson, continuing the business) Michael Fury is behind the counter every day, and though he is over seventy, is as spry and as active as the youngest clerk. In memory of the old days a large water-tight tank filled with fish stands outside the store and many an old-timer still goes to Michael Fury for his fish supply.

If one were asked as to the cause of his success in spite of apparent contradictions of business methods the answer would likely be because of his absolute honesty and his selling for cash, and this in spite of the fact that he did not oblige his customers by delivering his goods.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Wm. Anderson, of the Davidson-Hay traveling staff, was happily married on December 30 to Miss McLenghan, of Perth. The ceremony took place at the bride's home and the happy couple left afterwards on a short honeymoon trip.

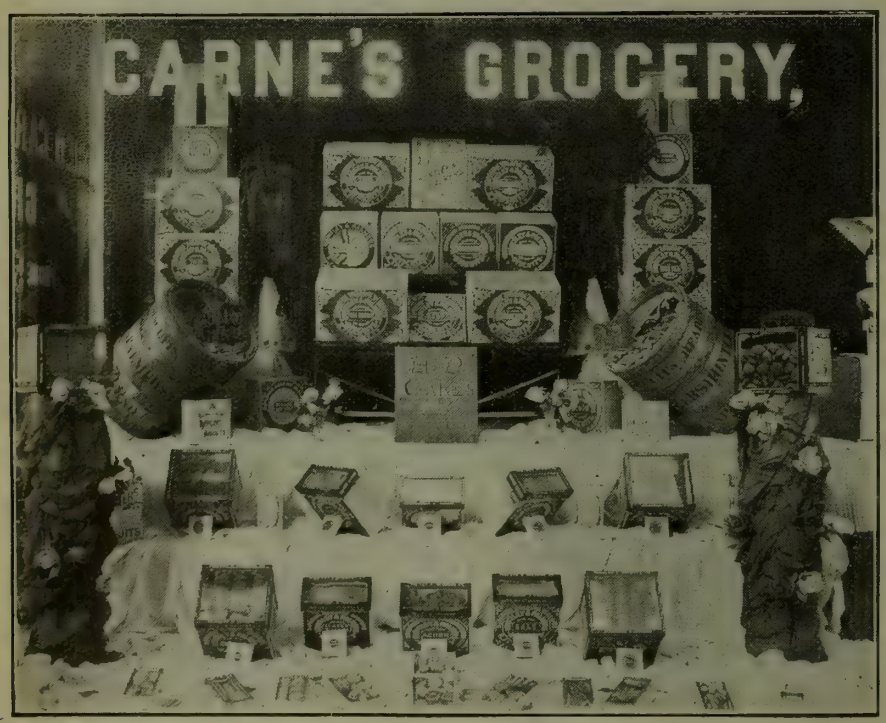
The cocoa crop, as is estimated in a report from Guayaquil, Ecuador, South America, is the largest ever produced in that country, amounting to more than 2,000,000 pounds. The price there, it is said, averages about 50 per cent. less than last year.

H. H. Livingstone, who has represented the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co., of Toronto, in Ottawa and the Province of Quebec for sixteen years, has taken a position with Mayell & Co., Toronto, and will cover the same territory in their interest. Mr. Livingstone was in Toronto this week completing the arrangements for his new work, and made a pleasant call at The Grocer Office.

SELLING DANGEROUS COAL OIL.

The first information for the sale of dangerous coal oil has been laid by Inspector Earl, of the Inland Revenue Department, against D. A. McIlquhan, hardware merchant, Alexander, Man., who, it is alleged, sold kerosene which caused the death of Miss Raymond about three weeks ago. Inspector Gosnell obtained a sample from the barrel, which flashed at 65 points, twenty points below the required standard.

AN ATTRACTIVE BISCUIT WINDOW



Timely Suggestion From a Pacific Coast Grocer—The Several Varieties of One Line of Goods Make Striking Display—Some Points of Excellence.

The early months of the year are a particularly good time to push biscuits. In consequence of this, some attention should be given these goods in window display. As a helpful suggestion along this line the photo on this page is presented.

The window here reproduced appeared in the window of Fred. Cairns' grocery, Victoria, B.C., a few months ago and was dressed by Harry Young, several of whose good windows have been presented to Grocer readers during the past year or two.

Mr. Young has certainly made a success in this case. The window is a daisy, both from the standpoint of attractive and selling qualities, and must have proved very effective.

The arrangement, in the first place, is to be commended. Mr. Young has followed the plan of using only one line of goods, and of showing these in the several forms in which they come. This provides for a good display without the tendency to overcrowding which is so evident in most grocery windows.

A Well-arranged Grocery Window Fro m Victoria.

The display of the biscuits in the small boxes in the front of the window shows particularly the appetizing quality of the goods. The larger boxes, behind, while showing other varieties also give a good impression as to the packing and the display in the holder above carries this idea further.

While the addition of floral decorative material is not always advisable in a window of this kind, in this case this feature has been most judiciously used and the two draped pillars trimmed with roses help both to give an air of daintiness to the goods and to fill up corners which otherwise would appear rather empty and awkward. The smaller bouquets in the glass holders on the top step of the window might just as well have been omitted.

There is only one feature of the window which impresses us as deserving of criticism and that is one of omission rather than commission. While price tickets appear on a couple of articles they might with advantage have been used in connection with nearly all the other lines. People like to know the price of things and if they take a fancy to a particular line of biscuits they would be pleased to know the cost even without inquiring.

WINDOW DRESSING HINTS.

Make your window displays such that people will know all about one article or group of articles or one line of goods at a time, and will not have merely a faint idea of what it is and what you have.

Don't make your windows like a catalogue of your stock. In each display there should be one particular article or bargain better and more attractive than all the rest, and it should be made to stand forth as prominently among the other articles as shines the moon among the stars on a clear night. This one article should attract and hold the attention until the mind decides on a look further along.

It is better to show one article to good advantage than a window full of various goods where nothing possesses individuality.

You should not place every line of goods you carry in your windows at one time. Your windows need not have an empty appearance. The secret of good window dressing is as much in good judgment of correct quantities as in artistic grouping or in knowledge of kinds of goods to be displayed.

In window displays new articles, like new methods, are better than old, as they connect the idea of freshness and up-to-dateness of the store's stock.

Variety, change, constant newness, are features which will be a great help in pleasing the masses of the people.

Everyone dislikes monotony. You might be very fond indeed of some particular dish, but if it appeared on your table day after day you would soon tire of it. The same in equal force applies to show window sameness.

Give window dressing a practical test to satisfy yourself that it is necessary to your business. People generally are not anxious to buy. You must tempt them and thus make them buy.

DELIVERING MAIL IN NORTHERN CANADA.

Carrier's Long Tramp Through Outskirts of Civilization.

Fred. B. Halvard, a trusted employe of the Hudson Bay Company, left Edmonton a few days ago with the winter's mail for Fort McPherson, two thousand miles away. The journey will occupy six months. Leaving Edmonton, Halvard drove out as far as Lac La Biche, where the mail was transferred to a dog train, which will be used as far as Fort Resolution, where a relay will be obtained for the rest of the journey.

The mail for these fur trading posts far beyond the outskirts of civilization had been collecting at the Edmonton post office for some time. Persons from all parts of the world who have friends in the bleak lands of the North, and who have no means of knowing exactly when the mail will leave, had been forwarding letters, newspapers and magazines in large quantities, the bulk of the latter being reduced by the tearing out of the advertising pages.

When the mail was weighed just prior to leaving, it was found there were 30 pounds of registered mail, 37 pounds of ordinary letters, and 886 pounds of newspapers and magazines, making a total of 953 pounds. This is the largest mail ever sent North at any one time.

The Hudson Bay Company contracts to carry 300 pounds of mail to Fort Resolution, and 300 pounds to Fort McPherson and intermediate points. All mail for the furthest point north was taken, but part of that destined to Fort Resolution and intermediate points was left behind and will be forwarded with the next batch on January 27. Mail from Fort Resolution will be brought back to Edmonton in about two months, but it will take six months to get a reply to letters now on their way to Fort McPherson.

R. J. Sharp, representing W. P. Downey, the White Dove man, Montreal, leaves on Monday for a trip through Western Ontario.

WHAT TO DO IN JANUARY

Stocktaking Should Be Given First Attention—Get the Holiday Decorations Down and New Ones Up—A Chance to Push Biscuits and Canned Goods.

Like all wise merchants the progressive grocer will at the beginning of the year take a little time to himself to look over the business field, more minutely examining the situation as it affects his own business. He will study the conditions of trade during the past year and compare them with previous years, and more particularly will he look into the state of his own business; see wherein he has gained or lost; what were the profitable and unprofitable lines he carried; how he won trade and how he failed; and, indeed, examine thoroughly all the ways, means and methods of conducting his business. This delving into the past will prove helpful in drawing out his plans for building up the coming year's business, for experience is a wise teacher and will prove a useful friend in passing round the tight corners.

Being at the commencement of the year, January is or should be the month for stocktaking. Some grocers prefer to do this work before the end of the year, and some other and more advanced grocers have in vogue systems for showing at any time the state of their business. All grocers, however, are not in this class, and for the great majority of grocers, Christmas and holiday trading is so heavy during December that January is here before they get a chance to look at their books and examine the year's business. Another point in January's favor is that it is not a buying month and stocktaking may be more readily done during that month than perhaps at any other season of the year. At any rate, once a year the machinery of trade should be examined in order that the condition of affairs may be obtained. Some of the smaller grocers may think stocktaking unnecessary, but they cannot doubt that the process is beneficial. The larger grocers cannot afford to let a year go by without taking stock. It may not be necessary to count, weigh and measure every article, though that is a safe plan, and may be the best means, if a stock book is not kept. The goods on hand should be valued at cost price, as that is the only safe way, and many grocers deceive themselves by invoicing their stock too high. Stocktaking, besides showing the grocer his present worth will also bring to his notice shelf-worn goods and grocery articles put away in out-of-the-way corners that might otherwise not see the light. It will be helpful, too, in showing what is dead stock, and the wise grocer will know how to order and what quantities to order for his business in future. One of the greatest preventives of failures in the grocery, and, in fact, any business, is the annual stocktaking, and the stocktaking should include accounts as well as goods.

This planning for the future should also be an uppermost thought in the grocer's mind at the beginning of the year, for while mistakes may have been made in the past, yet "it is useless crying over spilt milk," and the only thing that counts is the rectifying of errors of the past, and the making plain sailing where shipwreck had occurred. Results are what count every time.

Get Down the Decorations.

Getting back to the store and his business probably the first thing the grocer will do is to discard the Christmas and holiday decorations which did duty during the recent weeks. While they look pretty and give an attractive appearance to the store, yet they are apt to get dusty and in need of repair and renewing if left too long. Some grocers who in the past went into Christmas decorations on an extensive scale, this season tried out grocery lines only as the means of giving their stores a holiday appearance. Of course, all admit that brightening up at Christmas time, whether by means of holly, bunting, flags, flowers or other decorative materials or simply by bringing forward holiday lines is very important, and, if important at Christmastime, why not at other seasons? This forces the thought of interior display, which of late has come very much to the front, and which goes hand in hand with window display. One means of interior decoration used by a merchant in one of the smaller centres of Ontario is the use of empty cartons. This grocer saved up all the cartons of breakfast foods and other grocery lines, and when he had sufficient he made an arch or some attractive design, and placed it in a fairly prominent position. These cartons also prove useful in filling up the space above the shelves where it is difficult to reach grocery lines if placed for sale. These cartons are cheap since they cost nothing, and but little work is necessary to work up an attractive showing. Changes can be made frequently; indeed, should be made, for change gives life to the store, and the progressive grocer should show that he is up-to-date and very much alive.

Bring Out the Canned Goods.

And now we are on the rim of the inner circle of the canned goods season, and these lines should be pushed by giving them prominent positions, both in window and interior displays. There are so many lines of canned goods these days that a grocery store could easily be filled with them. Perhaps by dividing them into sections or by devoting one continuous line of sheves to each group, the grocer may keep his stock in order and know just what he has and where he may immediately place his hand on any article of food required. For instance, take four general divisions of canned goods—meats, fish, vegetables and fruits. They could either be placed in four divisions in the store, or, perhaps, a better arrangement might be to devote a shelf to each division. This latter arrangement would show the customer at a glance that canned goods of all kinds were carried, though it might not show all the varieties in each division. During the colder months there is a good demand for canned goods, and as the season progresses the families' preserving larders get lower making a still further demand for fruit and sauce lines.

Breakfast foods could well be used to accompany the canned goods display, for this is a splendid time to devote some attention to cereals. Quite an attractive interior picture can be made with canned and cereal goods, and bottled catsups and sauces might be used to help out.

Time to Push Biscuits.

Biscuits are also a good seller during this month, for they will prove a big change after the home baking of the Christmas season. This is not a rap at home baking, but the housewife is surely tired after the strenuous holiday season and she will welcome with relief the change to normal conditions.

With interior arrangement should also go window display, and the four lines mentioned might be used with advantage in making a showing of seasonable grocery lines. These window displays should be changed frequently, just to show that the grocer is alive and doing things. One week canned goods might be shown; the second week cereals; the third week bottled lines, and the fourth week biscuits. The whole scheme of window and interior arrangement is based on the theory that window display attracts trade and interior display holds it.

What About the Odds and Ends?

Perhaps there are some odds and ends of holiday groceries left after the Christmas season, and the grocer, of course, wishes to dispose of them instead of having them wasted or holding them over a year. One method, and a very good one, is to make neat counter displays of them. For instance, there are some broken boxes of figs, raisins, currants, etc. These, if put up in pound bags or ten-cent lots, and given space on one end of the counter, with a neat little card attached, will go out with readier sale than otherwise.

These few hints added to the regular methods of conducting a grocery store should be helpful in making January's business returns better than those of January, 1908.

CENTRAL BOARD FOR TRAVELERS

Probably as a result of the usual annual meeting of the different travelers' associations having taken place, there has been considerable talk lately about the old suggestion that the different bodies appoint a central executive board to look after the affairs of the travelers for their greater good. It is too bad that nothing definite along these lines has been accomplished, for the idea is admitted to be a splendid one. Probably it is because no one has given the matter really serious thought as yet that no action has been taken. Why cannot one of the five large associations of travelers we have in Canada bring this matter up at a meeting of the executive? The question might be discussed, and steps taken to find out how the other bodies feel—through their executive, of course. This would start the ball rolling, and surely it is not expecting too rapid progress to hope that the whole matter would be ripe for discussion at the next annual meeting of the associations. Roughly speaking, there are 21,400 travelers in Canada belonging to the different associations, divided as follows: Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, 8,600; Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association, 6,200; Northwest Commercial Travelers' Association, 3,200; Western Ontario Commercial Travelers' Association, 2,600, and Maritime Commercial Travelers' Association, 800. These figures are approximate. Supposing a central executive board of ten, composed of two members from each association were formed, would it not be a fine institution? After all, the interests of the traveler in Halifax are those of the knight of the grip in Winnipeg, except for local considerations, and most assuredly a representative executive board would wield a powerful influence for the betterment of conditions among the travelers generally.

The voice of an executive representing 21,000 live business men would be heard with deeper respect than the voice of a similar executive representing but 8,000 members, or only 800. Railways, hotel proprietors, liverymen, business institutions, and people generally would be more impressed with the larger number represented, while criticisms and suggestions would carry greater weight than ever before.

Let somebody get busy right away and start the ball rolling. The man who makes the first move will start a mighty good thing.

DON'T NEGLECT STOCKTAKING.

Generally speaking, the keynote of success in any business is good, systematic management. The grocer usually knows this but it is not always that he puts his knowledge or his time to the best advantage in following along the lines dictated by his judgment. One of the most important duties at the opening of a new year is stock-taking. Every grocer should have an intimate acquaintance with the quantity and value of goods on his shelves in order to estimate whether he has advanced or deteriorated in his business during the year gone by. This is something of vast importance to any grocer who is concerned in making progress.

Another advantage to the retailer in taking stock is the discovery of how certain articles have sold during the year. Very often stocks of particular goods have lain on the shelves and in the corners of the grocery store a whole season, with little or no demand for them. They must be gotten rid of and if possible be replaced with saleable goods. The holding of such stock is productive of no value; it takes up room for nothing and fails to meet the requirements of the store customers who are obliged to purchase the article they desire elsewhere. An inventory of the stock at the beginning of the year gives a fairly accurate idea of how the grocer stands and whether he has held his own during the past twelve months. The small mistakes he has made have eaten into the profits probably more than larger things.

Since the holiday rush is over and people are back to their normal state of living again, the present should be a profitable time for collections by the grocer. As a rule he carries on a business with a comparatively limited capital and the non-payment of accounts is sometimes a serious drawback. We would, therefore, urge the grocers to be as careful as possible in accepting unknown credit. Find out where the new customers have come from and what their reputation has been for paying their grocery bills before placing them on the credit list.

THE RAILWAYS GROWING VEGETABLES.

Some years ago The Grocer suggested as a development of the grocery trade in the cities and larger towns the growing of their own fruits and vegetables. It was pointed out that they could give better quality, get a higher price, make a greater profit and finally get a great deal of pleasure out of running their little farm. A United States paper just to hand tells of a similar scheme being adopted by the Northern Pacific Railway. The superintendent of the dining car service of that road has advised his company to purchase a forty-acre tract of land in the vicinity of Billings upon which to raise potatoes and other vegetables used by that department, and if his recommendation is followed out a suitable site will be sought immediately, and the eastern Montana town will become one of the principal supply points for the dining car service of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

The Northern Pacific is not the only company which has come into the northwest for dining car supplies. The Burlington route now has a farm in northern Wyoming, close to the Montana line, where the potatoes used in the dining cars of the entire system are raised. No potato weighing less than four ounces is used on the Burlington, those smaller being rejected.

The Burlington experimented in many different localities before deciding upon its Wyoming farm and found that the quality and size of the potatoes grown there were far superior to those grown in any of the Eastern States through which the Burlington runs. The Yellowstone valley as a potato and vegetable section has caught the eye of the Northern Pacific, and the dining car farm will doubtless be an established fact within a short time.

TRADE SHOULD BE WELL REPRESENTED.

By an article in one of the news columns of this issue the grocers will observe that municipal life is attracting a large number of members of the grocery trade. Many of them were successful in the recent elections. This is as it should be. There is no business in any town or city which has more representatives in trade. There are more grocers than hardware or dry goods men and therefore their interests should be looked after as well as possible in the government of a municipality. Questions relative to the business section of a village, town or city frequently arise in council and they must be met by business men. If grocers predominate, they should have their representatives in council to state precisely their interests and their stand. It therefore must be gratifying to them to know that so many of their fellow tradesmen won municipal honors at the polls last Monday, and this should lend an impetus to others to follow in their footsteps.

LEMONS AND OLIVES AFFECTED.

Following the report that immense quantities of lemons were destroyed by the earthquake in Sicily there now comes the story that the olive crop in Italy has been a failure. If such is the case the Italians who are dependent to a large extent on the olive production will be sorely hit.

More recent news from the East indicates that the lemon market is not so badly off as at first reported. In Toronto, the wholesale fruit dealers affirm that although the price has gone up somewhat, this has been due principally to the report that so many had been destroyed. It now appears that the loss has not been so great, and that probably the advanced price will not last long. There is also a probability that owing to the destruction of Messina, the seaport shipping point will from henceforth be Palermo.

SUGAR PRICES IN 1908.

Grocers will be interested in looking over the past year to know the prices of sugar and the fluctuations during 1908. The prices given below at the various times mentioned are from the basis of the Montreal price. Extra standard granulated opened on Jan. 1st, 1908, at $4.30 with No. 1 yellow at $3.90. By the third of the same month granulated had advanced to $4.40 and the other in proportion. On Feb. 8th there was another advance of 10 cents and on March 6th the price went up to $4.60. On the 19th of March the figure of $4.70 was reached and peculiarly enough the following day there was another advance of ten cents. On April 10th the highest figure of the year was reached, being $4.90. A decline came on May 22nd of ten cents, but on the 27th of the same month the high price was again attained. Beginning with July there was a gradual decline again, with one exception, until the end of the year. On the 29th of that month it went down to $4.80 and on August 26th to $4.70. Oct. 8th saw it down ten cents further, but on the 23rd it was run up to $4.70 as a temporary stimulant to buying. Four days later the price was dropped to $4.60; on Nov. 6th, it was $4.50, and on Dec. 28th, the price was again reduced to $4.40. At present the market is steady with no immediate prospect of another change.

GERMANY AND THE BRITISH PREFERENCE.

From the Standard of London, England.

Great importance attaches to the formation in Berlin of a German-Canadian commercial association for the purpose of promoting trade between Germany and Canada. The association is the outcome of a conference of German merchants, manufacturers, and politicians which met here privately, and determined to take all possible measures to promote the growth of trade between the two countries. An influential executive committee, representing weighty financial and commercial interests, was elected.

The ultimate aim of this association may be defined as the development of such extensive trade relations between Germany and Canada that it shall become extremely disadvantageous to the latter country to maintain the existing preference in favor of Great Britain. Influential German merchants and manufacturers, who are interested in the increase of trade with Canada, recognize that nothing can satisfy them except the creation of conditions of equality under which Great Britain and Germany shall compete for trade with Canada. The efforts that the German-Canadian Association intend to make with this purpose have a political significance. Germany fears that any extension of preference between England and her colonies will inevitably entail a severe blow to their own interests.

Far-seeing Germans believe in the possibility of inserting the thin end of the wedge to prevent the extension of preference within the British Empire by such trade development as is proposed. German firms supplied half the steel rails for the Canadian Pacific Railway and large quantities of German steel material have been supplied for the construction of Canadian bridges. Messrs. Krupp, of Essen, supplied the axles of practically all the heavy railway carriages on the Canadian railway, so that enterprising Germans see great opportunities in a profitable extension of their trade with Canada.

LIKELY ADVANCE IN BROOMS.

There is a possibility that an advance will shortly be made in the price of brooms, The broom-corn crop in Illinois and in other States has fallen short of the average during the past season and in addition to this, it is stated that this crop has been cornered by Chicago firms. Chicago broom makers have advanced the price of their products 50 cents a dozen and a similar advance is expected in Canada in the near future. If the supply is as short as the market indicates and if the corn crop has been cornered as is rumored, the advance in brooms in Canada will probably be 75 cents per dozen.

CHANGING TRAVELING STAFF.

Commencing with the first of the year James Turner & Co., Hamilton, have made some changes in their traveling staff, and will be in future on the north shore in Cobalt district, represented by H. J. Geiger, who until recently was a resident of the Soo. In Hamilton Geo. G. Austin, formerly with Balfour, Smye & Co., has been added to their traveling staff.

The western staff remains the same, Messrs. Toms, Griffin and Jarvis representing the firm there. B. C. Thompson remains in the Niagara Peninsula. Mr. Wingfield, Georgian Bay points, to Hamilton, and Mr. Ballentine in the city of Hamilton.

Tht company's new branch in Arnprior under the management of Mr. Kennedy, is doing a gratifying business.

ONTARIO SUGAR CO. AFFAIRS.

A meeting of the shareholders of the Ontario Sugar Company was held in Berlin last week, but nothing was done towards resuming the operation of the factory. It appears that bonds are held by the Lake Erie Coal Co. to the amount of $130,000, and by private parties for $70,000. The other liabilities are said to be about $20,000, and the shareholders are not very hopeful of getting anything out of the business.

A WELL APPOINTED STRATFORD STORE

Empty Cartons Used to Make a Striking Form of Interior Decoration—Offices Raised Above Floor With a Passage Beneath.

The McCully & Haugh grocery is one of Stratford's largest and brightest stores. The main entrance is situated on N. Downie St., the busiest thoroughfare in the city, and the rear opens on Erie St. Upon entering the store, the very air you breathe is of a friendly nature, giving the impression of wholesomeness and freshness everywhere. You are sure of courteous attention, prompt service and a thank you with each purchase.

The decorations of the store are somewhat unique, being made up principally of cartons formed in crosses, circles, crowns, half-circles, squares and numerous other modes which make up a clean and attractive store. The counter tops are kept well polished, and fancy figs, dates and fruits are always on display.

The offices are elevated high enough in the centre of the store to allow the people to pass underneath. This makes a great saving in store room.

It is a great convenience to have two street entrances to a store. The wants of the farming trade are looked after at the rear, freight is received here, and all groceries are sent out this exit. The front show windows are not as in most stores, even with the street, but are built in about four feet to allow a fruit and vegetable display outside without infringing on the street space.

The country trade is a great feature of this store, tons of butter and thousands of dozens of eggs pass in and out its doors in a year. It is a great sight on a Saturday to watch the numerous farmers, baskets in hand, crushing their way through the customers to the butter and egg counter.

The proprietors of the store are both men with the glad hand and the cheerful smile. They know their customers and when it comes to salesmanship can make a sale where others fail. They are comparatively young men, but have had great success in a few years of business.

McCully & Haugh's Grocery. Stratford, Showing Method of Decoration by Cartons.

Davis Simoneau, grocer, Sherbrooke, Que., was considerably bruised last week in an accident while standing at a street corner waiting for a train to pass. The driver of a cab approaching from another direction suddenly saw the train and swerved his horse sideways, striking Mr. Simoneau.

The marriage was celebrated in Cannington, Ont., a few days ago at "Mulberry Cottage," the residence of A. J. Pipher, of his daughter, Mabel Minerva, to Wm. Nicholas, manager of the G. H. Woodward Biscuit Co., of Cannington. The company presented the groom with a handsome Morris chair and the employes gave him a silver service. Their honeymoon was spent in New York.

WAS EARLY PROMOTER OF THE VIADUCT.

Hugh Blain, Toronto, a Member of Original Committee Bringing Up the Scheme.

The announcement of the decision of the Railway Commission last Thursday that a viaduct was to be built to accommodate the growing traffic on the Esplanade in Toronto, was heartily welcomed by several members of the grocery trade as well as the citizens generally.

One of these, Hugh Blain, of Eby-Blain, Ltd., deserves a great deal of credit as being one of the original instigators of the plan.

"Yes," said Mr. Blain, when seen by the Grocer this week, "I felt like throwing up my hat when the decision was announced. It was the very gratifying culmination of a long fight for better facilities."

Continuing, Mr. Blain gave some account of the early efforts towards securing the viaduct.

"The matter was first brought up in '89 or '90," he said, "when the Board of Trade and the city, with E. F. Clarke as Mayor, employed A. M. Wellington, one of the best engineers of New York, to prepare plans for a steel structure. Two other prominent engineers pronounced on the matter at the time and practically the same scheme was recommended as is to be acted on by order of the Railway Commission. The matter, however, did not materialize. As a result of the recommendation of the committee, however, the present site of the C.P.R. freight sheds was chosen. The work at that time, too, was effectual in forcing the railways to keep the water-front clear."

Mr. Blain is enthusiastic as to the advantages of the viaduct and prophesies an enormous saving in cartage over the proposed bridge system.

INDEPENDENT CANNERS MEET.

The Independent Canners' Association held a meeting in Toronto yesterday to discuss several features of the year's business, and last evening were entertained at dinner at the National Club, and afterwards at the Harry Lauder concert by Rolph & Clark. The meeting will probably be continued to-day.

TORONTO GROCER DIES FROM BLOOD-POISONING.

After an illness of less than two weeks Thomas F. Spence, grocer, at the corner of Northcote and Afton Avenues, Toronto, died on Tuesday, January 5th, from blood-poisoning. Three days before Christmas, while working around the store, Mr. Spence had the misfortune to run a splinter into his hand. Shortly afterwards he awoke one night from sleep with the pain of the injured member. Blood-poisoning had set in and in spite of medical attention death followed. Mr. Spence was 35 years old and unmarried. He succeeded his father in business, who conducted a grocery store in the centre of the city for 30 years.

The funeral to Mount Pleasant cemetery on Thursday was private, being conducted by Rev. J. D. Fitzpatrick, of Wesley Methodist church, the pastor of the deceased.

JUSTIFICATION.

Judge—Why did you strike this man?

Prisoner—What would you do, Judge, if you kept a grocery store, and a man came in and asked if he could take a moving picture of your cheese?

Geo. Piper, Rebecca, near London, was presented with a gold watch by some of his friends on Tuesday evening, December 29, prior to his departure for Nilestown, where he is opening a general store. He purchased the business from C. W. Reynolds.

TORONTO INSURANCE RATES REDUCED

In the Wholesale and Business Section as Result of Instalation of New High-Pressure System—How the Trade Regards the Change.

The announcement of the reduction of fire insurance rates in the wholesale district in Toronto as a result of the instalation and tests of the new high-pressure system has been awaited with a good deal of interest by warehouse owners in the district affected. Shortly after the big fire five years ago the rates were raised with a jump and it has been a question as to just what effect the instalation of the new system would have on the underwriters' schedule and rates.

A reduction of from $1 to 75c on the key rate on the down-town district, extending from a short distance east of the east side of Simcoe Street to a short distance west of the west side of George Street, and from the Esplanade north to a short distance south of the south sides of Agnes Street and Wilton Avenue.

A reduction is also granted from 60c to 50c per $100 of insurance for the district from Bathurst to Sackville Streets and running north to College Street.

A great many of the warehouses will not participate in the general reduction, because it does not apply to fireproof buildings or those equipped with a sprinkler system. In such cases the buildings have a special rate of their own.

What Wholesale Grocers Say.

With a view to learning how the reduction was received among the wholesale grocery trade, the buildings of which lie within the district affected, The Grocer saw several of the wholesale grocers. As yet very few of them had looked into the matter, and it was difficult to get any idea as to whether the reduction was generally satisfactory. Inspectors were going through some of the buildings on Front Street on Wednesday and until their work was completed no definite announcement will be made by the companies. The impression seems to prevail, however, that the reduction is scarcely so large as was expected.

"I haven't looked into the matter yet," said Col. John I. Davidson, of Davidson-Hay, "and consequently cannot say as to how the reduction will affect us."

"The inspectors are going through our building now," said Fred Hudson, of the Canada Brokerage Co., "and until they report something I cannot say what the result of the reduction will be."

Some Disappointment Expressed.

"We are a little disappointed," said Hugh Blain, of Eby-Blain & Co., "While no definite announcement was made, I think it was generally believed that the key rate would be reduced one-half after the instalation of the new system. The new rate is somewhat of a concession, but scarcely what we had hoped for. Even with the reduction the rates are considerably above what they were before the fire, so far as I can estimate at present."

"I haven't looked into the matter at all carefully," said H. P. Eckardt, "but the reduction is about what we expected. Somebody has to make money in these things and you can't get any too much out of the companies."

"It will mean considerable difference to us," said W. H. Millman, "and the new rate is about what I expected. I think there will probably be another drop in the rates later on."

"Our insurance is handled through agents," said James Ince, of Perkins, Ince & Co., "and I am not very conversant with the details. The reduction is acceptable and should mean about 20 per cent. difference to us."

"We were not in the same building before the fire and consequently cannot compare the new rate with that existing then," said Major John Sloan. "We will save, however, about 20 per cent. by the reduction. I think it was scarcely what was expected,"

"We will profit somewhat by the new rate, of course," said T. Kinnear, "As yet I cannot say to just how great an extent. It should mean about 20 per cent. difference to us. I have no idea how the new rate will compare with that in existence before the fire."

What Insurance Men Think.

John A. Robertson and the officers of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association thought the new rates would meet with popular approval. Some of the dailies, however, in reporting the matter, had made a mistake in stating that the reduction would amount to 25 per cent. The new rate would mean a reduction of 25 cents where the $1 key rate was used as a basis. This, of course, would be a reduction of 25 per cent. if all conditions prescribed by the association were met, but the very great majority of risks did not come up to the standard required, and so something must be added to the key rate to cover the extra hazards. For instance, a fire policy is taken on a building in the congested area where the key rate is $1. The building does not come up to the standard set, because the walls are not of the required thickness, the ceilings are wooden, and the stairways are not enclosed. These hazards make the risk of fire greater, and so certain sums are added to the key rate because of these deficiencies. In some cases where manufacturing is carried on or chemicals carried, the rate would come to $2.50. It is on this $2.50 that the reduction of 25 cents is made to find the new or reduced rate. In other words, the $1 key rate is reduced to 75 cents, and the 60 cent key to 50 cents. The reduction covers all policies made or renewed since January 1 last, but no rebate or reduction is allowed on standing policies.

The reduction is made although the civic fire and waterworks departments have not come quite up to the requirements asked for by the association. The association asked that four four-million gallon pumps or three six-million gallon pumps be installed. This would give 12,000,000 gallons of water a day in case one of the pumps gave out. The city has put in only two five-thousand gallon pumps. However, we believe it is the intention to augment these, though possibly two years will go by before the additional service will be ready.

No calculation could be made which would show the saving to be affected to merchants and manufacturers by reason of the reduction; nor could Mr. Robertson state how the rate would compare with those in force before the big fire. In the first place, lighter stocks are being carried. One instance alone shows that a prominent wholesale dry goods firm has $200,000 less stock than this time last year, and in the second place Mr. Robertson was not in his present position at the time of the fire. Insurance rates have very much advanced all over the world during the past five years, particularly so in the cities and larger towns, though Mr. Robertson did not think they were any too high.

Reduction Not Wholly Earned.

Chas. McNaught, of Reed, Shaw & McNaught, insurance agents, said the association was but keeping faith with the promise made nearly five years ago, when they agreed that on condition the Toronto civic authorities carried out certain improvements with regard to the fire department and waterworks a reduction of 50 cents would be made from the $1 key rate in force in the congested district in Toronto. A number of conditions were stipulated, such as the high pressure system, more hydrants, more fire engines, a duplicate reservoir, a duplex set of pumps capable of raising 24,000,000 gallons of water per day, or, in case of a breakdown in one set, the other could raise 12,000,000. There were a number of other stipulations. Each of these conditions had a certain value, the total being placed at 50 cents. At the meeting at which the reduction was discussed those present considered that but 23 cents reduction had been earned. All, however, agreed to the 25 cents reduction. This will mean that the $1 key rate on stocks and the 75 cent rate on buildings will be reduced to a 75 cent and 50 cent key rate.

Compared with the general rate in force before the big fire of five years ago, the reduced rate to-day is slightly higher, but there are buildings now erected on the burned-over area which have a rating slightly above 30 cents, which is a much better figure than could be obtained before the fire. These buildings are fireproof in construction, with walled-in stairways, have fire escapes, water curtains, etc., and because of the little hazard are given even a better rating than the new key rate. Considering the risks taken by fire insurance companies the old $1 rate was not too high, though there may have been some few individual cases where injustice appeared to have been done.

Asked as to the working of the high pressure system, Mr. McNaught said that while the instalation of the new high pressure system in Toronto has brought about a reduction of insurance rates the loss to a merchant in case of fire may be just as heavy where the high pressure is used unless the system is handled with care. By the high pressure system a fire can be prevented from crossing from one side of a street to the other, but some little while ago in one of the big New York buildings there was a fire which did $400 damage, but the damage by water amounted to about $50,000.

WAS BROOM-MAKER FOR MANY YEARS.

Henry F. Perry, for many years head broom-maker at the Central Prison, died on Tuesday, Jan. 5th, at his residence, 21 Callahie Street, Toronto, He was 84 years of age and for 22 of these he was in charge of the manufacture of brooms at the Central Prison. His connection with the trade dates back to the early days when every broom turned out was made by hand. He knew the business thoroughly and attended to the work at the prison from the buying of the corn to the shipping of the manufactured goods. Many of the improvements in the machines for manufacture in Canada are results of the inventions made by Mr. Perry. He was always serious in his business and for this reason he was most successful in his work.

CORRESPONDENCE

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

January 2.—It is safe to say that never before in the history of Georgetown was there more extensive preparations made for the Christmas trade. The traveling, too, was very good, and the farmers seemed to have money to burn. Yet we have heard many merchants remark that considering the conditions they never saw so few farmers in town during the Christmas week. Notwithstanding this drawback to trade it was much better than last year.

Eggs are 25c here, and butter 27c. The former is much more plentiful than it has been for a long time and it is expected to drop a cent or two very soon.

We understand that Arthur Jenkins, who has been associated with his father in W. W. Jenkins, Son & Co., is to move up to the store on King Street. It is rumored that W. W. Jenkins will sell out the stock in the Water Street store and retire from the business. He is one of the most successful men in Georgetown, and made his business pay.

A. P. Hobbs and John Condon have entered into partnership and will conduct a general meat business on Water Street. Mr. Hobbs has had a long experience in the meat business.

A. Maclean Co. had a very attractive Christmas window. In the centre was an old-fashioned fireplace constructed of packages of cereals and other goods that lent themselves to construction. Spruce logs were placed ready for the match in the morning and Santa Claus with a whole load of presents and toys was to be seen in a corner. The mantle was neatly arranged. On each side was a well-filled stocking—one a boy's, the other a girl's. Around the mantle were displayed gifts of all kinds for each member of the family. On each side was a well-filled Christmas tree, and the floor of the window was decorated with nuts, candies, etc.

Howard MacDonald who has been in the West for the past two years returned home some time ago and has taken a position in the store of A. A. MacDonald & Bros. Howard is a first-class man and the trade is pleased to see him back again.

William Hobbs, meat merchant, reports an exceptionally large demand for poultry.

A. Maclean & Co. offered their customers something of a novelty, in those parts, in the line of meats—moose steak straight from the forests of New Brunswick. Judging by the sale they had their experiment was appreciated.

J. C. Manuel, proprietor of the Corner Grocery, is traveling through the Province in connection with some Baptist Church work. He knows how to handle a proposition of this kind and will no doubt be successful.

John McGougan who is managing the business formerly conducted by the late Hon. Daniel Gordon, has made great improvements and one would scarcely recognize the old store.

We wish the publishers and readers of The Canadian Grocer the compliments of the season and a full measure of success during 1909.

A BARRIE GROCER AND HIS STORE

Jas. Vair, One of the Town's Leading Mercantile Men, Has Built Up an Excellent Business—Likely to Be the Town's Mayor Next Year.

In Barrie the name of James Vair stands for one of the town's most successful business men. Born near Dunfermline, Scotland, he came to Toronto forty years ago, and from there he moved to Barrie, where two years later he started in a small way in partnership with a Mr. Coulter. The business continued to grow till about twenty years ago when Mr. Vair launched into business for himself. Some years later Mr. Vair started branch stores in Allandale and Elmvale, also in Bracebridge, Parry Sound, Gravenhurst and Sault Ste. Marie, and in Toronto. All of these he has since disposed of, the later branch in Toronto, namely the Vair Produce Company, to John Craig, who for a number of years was behind his counter in the Barrie store. Besides the grocery business Mr. Vair also has one of the largest dry goods establishments in the town, under the name of James Vair and Sons.

Mr. Vair has paid considerable attention to politics and was elected Mayor of the town at the elections on Monday. Last June Mr. Vair suffered a severe loss in the death of his eldest son, Wm. L., who was at the time of his death running a large store at Santa Deigo, California. A picture of the interior of the grocery store shows the neatness and cleanness of Mr. Vair's store's appearance. He at present employs forty-five hands and does a large jobbing trade as well as retail.

In winter use warm colorings for backings, such as reds, purples and browns. In summer use cool tones like greens, blues, buff, etc. The proper colors have a comforting effect on the eye, but if they clash with the season they cause a feeling of repulsion.

Card Records for Catalogues, Costs, Etc.

Howard R. Wellington Gives Some Practical Suggestions on Labor-saving Office Methods—How to Treat Expenses in Books at Close of the Year.

A correspondent has written asking for information on the best card system for keeping track of catalogues and also for stock instead of using a stock book.

As to filing catalogues, the only tangible method, owing to the variety of sizes and shapes, is to have a filing box, extra large size preferred, together with large division cards, forming pockets, arranged alphabetically, into which the catalogue can be dropped, according to the firm's name from whom the goods have been purchased, and not according to the class of goods covered, as is sometimes done. If the proprietor possesses a low desk, one of the large drawers on the right-hand side can be used to advantage for this purpose. Frequently a buyer will run across a certain line of goods required for stock and has, for the moment, perhaps forgotten from what concern he has purchased previously. To overcome this difficulty, we would suggest using a card index somewhat similar to Fig. 1, arranged alphabetically according to the line of goods bought or sold, and giving in addition the purchases, sales, stock on hand at any period, concerns from whom particular lines are purchased, cost and selling prices of each line.

Both sides of such a card could be ruled, and with the three sections on each side of the card, it could be used for a considerable time before it is necessary to make a transfer. The purchases could be posted each day from the purchase invoices or periodically—say every week—and the sales posted from the sales invoices and also from the cash sales slips, the balance being the stock on hand, is extended when posting is finished. A great many merchants may argue that it does not pay to adopt such a system, but the results obtained will more than compensate for the small amount of detail involved. By using some such method the stock may be watched more carefully from the office and these records used as a guide when ordering goods. Some special check mark should be used on the sales and purchase books to indicate that the quantities had been posted to the stock card.

We find that a number of merchants are adopting the plan of marking the cost of each article in cipher. when checking same off with the purchase invoice, in addition to the selling price in plain figures. This is an excellent plan for two reasons—first, it enables the head salesman to make a slight reduction, if necessary to a sale, and, second, it will save a great deal of time at stock-taking, when the quantity and cost price may be called in at one time.

Expense Items When Closing Books.

When we approach the end of our financial year, there are a number of expense items, such as telephone, rent, taxes, insurance, stationery stock, outstanding, either prepared or due. If these items can be paid within the year, so that each year's business will assume its share of such expenses, no provision need be made for outstandings, but, as a rule, there are some items which of necessity are not to be treated in this way, and which must be carried forward either as an asset or a liability. In bringing these items forward, if the amount is due or a certain proportion of it is due, that amount is brought down as a liability; on the other hand, if the amount is prepayed or unearned it is brought down as an asset. These items appear on the statement under the heading "Expenses Prepayed or Unearned," or "Expenses Due."

DISASTROUS FIRE IN THE WEST.

Codville Company's Warehouse at Brandon Burned—Stores Destroyed at Rossburn.

Two disastrous fires occurred on Monday night, Jan. 4th, in the West, resulting in considerable losses to an important Brandon wholesale warehouse and to several merchants in Rossburn, Man. In the former, Codville & Company's warehouse was burned to the ground, the total damage being estimated at $135,000. Of this amount the stock itself was valued at $60,000 and the building $75,000. The warehouse was situated near the C.P.R. tracks and has been erected for some six or seven years. It was considered the best in Brandon. The fire was caused from a defective chimney and although the firemen worked diligently the efforts were of no avail and the entire extensive stock was consumed.

At Rossburn, Man., on the same night, with the temperature at 40 below zero, fire started in the block of stores owned by B. W. Johnstone and occupied by him as a general store. The block was completely destroyed, including a store occupied by E. A. Jones, baker and confectioner, as well as others. Many of the inmates barely escaped with their lives. The loss was about $30,000, with some insurance.

E. O. Manchee, formerly advertising manager of the Salada Tea Co., Toronto, and now connected with the J. F. Cairns Co., Saskatoon, is taking a month's holidays and spending the time among his old friends in Toronto.

Montreal, January 6, 1909.

The usual dullness which succeeds the holiday season has been felt in practically all lines. There are, however, a few cases where this is not the case, but it is quite the exception and not the rule. In discussing the past year with various houses there is a universal opinion expressed that the year, taken altogether, has not been a satisfactory one, but all seem agreed on the opinion that there has been a distinct tendency toward better things during the last three months.

This indication may be regarded as something entirely separate from the usual Christmas impetus which trade receives. During the last week some changes have taken place in the market which are worthy of note. The provision market, which has not been in a very healthy state for some time, has shown signs of rejuvenation and there is an active competition for hogs among buyers. This condition is due to the small supplies arriving at present. Poultry prices have firmed up somewhat owing to small supplies. California raisins are easier, also Hallowee dates. Sugar is hardly steady, although no change has taken place during the week. Beans and peas are scarce here, consequently the tone of the market for both is decidedly strong. Eggs are being firmly held at advanced prices in all quarters. The demand continues good, with stocks small. Butter and cheese remain fairly interesting.

SUGAR—The sugar situation is rather uncertain at this time of the year owing to the customary January dullness. Local refiners report a fair trade passing at figures as last reported. The New Year's cut of 10c did not alter the volume of trade perceptibly.

TEA—In Japans the market is moving well after the turn of the year, several sales being reported. The losing of the markets in the East has created a steadier tone, and the new year's business is opening fairly good, for the cheaper lines of blacks especially. Pingsueys are receiving the most attention. Prices have not yet shown any changes.

DRIED FRUITS—Cleaned currants continue to sell well. A local house has lately secured some Valencias in the New York market. Dates continue in good demand. An advance in currants is hinted at in some quarters, as the market in England has firmed up. Malaga raisins have been good sellers lately. Choice seeded California raisins are a shade easier according to quotations of some houses this week.

SPICES—Black peppers, which have been decidedly strong lately, are easier this week, as the minimum price is 2c lower than last week. The Christmas strain having been passed the pepper markets have relaxed slightly, although the primary markets continue strong. White peppers are a shade stronger in the lower grades. Ground cloves are a shade easier owing to a smaller demand. Cream of tartar is being quoted at a lower figure this week also. Other lines have not altered.

BEANS AND PEAS—"None to be had" is what one dealer stated regarding the situation for both beans and peas. The supply is very limited for both. In the case of beans the market has advanced 10c, while peas are firmly held at last quotations, with a strong undertone to the market.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL — Canned fruits, which have been in good demand for a long time, have fallen off remarkably during the week, and are now decidedly dull. Canned vegetables are in fair demand only. Enquiry for Canadian canned meats is improving, while canned fish is somewhat unseasonable just now, and the usual dullness is being experienced.

TORONTO—Lines of vegetables, including peas, corn, tomatoes and beans are passing off very well this week and the demand is excellent. From now on business in these goods is expected to be brisk. Other lines, however, are rather neglected just at present.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Steady.

Teas—Good demand for common Ceylons.

Canned Goods—Vegetables selling well.

Collections—Fair.

Toronto, Jan. 7.

While it is almost too soon to make any estimate of the year's business the reports from the wholesale houses this week are very encouraging. Up to the time of writing the travelers have only been out four days but orders are coming in rather freely and all signs seem to point to a resumption of active business after the holiday quietness in the wholesale houses. Retailers are complaining of dullness and undoubtedly business seems a little quiet with them after the holiday rush. Reports from all sections of the country indicate a splendid Christmas business and with practically all the manufacturing concerns in operation money should be fairly easy and business good.

The staple grocery markets have shown little change during the week. Provisions are a little more active, the lines of green fruits and vegetables in season are passing off well, and the cold snap which has just arrived should brighten up the flour and cereal markets which have been rather dull through the holiday season and, indeed, for a few weeks previous.

Collections are reported as very fair, showing that money is at least somewhat free among the retailers.

SUGAR—The refined market is quiet with no great demand as yet and no prospect of immediate change.

Willett & Gray, in their review of the situation, say: "Europe closes with beet sugar at 10s. 3d., say 2¼d. advance for December, but unchanged for January at 10s. 1½d. Cubas for January-February shipments are offered at 2 5-16c c. & f., 96 degrees test, without interesting buyers. The work of harvesting is progressing, there now being 48 Centrals grinding, against 33 last week; but receipts are still small. The American beet crop was so badly damaged by the drought in some sections early in the season, that we have been obliged to reduce our estimate of the total out-turn from 440,000 tons to 390,000 tons, as we stated on October 22nd, might be expected."

The visible supply, as estimated on Dec. 30, was: Total stock of Europe and America, 3,301,434 tons, against 3,149,706 tons last year at the same uneven dates. The increase of stock is 151,728 tons, against an increase of 189,366 tons last week. Total stocks and afloats together show a visible supply of 3,317,434 tons, against 3,176,706 tons last year, or an increase of 140,728 tons.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—There is quite a demand for proprietary lines of these goods as is usual at this time of the year. Consumption of bulk syrups seems to be falling off, however, and there is little doing. Prices are steady, as quoted:

TEAS—The local market has been quite active the past week; with good demand for common grades of Ceylons. Not much interest is displayed, however, in other lines. The firm feeling in the market still continues.

Kearley & Tongue, Colombo, in their review of the markets for December, throw some light on the situation as follows: "Shipments for November were behind the estimates to the extent of one million and a half pounds, principally owing to unusual dry weather which has prevented the heavy flushing expected about this time of the year. It is now fairly certain the total crop from Ceylon will barely equal last year's. The crop from India is expected to be less than estimated a month or two back. These two facts have been the cause of the sudden firmness of all the tea markets. In Colombo common teas have firmed and there has been a sharp rise for grades above common, while fine has remained about steady, except where improvement in quality secured higher prices. Early in November common teas were neglected, and distinctly easier until the last sale of the month, when the demand improved and prices firmed. There has not been a very large quantity of low teas made, the quality generally being above the average. Broken medium teas were not in strong demand early in the month and were relatively the cheapest teas to be bought, showing far better value than leaf teas. There has, however, been a sharp rise, as much as 3 to 4 cents increase being paid. Leaf teas are also dearer than they were at the beginning of the month, the Russian demand being now more pronounced. For a few weeks many high-grown teas showed deterioration, and consequently buyers were not so eager for them. There are, however, signs of improvement, and in the last two sales there have been some very choice flavoury teas offered and several high prices paid."

COFFEE—Local demand continues exceedingly good, and coffee consumption in Canada seems to be growing. Locally, prices are steady. Willett & Gray, in reviewing the general situation, say: "Additional confirmation has come from Brazil that the growing crop in Santos has sustained permanent damage, showing the effect of the long drought previous to the blossoming period weakening the trees. This feature was so generally ignored right along that an awakening to the true conditions will bring new interest to the article. Estimates usually appear in the early part of January when conclusions can be more accurately drawn, but even then the growing crop will be subject to varying climatic changes before coming to maturity. Nothing new is reported about the growing Rio crop. The movement of the current crop shows Santos receipts about 7,500,000 and Rio receipts 1,850,000 bags for the first six months—and, according to the generally accepted estimates of 9 millions for Santos and 2½ millions for Rio, the quantity indicated remaining in the interior is quite small, so that the prospects for receipts in the ensuing six months are only about 1,500,000 bags at Santos and 650,000 bags at Rio. Much importance attaches to this with the new crop six months away and none of the Government coffees will be offered to the public for twelve months or more. The general tone of the market begins to reflect these intrinsic features of the situation. Apart from the speculative tendency there is evidence of more activity in the trade proper, with the idea of securing desirable assortments which always becomes more difficult from this time forward. It is well known that there are no surplus stocks available of good selections in Europe or the States while both countries will certainly be strong competitors for that which may be obtained in Santos. It is the case to-day. The world's visible will show a constant steady decrease from month to month so that on its own merits coffee justifies greater confidence and improved values. The healthy undertone now in evidence, it is believed, will become more manifest after the turn of the year."

DRIED FRUITS—While stocks of some lines, such as peels, dates and figs are light, there is probably enough of these goods on hand to supply the demand through the season, now that the Christmas demand is over. Prunes are somewhat called for. Other lines are quiet.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

The goods which Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, are offering the trade this week are such as to interest wise buyers. They are offering canned goods, teas and other lines at bargain prices. Their famous Soleil branch canned goods is quoted in their advertisement as unparalleled for quality. It will pay merchants to read their interesting announcement in another part of this issue.

THE GUILD CASE HEARING.

As we go to press the argument in the long-delayed Wholesale Grocers' Guild case, the evidence of which was taken several weeks ago, is being heard before Chief Justice Falconbridge at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. The hearing began yesterday, Thursday. A full account of the argument will be given in next week's issue.

TRAVELER WINS TRIP TO OLD COUNTRY.

There's a pleasant little trip coming along in the spring to S. H. Moore, who sells Comfort Soap all over Toronto and Hamilton for Pugsley, Dingman & Co. This prize is the result of a contest inaugurated some eighteen months ago by the company among its travelers, when such a trip was promised to the man whose sales during that period showed the largest percentage of increase. Since then there has been a merry little war among the traveling staff, with a good deal of friendly rivalry. The result was announced on Monday of this week. The prize is well deserved, for Mr. Moore is known among the trade as one of the hardest working travelers who call on them. He will leave in April, taking Mrs. Moore with him, and will spend four or five weeks in Great Britain.

A REVOLT AGAINST THE TYPEWRITER.

The following letter from a recent issue of the New York Sun is rather interesting, as showing the viewpoint of some back country merchants. This was written by an old trader in the mountains of Kentucky to one of the woolen mills in New Jersey:

"Jentelmen—i want you to understand that I aint no dam fool when i bort that Bill from that Read-Headed eagent of yours.

"He told me that you sent him all the way from cyncynata to get that order. I thot that he wuz lying and I bort all my goods from the Jersey and he told me he sold the Jersey and would sell me just like he sold the Jersey.

"Now you writes me a printed letter and sez if i send u the munny u will send me the goods.

"i recon you will most enny durn fool ud do that. I would not mind a Bit sendin u the munny and risk gettin the goods, but when i recolekt how you and your eagent done me, i refuse to do it.

"If you would have treated me right and not of sent me that newspaper printed letter like i was a dam fool and could not read riten, I would have tuck the goods and pade the cash. Now i dont want no more of yor printed letters.

"I wont stand sich from no house. i am fifty-six years ole the last of next comin january and the furst man has got to put my back on the ground yit.

"i may not have as much larnin in gramma as you got, but i can wip you or enny uther dam yanky that wants to try writen me a printed letter.

Yours truly."

FRENCH TREATY WILL PASS.

With some modifications it is expected that the Franco-Canadian treaty will be ratified by the French Senate. This information has been received in a despatch from Paris this week and the prospects for the sanctioning of the proposed treaty seem to be very bright. Hon. W. S. Fielding is still in Paris conferring with members of the French Government respecting the treaty. The matter has been before the French Senate for months and has aroused considerable interest in Canada among business men.

Gerald Larkin, of the Salada Tea Co., Toronto, returned this week from a ten days' business trip to New York.

WESTERN SUGAR KING DEAD

The Late Claus Spreckels, Worth 50 Millions, Began as a Grocer—Wanted to Be Something and Somebody.

Death on December 26 claimed one of the most prominent figures in the sugar trade in the Western United States in the person of Claus Spreckels, a Pacific Coast millionaire, and sugar king, at the ripe old age of 81 years.

Running away from his home in Lamstadt, Germany, at the age of 18 years to avoid being drafted into the German army, he came to America and began lift at Charleston, S.C., in 1848, with but $3 in his pocket. His career, therefore, from clerk in a grocery store to a sugar millionaire is one to be looked upon with pride by any grocer and deserves the attention of all.

Claus Spreckels wanted "to be something and somebody." He had moped along in wooden shoes behind his father's plough almost since he had been able to walk, and like the seed he sowed he had begun to feel like spreading out. This was why he left the family fireside to seek his fortunes in a world new to him. For a couple of weeks he was unable to find work in Charleston, and by the time he did a large portion of his $3 was gone. His first job netted him merely his board, but without much further delay he began "to do something." He proved his worth to his employer and during the second month he received a salary of $4 per week. The third month he was picked up by another grocer at $8 per week.

His time was given solely to the assistance of his employer. He wrestled with boxes and used the scoop and managed the scales so carefully that when his employer, 18 months later, was giving up the business, Spreckels bought him out on credit, and 12 months later had paid the debt.

His store in South Carolina was, of course, made a success, and shortly after he bought a store in New York. He had held the latter property for a comparatively brief time, when he had laid aside enough money to take himself and wife on a visit to the old folks in the Fatherland.

Later, when business conditions looked rosy in California, seven years after the discovery of gold, he took the $4,000 which he had saved, crossed the continent and invested it in a brewery. Money was made in this venture also, so selling his store in New York he settled permanently in the West.

The Secrets of His Success.

To make such progress as has been recorded, a man must have ways and means peculiar to a few. A business associate of Claus Spreckels for many years says one of the secrets of his success was that he seldom had all his eggs in one basket; that he always tried to keep some cash on hand, and that he never went into anything until he was thoroughly ready for it—knew his ground and built his forts.

After making money out of the brewery business he looked around for something new and hit upon the making of sugar. California was on the line of imports from the Hawaiian Islands, and Spreckels saw that it had a position of advantage for the handling of cane. But, nevertheless, he retained his interest in the money-making brewery until he made certain of the success of the manufacture of sugar. The experiment proved profitable and he let go the beer and rye and went at the cane with the indomitable courage of the Teuton.

Knowing that mastery of the details of an undertaking is the first requisite to success, Mr. Spreckels went to New York and secured employment in a sugar refinery there. When he had learned all about the business he wished to know he retraced his steps to California and organized the Bay Sugar Refinery Company—the actual beginning of the vast fortune he eventually accrued. The company prospered, but his associates were not big enough for its chief promoter, and after a quarrel over the management he left.

Leaving California with his family he returned to Europe to make an exhaustive study of sugar and became an ordinary employe at Magdeburg. By 1867 he was again in the refinery business in California, operating in connection with his brother, the California sugar refinery. Commencing with a wooden structure, adopted to the extent of current operations, in three years the building was enlarged four times. At the end of four years he had an establishment with a capacity of 800 tons of sugar per day.

Foresight and Judgment.

By applying all his energies and his superior judgment to every phase of the sugar business and by operating in the latest scientific manufacturing principles, he was able to reach out into the general field of competition and bring that within his control. During his career as a sugar manufacturer he went to the Hawaiian Islands, and by a master stroke became the virtual owner of the sugar cane growing of the Pacific Ocean.

Mr Spreckels recently returned from New York to his Western home. On his arrival he was suffering from the effects of a cold contracted while in the East, and which ultimately developed into pneumonia. His estate is estimated at from $40.000,000 to $50,000,000, the income alone from the estate having been stated to exceed $250,000 a year.

Arthur H. Clements, sales agent Allredie Pure Food Co., spent the latter part of the week in Ottawa.

HONORS FOR C. A. CHOUILLOU.

Montreal Business Man Created Chevalier of Legion of Honor.

Word has been received by the French Consul in Montreal that the French Government has created C. A. Chouillou a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

It is not often that The Grocer has an opportunity of congratulating any of its friends on receiving such an eminent distinction as this. At the same time it might be mentioned that the French Government should be congratulated upon the good judgment which it has shown in the selection of a gentleman who is so worthy of this distinguished honor.

During his twenty-two years' residence in Canada, Mr. Chouillou has been conspicuous for the services which he has rendered his adopted country and France.

Mr. Chouillou came to America in 1887, on a special mission from his Government and subsequently settled in this country. He was one of the founders of the Chambre de Commerce Francaise, of which he was one of the first presidents, and which office he holds to-day. In 1907 he was the chief organizer and president of the Congress of French Chambers of Commerce in various parts of the world, which met in Bordeaux, France. In addition to these positions of honor and trust he is vice-president of the Alliance Francaise, a member of the Board of Trade and a commander of the Order of Nichan Tftikhan.

C. A. CHOUILLOU.

Of Montreal, Recently Created Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the French Government.

Mr. Chouillou has long been noted for his efforts to promote commercial relations between France and Canada. During his residence in Canada he has conducted a large exporting and importing business, and is ranked among the prominent business men of Montreal. The new Chevalier may be truly regarded as one of the factors which have made possible that splendid condition known as the Franco-British "entente-cordiale."

WILL HOLD "SNACK" IN ERIN.

Executive of Club Decides and Makes Arrangements at Annual Meeting.

The memories of the jolly times enjoyed at the Drummers' Snacks in the little town of Alton, Ont., for a number of summers, was brought back on Wednesday, December 30, at a dinner and meeting of the Snack Club Executive at the Queen's, Toronto.

Since the fires at Alton, by which the Algie Mills were burned in the early fall and when several stores were destroyed a few weeks later, it has been a foregone conclusion that the "Snack" could no longer be held in Alton. The meeting was exceedingly important, therefore, as deciding on a new location, and it was gratifying to note that the largest attendance on record was on hand. After full justice had been done to the dinner the committee immediately got down to business, with President Bob Asher in the chair. John Gibson, president of the Canadian Travelers' Association, conveyed the friendly greetings of that association in a neat speech.

The financial report of the "Snack" showed an encouraging balance of $106.

In reviewing the summer's outing, a resolution was brought in by "Billy" Colville, seconded by R. Algie, in appreciation of the large part taken by the Hamilton contingent in last year's "Snack."

Then the matter of the place of holding next year's "Snack" came up. J. H. Wildfong presented a largely-signed petition from the citizens of Erin, asking for the celebration in that town next summer. Erin offers numerous advantages, as, for instance, a park which would be particularly suitable for the outing, and its citizens are quite enthusiastic over the prospect of having the jolly travelers in their town for a day or two.

After a good deal of discussion it was moved by J. H. Wildfong and R. Algie, that the "Snack" of 1909 be held at Erin on the last Friday and Saturday of July. An amendment by Dr. Algie and Sol. Walters, suggested that the outing be held in Hamilton. The amendment was lost, and Erin will consequently have all the honors next summer.

With the place settled the following committees were appointed to look after the arrangements for next year:

Sports—John Charles, Tom Gloucester, G. Campbell, R. E. Smith, W. Meen, Dr. Algie, Wm. Dore, C. C. Smye, J. H. Wildfong.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, January 7, 1909.

Both the British cheese importer and the Canadian exporter seem to be playing a waiting game, each intently watching the other. Several attempts have been made to come to an agreement but so far this seems to have been out of the question. The English buyers are holding up the expected large arrivals of New Zealand stock to the Canadian exporter, with a view of bringing him to their terms, but so far those on this side have failed to appreciate the danger of the situation. The present light stocks, as compared with previous years, point to the fact that there will be a good trade at home, in case the export demand fails them. So think the Canadian shippers anyway. Locally prices rule steady at 12¼c to 12½c for Westerns and 11¾c to 12c for Easterns. Receipts since May 1 up to the present have been 1,998,723 boxes, against 2,406,852 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

Locally the butter trade is in good shape, and supplies are arriving freely. At the present moment there is an admirable relationship between supply and demand, which is keeping the market in an easy steady condition. Large roll stock is in especially good demand, and stock is arriving in sufficiently large quantities to supply the demand. There is a firm feeling in the price of the extra fine September and early October makes, which are being strongly held. Locally quotations rule steady at 25½c to 26c and 26½c to 27c is being asked for September makes.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

Toronto, January 7, 1909.

There seems considerable prospect that the quietness which has existed among Canadian packers during the past month or two will not last much longer. During this time the Danish and Irish shippers have been keeping the British market, which in the dull condition of business has not been at all active, quite well supplied. There has been little demand for Canadian bacon and consequently comparatively little going over. During the past week or so, however, the overseas market has come to assume a more receptive basis and it seems likely that for a while at least there will be considerably heavier stocks shipped over by Canadian packers. A slight stimulus to this business is expected, however, at this time of the year.

This feeling is reflected somewhat in the prices packers are paying for hogs this week. The run has fallen off rather materially the last few weeks and with better local demand packers' stocks were passing off fairly well. With the prospect of larger export shipments the need for more hogs is felt and the price has gone up till this week $6.10 to $6.15 is being offered. This is expected to bring out a fairly good run.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Hogs have advanced, owing to the limited supplies arriving and the active competition among buyers for what stock there is. So far prices of hog products have not been affected. Some houses have been selling very heavy clear pork at cut prices, which has resulted in slightly lower quotations being made by most firms.

EGGS—Strength has been imparted to this market by the fact that advices from various points in Ontario, Quebec and the West indicate the quantity in storage to be very much below last year at this time, and owing to the fact that it will be the end of January before the new laid stock begins to arrive. In this time there will be a good chance for local stocks to be completely depleted. In view of this, together with the increasing demand, local dealers have increased their prices from one to two cents a dozen all around. Some claim that the market will ease up sooner than is expected as they think there is a possibility of the new stock arriving before the time anticipated. This, of course, depends, in a large measure on the state of the weather from now on.

POULTRY—Although demand has fallen off considerably since the holidays, the supplies arriving have been small, so the price has firmed up some. The trade is in good condition at present, as supplies are easily taken care of. Hens are up ½c, while turkeys are worth 3c lb. more than a week ago.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—A slightly easier feeling exists in almost every provision line and a slight decline is noted in the price of bacon and hams. Lard, too, is a shade easier. Supplies are fairly free, though packers would like to see more hogs available, as they consider present prices a little high for packing just now. Nevertheless, the hogs are being put down. Demand is not so good even as last week. In fact a quietness pervades the whole market, although there is no dissatisfaction expressed as to the amount of trading being done. Dealers are not yet through talking of how much money they might have made had poultry supplies been more plentiful at the Christmas season.

EGGS — Decidedly the best line handled by provision men just now is eggs. The West has taken and is taking large quantities. Within the past ten days two cars have gone forward to Winnipeg and another to Calgary. Port Arthur took a car and before the end of the month one or two more cars will go to Winnipeg for distribution from that centre. St. John, N.B., recently took a car of Toronto eggs. All this has had a tendency to keep prices here firm, especially as local demand keeps pretty active. Strictly new laids have gone up to 45 cents and even limed eggs have advanced a cent. Select storage are the sellers just now and are better stock than new arrivals. The conditions prevailing last year are apt to be repeated before long, and it may be that some United States eggs will come in bidding for a share of trade. These eggs are hardly as good as our own, being more watery and having less strength, but the price is a little more attractive. However, these eggs

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

The Banana, How it Grows and Where it Comes From — One Hundred and Seventy-six Varieties—A Productive Plant.

THE BANANA.—No more popular fruit is sold by the grocer than the banana. The tree on which it grows is a gigantic herbaceous plant originally a native of the tropical parts of the East, but now cultivated in all tropical and sub-tropical climates. It forms a spurious kind of stem, rising 15 or 20 feet by the sheathing bases of the leaves, the blades of which sometimes measure as much as 10 feet in length and 2 feet across. The stem bears several clusters of fruit, which sometimes resemble cucumbers in size and form. It dies down after the fruit matures. The weight of the produce of a single cluster is sometimes as much as 80 lbs., and it has been calculated that the productiveness of the banana as compared with wheat is as 133 to 1, and as against potatoes 44 to 1.

The varieties of bananas cultivated in sprouts or suckers arise. A year or two after the plant becomes established it begins to flower, the fruit maturing in from 90 to 120 days afterwards. It then dies and two or three suckers are allowed to take its place, the others being destroyed or transplanted. The young shoots are planted in rows about eight feet apart, and the plants in adjoining rows alternate at a distance apart of about nine or ten feet. This method affords shade to the ground, while it does not keep the sun from the plants.

The first bananas brought into America are said to have come from Cuba in 1804, and the first full cargo, consisting of 1,500 bunches, arrived in 1830. The fruit is accumulated at point of shipment until the appointed steamer arrives, when she is rapidly filled with it. Refrigeration has been added in order that the fruit can be cut full the tropics are as numerous as the varieties of apples in temperate regions, and the best authorities now agree that no specific difference exists between it and the plantain, which is a very prolific plant. There are 176 known varieties. The fruit is extensively used as food, and in many of the Pacific islands it is the staple food on which the natives depend for their existence.

In its immature condition the banana contains much starch, which on ripening changes to sugar, and as a ripe fruit it has a sweet but somewhat flavorless taste. From the unripe fruit, dried in the sun, a useful and nutritious flour is prepared.

The banana fruit is nearly always seedless. The species is propagated by a strong underground stem from which grown, and brought to northern markets in perfect condition.

Central America is the prominent source of supply of bananas. There the plant reaches its greatest perfection in the alluvial soil of the river bottoms along the coast lines. The islands of Cuba and Jamaica in the West Indies group also produce considerable quantities. While, as mentioned above, there are a great many varieties, some of them are much more suitable for cooking than others, such as the Guinea, which, when ripe, is of a pink color on the inside.

The Red banana is a native of the Island of Jamaica, and is not marketed to any great extent in Canada, the chief demand coming from the British Isles. It is more expensive than the yellow varieties.

AN ELEPHANT FOR T. H. ESTABROOKS.

Presented by Ontario Branch Red Rose Tea Staff—Not White, but Porcelain.

Nothing in the world of business is more pleasant to tell about than a genuine expression of regard from the workers in an office and selling force to the man who provides the work. T. H. Estabrooks, of St. John, N.B., proprietor of Red Rose Tea, received for Christmas from the travelers and office staff of the Ontario branch at Toronto, a piece of Amphora ware which he will prize both for its artistic value and as an expression of good-will and regard on the part of an enthusiastic body of workers. The ornament was an elephant in porcelain, with its coolie mounted on its head. The elephant is in natural color and stands about eighteen inches high on a long, low pedestal of porcelain.

The following letter to Mr. Estabrooks accompanied the present and was signed by Geo. H. Campbell, manager of the Toronto branch on behalf of the staff: "The travelers and office staff of the Toronto branch desired at this season to convey to you in some tangible form their appreciation of the kindliness, frankness and cordiality that have characterized your relations with them, making of every employe a friend. The accompanying beast of burden seemed equal to the occasion, and being emblematic of Britain's Eastern Empire, whence comes the tea that 'is good tea,' we thought it would make a fitting decoration for the office of 'the Chief.'"

Mr. Estabrooks spent a week in Toronto before the holidays and before leaving, entertained Red Rose Tea travelers and office staff at a luncheon in the National Club. It was a very pleasant affair, thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present. Besides Mr. Estabrooks and Mr. Campbell, there were present B. E. Miller, E. E. Boyd, A. H. Patience, J. H. Boyd, H. A. Howey, Frank Leech, G. S. Hull, Geo. E. Taylor, C. N. Smith, R. Prat, R. W. Vout, N. W. Williams, Chas. T. Miller and W. S. B. Armstrong.

SHERBROOKE GROCERS ASSIGN.

T. A. Bourque & Co., Reg., Sherbrooke, wholesale grocers, made an assignment on Saturday last. The business has been conducted by Poulin & Robitaille for the past few years, these young men having built up quite a trade with the grocers in Quebec Province, particularly in the Eastern Townships. No authoritative figures are out yet, but it is estimated that their liabilities are $25,000 or $30,000, at least, while their assets are not supposed to approximate more than $10,000 to $12,000. The Banque Nationale has claims aggregating $15,000, according to reports, which say also that Mrs. T. A. Bourque has a claim for $9,500, and the Canadian Canners for $3,700 odd.

Charterand & Turgeon have been appointed curators of the grocery store of Donat Bessette, Montreal.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Conditions a Little Brighter After Holiday season—Talk of Cutting in Rolled Oats in Quebec.

The quietness prevalent in all lines of flour and cereals during the holiday season is to some extent dispelled this week, though not a great deal of activity is evident in any department.

Retailers are buying flour a little more freely, and the inquiry from Great Britain has been quite brisk, particularly for low-grade flour. The outlook for this trade is very favorable for the early part of the year.

The continued mild weather is having rather a quieting effect on the cereal markets, and dealers in these lines would welcome an extended cold snap. With this condition and strong competition, there is considerable talk of price-cutting among manufacturers, particularly in Quebec. As yet, however, none of this has been very evident.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—A few inquiries are arriving from England regarding the market, but not yet have buyers come up to the price asked by Canadian shippers. The country districts will likely waken up now and do some buying as stocks have reached the low water mark.

ROLLED OATS—There have been, in the last few days, ominous rumors of cuts and counter cuts, but prices have not yet shown any change. One jobber stated that the coming week would witness some bad slashing of prices, which would liven matters somewhat. Locally, trade has been passably good and no complaints of dulness are being made.

FLOUR—While retailers are buying a little more freely this week the holiday quietness is still a good deal in evidence. The market remains about as at last reports, though there is a good outlook for business opening early in the year. There has been more inquiry for export during the week, particularly from London and Bristol, and some sales are reported of low grade flour.

CEREALS—With the continued mild weather, which has existed until this week, demand has not been very active locally. An extended cold snap would mend matters considerable. Prices are quoted below:

DINNER TO TRAVELING STAFF.

Kind Words and Jollity at Annual Luncheon of John Sloan Co., Toronto.

Good-fellowship and optimism were very prevalent at the fourth annual luncheon to the traveling staff of the John Sloan Co., wholesale grocers, Toronto, which was held at the King Edward Hotel on New Year's Eve, Thursday, December 31. C. S. Parsons was in the chair, and contributed a good deal to the brightness of the occasion. Major John Sloan was characteristically reminiscent in his address, telling of his beginnings in Toronto and of the growth of the business to its present position. In closing he prophesied a good year of business and exhorted the travelers to serious work. Frank Sloan reviewed the work of the year, and gave some interesting pointers for the travelers. Practically all the travelers spoke as well, giving expression to the kindness of the firm and good wishes for its future progress. Those present, beside the speakers mentioned, were: John Hayden, J. B. Mayled, F. M. Tait, J. H. Burton, Geo. Sanderson, Harry Brett, P. H. Brown, J. W. Stokes, T. J. Madden, Geo. Crux, W. J. MacDonell, Fred. Bone, H. M. Cowan, J. R. Smith, B. Elliott.

J. F. Howitt, who covers Toronto for P. McIntosh & Son, has been laid up for a week or so with an attack of grippe.

S. J. Musgrave, who represents P. McIntosh & Son, Toronto, in the Ottawa Valley, has been in Toronto for a week or so, confined to his room through illness. He is expected to be able to be out again next week.

APPOINTMENT OF HOTEL COMMISSIONER.

Comfort of Travelers in Ontario Will Be Looked After by W. K. Snider.

The fact that the Provincial Government has appointed a special commissioner to investigate the question of equipment of Ontario hotels will be received with satisfaction by the commercial travelers. The appointment has been given to W. K. Snider, Provincial organizer for the Conservative party for the past three years, and his duties begin immediately. At the banquet of the Canadian Commercial Travelers' Association, held a couple of weeks ago, Hon. W. J. Hanna promised that such an appointment was coming.

Mr. Snider's duties will be to deal with the whole question of the conditions and equipment of the licensed hotels in the Province of Ontario with a view to making them more suitable and safe to the traveling public. The new official will take charge of all improvements which the commercial travelers have been urging upon the department. Probably the most important of these is a proper system of fire escapes, as recent fires at Coldwater and Niagara Falls, when lives were endangered through lack of proper equipment, would indicate. Travelers are too often subject to danger in this respect, particularly in hotels in the smaller places. They are always on the road and a hotel fire is almost sure to effect one or more of them.

Besides the question of fire escapes, there are the sanitary arrangements, bedding, proper accommodation for transients, etc., to be attended to. All these will come under the supervision of Mr. Snider.

The License Department anticipate that the commissioner's work will probably cover between one and two years, during which time it is anticipated that he will have established such standards for hotels as can be permanently continued.

This new departure of the Government is along the lines advocated by The Grocer, after the disastrous Tillsonburg hotel fire, and which have subsequently been advocated on several occasions. Protection of the lives of travelers is an important thing and the new legislation will be gratefully received by the travelers.

B.C. FRUIT WINS PRIZES IN WASHINGTON.

At the apple show, held during December at Spokane, Washington, a large quantity of British Columbia fruit was exhibited and carried off more prizes for the amount shown than any other district represented. In the throng of upwards of 100,000 persons present there was a large number of representative apple buyers, not only from the East, but from London, Chicago and New York, and they were all unstinting in their praises of British Columbia fruit. They also admitted that the great export trade of apples from the American continent to British and European markets would in the future draw very largely from the highly colored and richly flavored fruit of the Western coast.

Maxwell Smith, Nelson, B.C., was one of the seven judges of fruit, the British Columbia display being under the supervision of F. R. E. De Hart.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES AND FISH

Will Disaster in Sicily Boost the Lemon Market? — Vegetables Quiet, With Potatoes in Good Demand—Fish Market Active, With Changes in Prospect.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS—The sole topic this week among fruit men is the probable future of the lemon market. The great catastrophe which has devastated a large portion of Southern Italy and some of the Island of Sicily will have a direct influence on the lemon situation. Local dealers have advanced prices already from 50c to 75c a case. Oranges have weakened since our last quotation. The 714 size Valencia is very scarce, but the 420 size is in good supply. Pineapples are firm at an advance to $4.50 to $5 for 24 size.

VEGETABLES—Attention at the present moment is confined to potatoes, which are selling rapidly. The market for them is consequently very strong, and prices are likely to advance. Leeks are high, $1.50 being asked. Parsnips have firmed up considerably now, ruling at $1. Celery has gone up a notch during the week, being quoted 50c higher. Green peppers are scarce, at $1.25. Business, with the exception of potatoes, is dull.

FISH—The Advent season, which has recently closed, has been a very good one among local fish dealers. A fair distribution of patronage for all lines has characterized the trade generally. The prices which prevailed during the season are still in force, but a general readjustment of quotations will take place immediately.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Trading is yet rather quiet. Evidently retailers are pretty well stocked up with the various lines, and consumers have not yet recovered from the Christmas festivities. The one topic of conversation on the street and about the market is the catastrophe in Sicily and its effect on price conditions. J. J. McCabe has a cable from Tracuzzi, the exporter of St. Nicholas and Home Guard lemons, dated at Messina, which reads "Safe. Address Catania." This is the only direct message so far received. Other brokers and commission men are hoping for the best. There is a stiffening in local lemon prices, but with one or two exceptions no advance has yet taken place. Opinion is divided as to whether or not prices will go up. They certainly will not come down. Oranges are slightly easier, and the navels are much superior to the stock offered earlier in the season. In the apple field some splendid Kings and Spies are being shown, and Greenings are a little scarce this week. Though quoting only the better grades some slow sellers are as low as $1.50, but there is no guarantee with these.

VEGETABLES—Like the fruit situation vegetable trading is quiet, though potatoes are going out rather freely. There are no Delawares at all offering, and the Ontario varieties look splendid stock. An easier feeling exists in potato prices, though no actual change has taken place. Squash are going up in price as they get less in supply. Cabbage is likely to be an interesting vegetable before many moons go by. This time last year cabbage sold as low as 40 cents a dozen; at present the quotation for a barrel is $1.25 to $1.50. Southern cabbage was laid down in Toronto a year ago for $7 a ton, and at present $29 is asked. This is a pretty steep price and very few fruit and vegetable men care about importing at that figure. There is a duty of 30 per cent. on cabbage coming in from the other side. There is plenty of California celery offering, and hothouse truck is fairly free. New potatoes from Bermuda are the novelty.

FISH—Enough business is being done to keep all hands busy, though orders are for small quantities only. Whitefish show a wider range of prices, and are slightly easier this week, but the better grade of smelts has gone up a cent. A salmon called "Steelhead," is being shown at 14 cents.

SICILIAN DISASTER AND THE LEMON MARKET

Effects Not so Widespread as Feared—Palermo Will Probably Be the New Shipping Point—Prices May Not Advance Unduly.

Considerable speculation regarding the future of the lemon market has been indulged in since the earthquake in Sicily and Southern Italy. Some wild rumors have gone forth regarding the damage done, which, after thorough investigation is not really so bad as is painted.

If a map is consulted it will be seen that the earthquake confined its attention chiefly to the extreme eastern point of the Island of Sicily and along its northern coast. This area embraced many large towns, principal among which is the great lemon city of Messina. In the Province of Calabria, the extreme southern portion of Italy, the devastation wrought by the earthquake was quite as great as that in Sicily.

While the loss of life and property was appalling, the actual damage done to the lemon crop will not be so great as might be expected.

A New Shipping Point.

It must be remembered, however, that the port of exit for the great crop has been suddenly demolished. Consequently a new seaport must be found, and it is more than probable that Palermo, which lies farther to the west, will be chosen. Palermo is admirably situated in every way to become as great a lemon shipping port as Messina.

The new order of affairs will require some time to adjust themselves, but it is felt that no great interruption in the shipping of this fruit will take place. A considerable portion of the stock, however, was destroyed by the tidal wave which carried away that which was stored on the wharves for shipment. These goods are, of course, irretrievably lost to the world's markets.

Russia, which has a deep-seated taste for Italian lemons, takes the best which Italy produces, and other countries of Europe are equally anxious to have her finest grades. To Russia chiefly the extra fancy and fancy lines are disposed of. Choice, and much under stock finds its market in America and other parts of the world.

An Enormous Industry.

Some idea of the magnitude of the Italian lemon industry can be imagined when it is stated that 62 million cases were shipped from Messina last year, destined for other than European points.

At the present time the cultivation of lemons is carried on by individuals who look after a few acres each, and whose products are bought by the world for just about what the world wishes to pay for them—a marked contrast to the condition of affairs existing in California, where there are unions and guilds and exchanges, which safeguard the product and regulate prices to the consumer.

Facts in a Nutshell.

In reviewing the industry and the bearing of the present catastrophe upon it, it is found that the earthquake will not greatly injure the trade; that Messina was the great shipping point, and that all lemons which found their way onto the world's markets through this port were known as Messina lemons; that nearly all the country which sent its products to Messina is practically uninjured; that a new port will soon be developed to accommodate the product; that the interruption of the trade will not be as great as was anticipated.

So indissolubly connected has become the name of Messina with the lemon industry that when news was received of the earthquake and the destruction of this city, everyone naturally associated with it also the destruction of the lemon industry.

As a reflex of the disaster the price of lemons has advanced all over, which, in itself is sufficient to demonstrate the power which this port exerted on the fruit markets of the world.

What the Brokers Say.

In Toronto the earthquake in Sicily is the principal topic of conversation among the fruit men, and much speculation is indulged in as to the outcome. Nearly all the brokers have been trying to get in touch with their principals at Messina, but so far J. J. McCabe is the only Toronto man who has received a reply. He got a cable from Tracuzzi, the exporter at Messina, which contained the one word, "Safe," but stated that he could be addressed at Catania.

Montreal and New York quote an advance on Italian lemons, and a stiffening and slightly higher tendency is noted in California, no doubt in sympathetic tendency. Only one Toronto house so far quotes a higher figure on Messina lemons, though a tightening is noted on all sides. Still a buyer looking about can buy just as cheaply now as two weeks ago. Fruitmen generally do not anticipate any great advance, but all are looking forward to the sale at New York of 18,000 boxes on the steamer Alice, the first boat in since the catastrophe. The price realized at this sale will help somewhat in clearing the atmosphere as to whether or not there will be a general advance. There are other steamers whose arrivals are being looked forward to. The Canopic was to have left Messina or Naples about December 26, and the Republic on the 28th. No authentic information is available as to the cargo or movements of these vessels, beyond the fact that they are due to reach New York about January 17, nor can any information be learned concerning the Cretic, which was to have left Naples on December 30. This latter is said by some to have about four cars of lemons for Canada, but indirect information says there are no lemons on board. The Romanic is due to leave Naples on January 7, and will not arrive until the 28th. Since it is almost impossible to get cable communication with Mediterranean ports near the scene of the disaster, the information available is almost purely of a general news nature and reaches here indirectly via the European capitals and New York.

W. B. Stringer does not anticipate any serious difficulties and is trying to get a direct message from his Italian business connections. There were possibly half a million boxes of November cut stored at Messina, but these, he thinks, are all that were destroyed. These lemons were stored for shipment to Canada, Germany and Russia. "Until some direct information comes to hand," he said, "it will be hard to say just what condition of things exists."

HOLBROOK'S REPRESENTATIVES' DINNER.

Year's Progress Shown at Annual Banquet Last Week.

It was just one year ago, December 30, last, when H. Gilbert Nobbs, Canadian sales manager of Holbrook's Limited, Birmingham, Eng., gathered his six traveling representatives together around the banquetting board. It was a very happy and encouraging reunion. This year when Mr. Nobbs held his second traveling staff dinner at the Arlington Hotel there were seventeen active salesmen present. From six to seventeen in one year speaks volumes for the growth and development of any business but when that business is practically a specialty and the work to be done educative, it says a lot more.

The arrangements for the banquet were most complete, and under the excellent chairmanship of Mr. Nobbs the program was put through in splendid shape. Mr. Nobbs' remarks were of the most encouraging character to the staff and the enthusiasm he has shown in his work since coming to Canada a few years ago is reflected in the salesmen's work. His retrospective remarks as well as the sanguine hopes for the future development of Holbrooks in America showed him an optimist without a tinge of doubt. As so aptly quoted on the menu card the saying of Phillip Brooks, "There is a necessary limit to our achievement, but none to our attempt," pictures Mr. Nobbs and his staff clearly. Mr. Nobbs gave the staff a graphic account of Holbrooks Limited and assured all of loyal support for loyal services. It would take too much space to refer to the many kind and flattering words spoken by others to the work and worth of their Canadian and American manager, but loyalty was the keynote of all. The gathering was graced by the presence of a couple of the lady members of the staff and the following Canadian representatives were also present:—H. Musham, N. C. McLean, J. V. Scrivener, G. R. Loggie, A. J. Smith, W. Hollands, F. J. Lewis, J. C. A. Porter, W. R. Cameron, A. D. Norman, A. Kress, G. W. Cryderman, Mr. Forrest, J. H. Gilbert, O. Otto, G. K. Martin, H. H. McKee.

The following items composed the evening's programme:—Piano solo, O. Otto; toast, "The King," proposed by H. Gilbert Nobbs; song, Miss May Reid; recitation, Mr. Donaghy; toast, "Our Firm," proposed by J. V. Scrivener and N. C. McLean, responded to by Mr. Nobbs; song, A. J. Smith; recitation, J. G. Nobbs, sr.; toast, "Our Visitors," proposed by Mr. Nobbs, responded to by F. Albany Rowlatt, of the Woods Norris Co., and W. H. Seyler, manager of The Canadian Grocer; song, J. V. Scrivener; song, O. Otto.

L. L. Stewart, of Montreal, representing John Taylor & Co., was in Toronto last week and called at the Grocer office.

Malcolm Brown, who has been for some time with the MacLaren Imperial Cheese Co., has removed to Vancouver, where he will look after the interests of the Mason & Risch Piano Company.

Mr. Grocer— Read This— It's For You

Nothing ever sold by Grocers can approach the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER IN MERIT. Every housekeeper with common sense knows a good thing when she sees it—she is very ambitious to excel in her Laundry work—with the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER a long felt want is supplied. It sells easily. By taking up an agency you can work up a steady and increasing business, as WHERE THE KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER IS ONCE USED it is ALWAYS USED. Housekeepers are mad after it and will thank you for supplying them with this great labor saving discovery. REDUCES IRONING TIME BY HALF.

Save Your Elbow Grease

PATENT APPLIED FOR

The Kaiser Wax Pad AND IRON CLEANER

The Cleaner that Cleans Well.
The Wax Pad that Waxes Well.

REQUIRES BUT HALF THE TIME TO DO AN IRONING.

Every Housekeeper dreads ironing day, especially so, when she has a lot of Shirt-Waists, Mens Shirts, Collars Cuffs, etc. to Iron; She always wants to obtain a high gloss finish equal to First Class Laundries, and after hard work by the use of Common Wax, a lot of rubbing and Polishing utterly fails.

The Kaiser Iron Cleaner & Wax Pad will clean and smooth the rough and rusty places that have accumulated since the last time they were used By rubbing the hot Iron quickly over the corrugated surface you remove immediately starch or rust. You will be delighted when you try the Iron to see how smoothly it slips over the linen and the result will be no difference from first class laundry work. When the wax is entirely exhausted in the outer 2 Layers on both sides, remove it—and you still will have 2 Layers left.

WHY YOU SHOULD USE IT.

The cost to use it is almost nothing.
The Iron does not adhere to the fabric.
It imparts a splendid perfume to the clothes.
It saves a great deal of hard work in Ironing.
It gives an excellent lustre to the Linen or Muslin.
The Clothes will remain clean and neat much longer.
It gives the Clothes a much better finish than by any other method.
It makes the Iron pass smoothly over the surface and does not leave any black streaks or spots.

Every Housekeeper that cares to do Good Work should have one. We claim there is nothing on the market is its equal to the KAISER IRON CLEANER & WAX PAD, for quickness, convenience, satisfactory work or economy.

Advertise Your Business!!!

In each gross you will find 500 descriptive circulars like the above, leaving space for you to stamp your name and address on. These circulars will pull you in the customers for the KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER and at the same time ADVERTISE YOUR BUSINESS. We want to convince you of the virtues of KAISER WAX PAD AND IRON CLEANER. Send your order to your Jobber or to our nearest Agents or direct. We will see that you get supplied. We know that you will never regret having secured an agency.

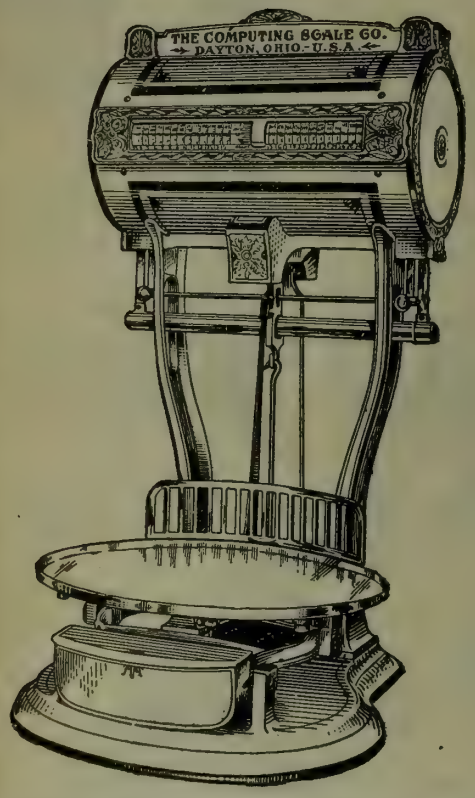
RISING SUN STOVE POLISH IN CAKES



SUN PASTE STOVE POLISH IN TINS

RAILROADS ARE TRYING TO DEFEND THEMSELVES from dangerous, inflammable polishes and have now universally adopted a rule requiring the manufacturer to put a warning label on the outside of each case of such goods before they are accepted as freight.

Our goods do not need the new label—they are absolutely non-inflammable and perfectly safe for use or transportation anywhere. RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes and SUN PASTE Stove Polish in Tins are made right and bring the customer back—not with complaints but with repeat orders for more. Push them.

DAYTON MONEYWEIGHT SCALE
NOTE THE LOW PLATFORM

Overweight Problem

Solved!

With this 1909 visible, self-weighing, self-computing, Automatic Scale, a child can easily, quickly and correctly divide the wholesale purchase into retail packages without a grain of overweight.

This is the simplest, easiest to operate form of Automatic Weighing Machine

—accurate, reliable, durable.

Gives the exact weight for the exacting dealer.
Gives the exact weight to all customers.
True as steel and built for a lifetime of exact weighing.
Weighs to an ounce, computes to a cent.
Low platform—only 6½ inches from the counter.
Our Automatic scales are equipped with a thermostat, like a watch, which makes them weigh with absolute accuracy in any temperature.
No swinging pendulum, no moving indicators, no poises to shift, no beams to bother with, no ball to forget, no friction to pay for.

This scale saves time and money.

THE SCALE THAT SAVES IS NO EXPENSE.

Guild Case Awaits Judge's Decision

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of Last Week Taken Up With Summing Up by Counsel—Witness Says Trade Agreements Are Not Kept—Many Previous Decisions Introduced as Precedents Bearing on the Case—Verdict Will Be Given by Justice Falconbridge After Due Consideration.

The guild case is over. That is, so far as the lawyers and witnesses are concerned. The most important part, however, the Judge's verdict, is yet to come. With the close of Crown Counsel G. Tate Blackstock's reply after counsel for both sides had reviewed the evidence during the two days previous, on Saturday morning, closed a case which will probably decide for some time to come the business methods to be used in the Canadian wholesale grocery trade and will also mark an epoch in legal decision. The case has been watched intently not only by the trade in Canada but also across the line, by reason of the fact that it is more or less a test as to the legality of certain business methods now in operation and Chief Justice Falconbridge's decision is being awaited with general interest.

One noticeable feature of counsel's argument on Friday and Saturday was the citation of a large number of precedental cases which bore more or less directly on the case in point. The counsel for the defence had a very respectable little library in court and many of those volumes were made use of during the progress of the argument.

It had been supposed that all the evidence had been put in at the hearing some weeks ago, but previous to counsels' argument the Crown put F. W. Hudson, of the Canada Brokerage Company, in the box, presumably to throw some new light on the dealings between the guild and the Pacific Selling Co., the operations of which were more or less made public before.

Fred. Hudson's Evidence.

Mr. Hudson told of the formation of the company and of his connection with it. After application for a charter the company began business in July, 1903, making arrangements with Mr. Carey, of the Pacific Selling Co., to handle salmon for them. He, the witness, was to get a commission. The company handled 1,500 cases of clover leaf salmon, which was an average sale, and also 500 cases of the Arrowhead brand. In December of that year there was an attempt to put the Canada Brokerage Co. out of business. In December, 1903, Mr. Hudson went to New York and enterered into a contract with Mr. Carey for 1904, purchasing 2,000 cases of Clover Leaf and some of the Arrow brand. In the spring of the following year the guild took the matter up with the Pacific Selling Co., at New York. Through correspondence from the Pacific Selling Co. Mr. Hudson was told that sales in the brands of salmon he was selling for them were decreasing, whereas he claimed they had increased.

After considerable correspondence respecting the matter Mr. Carey had come to Toronto and they had talked over the question. Mr. Carey had told him that strong pressure was brought to bear upon the Pacific Selling Co. to prevent them selling to the Canada Brokerage Co., and that the company was up against a "brace" game. The witness was also told that the Quebec and Ontario guilds had joined hands and that the Pacific Selling Co. could not afford to lose their Quebec trade. His business was appreciated but the company had first to consider their interests in Quebec.

Mr. Blackstock read the correspondence that had taken place between Mr. Hudson and the company he had represented. In one letter the latter objected to selling goods outside of the city of Toronto as per agreement. Mr. Hudson had sold salmon to a St. Catharines party.

Mr. Carey, in March, 1905, left the company, and was succeeded by Mr. Corby, who had written considerable correspondence to Mr. Hudson. Mr. Corby, it will be remembered, gave evidence at a former session of the trial.

"Mr. Corby told you he could deal with the Ontario guild, but not with the joint guilds of Ontario and Quebec?" asked Mr. Blackstock.

"Yes, sir."

A letter to the witness, dated May 3, 1905, was in part as follows:—"You do not fully appreciate our position in the matter, as we are confronted with the loss of business. You underestimate the alliance of the guilds among the different Provinces. We cannot agree that we are placing you in a peculiar position. We are compelled to push the sale of our own products. If it were a question only of the Toronto market, or even Ontario, it is possible things could be reconciled, but we are feeling the effects in the other Provinces."

The Pacific Selling Co. on May 16, 1905, wrote Mr. Hudson that owing to the conditions existing, the company had entered into arrangements with the guilds of Ontario and Quebec which would preclude further business with him.

Mr. Johnston objected to the submitting of these letters as evidence, because they weren't proved, and because they did not tend to prove any conspiracy. His Lordship noted the objections.

A Stiff Cross-examination.

The cross-examination of the witness by E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., then followed, in which Mr. Hudson stated that the Canada Brokerage Co. was formed to do a wholesale trade.

"To avoid being charged as retailers?" Mr. Johnston suggested.

Mr. Hudson would not admit it, however.

"You knew if you went into the retail business you couldn't buy on wholesale prices, so you took this method of becoming wholesalers?"

"We were going into the wholesale business."

"You bought at wholesale prices and received a commission of 1½ per cent?"

"That is right."

"Were you selling to wholesalers in 1903?"

"Yes."

"Were you selling to retailers in that year?"

"After the formation of the company in July we were."

"You sold to retailers at wholesale prices?"

"Yes."

"At what profit?"

"About from 5 to 7½ per cent."

"Where are your corporation papers?"

"I haven't them here."

"Have you anything here except Mr. Hudson?"

"No," was the answer.

"If the Pacific Selling Co. sold to your customers at your rate, that would put you out of business and you would refuse to buy their goods?"

"Yes, naturally."

"To carry on business you must be protected by wholesale prices?"

"Yes."

"What do you say about a man buying from the Pacific Selling Co. and cutting prices?"

"That's his own business."

"Who fixed the prices?"

"The Pacific Selling Co."

"The wholesalers had nothing to do with it?"

"No."

"You bought from the salmon people and had to sell at certain prices?"

"No."

"Your agreement was to that effect?"

"Yes."

Here Mr. Johnston wanted the witness to admit that he was a breaker of agreements.

"You tried to sell outside your territory, in St. Catharines?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"Apparently, yes, but there was no specific arrangement."

"Weren't you confined to Toronto?"

"No, we bought the goods and could sell them any place. As an individual agent I was confined to Toronto."

"In the bulk of the cases you didn't keep the prices agreed upon?"

"Very likely."

"Did any of the Toronto wholesalers buy from you?"

Mr. Hudson recollected Col. Davidson having bought 50 cases.

"I'm told some of these men bought direct from this company?"

"If so, I got the credit."

"Did you ever break your agreement in selling to some wholesalers at lower prices than to others?"

"No; Clover Leaf salmon had its fixed f.o.b. prices."

"I'm not talking about salmon," replied Mr. Johnston. "it's the principle of the thing I want to get at."

Breaking Agreements.

"If agreements were made by wholesalers with the manufacturer to sell at limited prices and they break this, this would disorganize the trade?"

"I presume it does."

"This would mean a loss of your capital?"

"Yes."

"You couldn't convert your warehouse into a retail establishment?"

"No."

"The wholesalers would have to go into some new business?"

"Yes."

Mr. Johnston then referred to the time it took to build up wholesale business, working out the same idea.

"Was there a falling off in the Pacific Selling Co.'s business in 1903?"

"I am not in a position to say."

"Then Corby may have been correct in his statements?"

"May have been."

Mr. Blackstock asked his Lordship's opinion on certain acts done by defendants, mainly the sending of circulars, since the beginning of the trial. His Lordship ruled that the circulars should not be admitted.

Mr. Washington then proceeded to re-examine Mr. Hudson.

Explaining his statement in regard to the keeping of agreements, Mr. Hudson said these were not generally kept. He had had an agreement regarding Clover Leaf salmon, but constant complaints came in regarding cutting by different wholesalers. "Some are very strict," he said, "but as a general case these selling agreements are not kept."

"Why?"

"They've combined so many articles that there is no room left for competition."

Mr. Hudson said he thought it would be better if there was no agreement. "Business could be done freely and honestly," he said, "which it is not now."

Mr. Johnston—"You think these agreements do not amount to anything?"

"Very little."

This concluded the evidence.

In reply to a question from Mr. Blackstock his Lordship directed that he would hear argument from two counsel on each side with one reply. In view of the fact that his Lordship could not give judgment on the moment he pointed out that it would not be necessary to read the evidence.

The Crown's Address.

S. F. Washington, K.C., opened the argument for the crown, stating that the prosecution was being carried on under section 498 of the Criminal Code, and sub-sections B, C and D, under this, he read these. Section B refers to restraint of trade, C to the unduly enhancing prices and D to the prevention of the barter, sale or supply of goods.

He then outlined the evidence, referring particularly to the written evidence as included in the 112 exhibits.

At the afternoon session, Mr. Washington really got down to business.

Getting Back to First Principles.

"Certain natural laws of trade are important to keep in mind when considering restraint of trade," he said. "One of these being the personal right of man to buy and sell his goods where and for what he pleases. Trade knows no restrictions, so that anything which interferes is a restraint. Every man is a born free trader.

"The ordinary channels of trade were open till the Guild made its appearance," he said. "They closed them. They initiated conducive measures to obtain fixed prices from the manufacturers. Mr. Beckett denied the existence of any of these measures in his cross-examination. He says it was suggestion. This was very forcible suggestion, as was seen in the evidence regarding the Crosse & Blackwell business.

"This is so in regard to almost every article the Guild is concerned with. It was so as to sugar, tobacco, salt, cereals, canned meats, starch, etc. The Price Committee was formed for this very purpose. The reply of the manufacturers to the letters sent out show that they were not anxious to change. The evidence shows that many of them struggled in vain against these coercive measures. Crosse & Blackwell's were anxious not to do business without this agreement, but were ultimately forced to sign it.

"Correspondence bristled with complaints from all over against cutting prices. Evidence was given to show that companies could cut prices and still make profits. Coercion against cutting of prices was a restraint to trade, preventing it from following in unrestricted channels.

The agreements quoted in all these exhibits are practically the same as in the case of the Pacific Selling Co. First of all, there is no competition among the wholesalers at all. They all sell at the same price."

Forcing the Canners Together.

Referring to the evidence of R. L. Innes, that the canners' agreement was originated by the Canadian canners themselves, Mr. Washington quoted from other letters and evidence to show that the present canners' agreement was really instigated at a meeting of wholesalers in Toronto.

"It was only after interference by Mr. Beckett," he said, "that they refused to sell to the Provincial Grocers Co.

"The summary of all this is that wholesales, with retail counters, co-operative concerns, department stores and manufacturing confectioners, are shut out and the businesses confined to the Guild members."

Mr. Washington then referred to the difficulties of getting into the wholesale business since the Guild arrangements had been made. "This group of gentlemen presume to say whether I am a wholesaler and whether I have any right to do business, after that will any one deny there is no restriction of trade?"

"A few words about enhancement of prices. The affect of the Guild on the consumer was proved in the evidence of B. W. Robertson, of Kingston, where firms all over the Dominion were willing to cut prices, as was the case many, many times, and were prevented from doing so by the Guild, this surely means enhanced prices. Again, if the retailer gets as much profit as he used to, and the manufacturer and wholesaler both get more, the consumer must pay the advance.

The statute referring to the case, says, "unreasonably advanced the price." Mr. Blackstock submitted that the word "unreasonably" was used in the same sense as the word "unduly" in a previous case where judgment was given by Justice Osler.

"What is a conspiracy?" said Mr. Blackstock, quoting a definition of Justice Fitzgerald, and said that the present case came under the same definition.

"The Provincial grocers," said Mr. Washington, "had a perfect right to buy and sell from whom and to whom they pleased at any prices so long as they did it legitimately.

Shows a Conspiracy.

"I submit," he said, "that this case showed a conspiracy in the common law, while the object of the Guild was lawful, the methods they adopted were unlawful. What the Guild tried to do was to monopolize the trade for that body which they chose to call wholesale grocers.

"What is the defence as far as we can judge of it? The defendants have been in the box and declared they did not do any of these things. The evidence is overwhelming that they did try to do these things."

"They say they did not try to prevent manufacturers selling direct to the retailers. Crosse & Blackwell, for instance, had a right to sell to both classes."

"Any man has a right to say, 'I don't like you and won't sell to you,' but half a dozen wholesalers in Hamilton have no right to combine together and say they will not sell to me." Mr. Washington quoted several previous decisions to back up his statement.

"The real defence is what we used to call "confession and avoidance,' continued Mr. Washington. "What they say is 'we had to do it to save our commercial lines.' They say they would have to go out of business if they did not do these things. We do not hear of any of them failing or going out of business."

Cut Out the Dead Wood.

"If a lot of the deadwood in the wholesale trade were out of it," said Mr. Washington, "there would be lots in it for the rest. If. Mr. Beckett, for instance, would devote one-tenth of the work and cleverness to his own business that he has to the affairs of the Guild, he would not be coming here telling of loss in his business. When a man like Robertson is able to make a quarter of a million in spite of the operations of the Guild, these men who talk about loss ought to be ashamed.

"Some say," continued Mr. Washington, "that the Guild has not done much harm. Your Lordship should consider what they have the power to do. They have been effectual in securing increased profits. They have the power, under present arrangements, to compel the manufacturers to give them any profit they please."

This ended Mr. Washington's argument and the court adjourned.

What Caused the Delay.

Mr. Blackstock, senior counsel for the Crown, in opening his address on Friday morning referred to the delay in bringing forward the case and attributed this to the extensive nature of the matters dealt with, the number of interests involved and the necessity of consulting the convenience of those interested.

"Mr. Washington's exhaustive outline of the case yesterday," said Mr. Blackstock, "makes it almost of necessity that I should deal to a large extent with details. The defendants in this action represented an important part of trade in which all the public in interested, and it is no part of the Crown to embarrass or annoy them if their arguments could be said to be generally without objection. The only safe material on which your Lordship can proceed," said Mr. Blackstock, "is the written evidence put before you. There is the most striking difference between the written documents and the evidence given by the defendants and their witnesses. It must also be remembered that for obvious reasons records of various transactions have not been kept.

"I have had prepared, your Lordship, a resume of the correspondence which we particularly emphasize as evidence. To save reading all of this I shall put in it so that you may consult it at your convenience."

Mr. Blackstock, however, proceeded to read several of the letters which had already been made public in the evidence as particular and specific instances of what this correspondence covered.

"I have read them for two purposes," he said, "for these illustrate every possible object of the Crown's case, and also that if your Lordship had only the verbal evidence of the witnesses you would only have a small part of the truth. We found, also, in trying to secure information, that many persons, while willing to give information, were unwilling to jeopardize their own business."

"I understand the position taken by the defence is that the wholesale trade is the ordinary and legitimate method of carrying on their business. I challenge in toto, my Lord, the superstructure, if not the foundation of this argument.

"When one comes to contemplate the defence, one questions the attitude of the defendants. I decline to accede to the proposition that any body of persons can take any position of domineering possession.

Referring to section 498, under which the charge was laid, Mr. Blackstock said:

"I say these people designed to unduly limit the dealing in these commodities in question. Their arrangements are obnoxious to the statute. Take, for instance, the case where they declined to handle American sugars, where they confined themselves to the goods of the Canadian canners. These and other cases show that these arrangements were designed to be an restraint of trade.

"The central idea of the whole idea was that they should have a monopoly. Again, they took upon themselves arbitrary and despotic powers as to decide on who shall be in this business.

"Again, in subsection C, 'to unduly limit the manufacture or production of any article or commodity or to enhance the price thereon.' I say they have done both of these. In the case of the salmon and also the canned vegetables, people, various people, were put out of business in consequence of the action of the Guild. Thus they both limited the manufacture and production of the article and also interfered with the price. This correspondence shows the very idea they had was to keep up the price, to prevent various businesses from entering into competition with them.

"The moment I show your Lordship that persons in the trade were willing to accept lower prices than the members of the Guild received, and again from Mr. Beckett's evidence to the effect that the arrangements for the formation of the Guild were to enhance the prices. All these things point to the fact that the prices must have been unreasonably advanced in many ways and during many years.

Different Conditions.

"Over the whole district of Canada conditions vary greatly. Can it be said that business should be done along the same lines in every district? In the outstanding districts, for instance, undoubtedly different conditions would prevail.

Coming to consider subsection D, Mr. Blackstock said the very essence of these arrangements was to cut out competition.

Referring to the evidence given by Mr. Corby, of the Pacific Selling Co., and commenting on the disparagement between the verbal evidence and the letters put in, Mr. Blackstock said it was a discreditable thing for such evidence to be given.

"There is no more cogent evidence of the intolerant tyranny of these men than is disclosed by this correspondence," he said, waxing eloquent, quoting letters that passed between F. D. Hudson and Mr. Corby.

"Here is a man," referring to Mr. Corby, "of great intelligence, who has investigated these conditions and who found it unable to stand up against them." One of Mr. Corby's letters to Mr. Hudson said, "It is a source of regret that the pleasant conditions existing now should be disturbed, if it were a question only of Toronto or Ontario, it might be adjusted, but we are already feeling the effects in the Northwest territories—where previously our methods had not been questioned.

"Think of the disparity between this and the evidence given in the box," said Mr. Blackstock.

Another letter said: "We have entered into an arrangement with Ontario and Quebec Guilds to handle our goods. In severing our connection we are glad to say that our business relations have always been entirely satisfactory."

"His oath in the box was that these relations were most unsatisfactory.

"Note the disparity, my Loard, between those letters and Mr. Corby's evidence.

Some Flowing Eloquence.

"See what we have, my Lord—the iron heel of these men on the necks of the people—against their wish and will.

"The intolerable tyranny of it!

"The manufacturer now has a complacent body who allow him to fix prices. There is a monopoly in manufacture and in distribution, a condition highly favorable to continuation among the manufacturers themselves.

"The next step, there is no competition among wholesalers. The retailer is also to some extent regarded, but the public at large not at all."

"What is the result of all their arrangements? As Zealand said in the box, 'An office boy could run their businesses to-day. The real object of the arrangements was practically to carry business along in its own channels, all the methods by which the public is to be advantaged are eliminated.

"With my wish to see that the path of persons in business is as easy and remunerative as possible," continued Mr. Blackstock, "I rgret that among the most melancholy information comes the fact that men come forward who in ordinary life would be highly regarded and confess to these irregularities with evident belief in their necessity.

"The trade is honey-combed with indirect and underhand methods. These arrangements are in direct constraint of trade.

"If your Lordship could reach a conclusion that the arrangements made by these parties are correct," said Mr. Blackstock, in concluding, I desire to connect no details of wrongdoing with them, but, it seems to me," vehemently, "it would be impossible to conceive of a case in which, for the public interest, root and branch, these arrangements should be cut down."

The Defence's Case.

Taking up the case for the defence, E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., spoke of its importance, not alone as a matter of affecting the whole country, but one affecting the rights and privileges of a body of men who stand at the front in the trade of the country, a body of men who have obtained not only a standing in the community, but who have large financial interests imperiled in the case.

"If the matter were confined to a mere fine the same anxiety would not exist where their business depends on the methods now attacked.

An Important Case.

"This is not a question of a fine of $200 or $2,000, but it is a question of their financial success, and may even go to the foot of it all, whether they can continue to do business or not."

Referring to Mr. Washington's address he said:

"The efforts of my learned friend brings one back to the days when the white man bartered a piece of tobacco for furs worth $15 or $20, or in South Africa, where for worthless glass beads were traded rubies and diamonds worth a fortune. If that is the natural condition of things, we do not wish to be put under the natural order of business."

"The tariff," said Mr. Johnston, "prevented the very thing the Crown contended should exist; namely, the right to buy at equal rates wherever one wished.

"The business man is bound by tariff regulations in every case," he said, "and this has been done by the assembled wisdom of the legislators at Ottawa."

Some Similar Cases.

Referring to cases cited by the Crown as precedents, Mr. Johnston went into them extensively to show wherein they differed from the present one.

In the case of Rex vs. Elliott, there was an Ontario coal association formed of a certain number of coal dealers in Brantford and district, and these undertook to exclude others of the same class. This meant absolute monopoly in dealing with foreign coal. This, however, did not attempt to consult the interests of coal dealers as a whole, but to the exclusion of the non-members. "They refused to admit new members, a totally different proposition to which we have here. There is no evidence that any legitimate dealer was ever excluded. Inded their membership was even courted. A non-member, too, could get his goods at the same prices and with the same rebates as members. The whole matter, as shown in this case, is totally different from present conditions. Then the case of Rex vs. Clark, a lumber case, where a Western Retail Lumber Dealers' Association was formed. This was made up of retail dealers and differs from an arrangement of wholesalers as in the present instance. The retailers took the lumber and undertook to fix the price to the consumer, at once enhancing the price of the original article."

Taking up the case of Wampole vs. Karn, he held that the judgment was found on a false conception of facts. "How can there be any competition in the sale of Ayer's preparatory medicines or Radway's Ready Relief?"

He argued that none of those cases were parallel to this one of the Grocers' Guild.

Neither was the prosecution of the plumbers' combine.

Referring to the plumbers' rake-off, he called it "a direct swindle, a direct steal, because it was not earned." The Guild had simply refused to sell to men who were not wholesalers.

Parallel Cases.

"Now I come," he said, "to the cases, which, we submit, are parallel to the present one. The case Rex vs. Gage, was a case of a grain buyers' association, agreeing not to buy at less than one cent below the export price. This is exactly our case, unless we did this to limit competition or to unduly enhance prices. If we did it in welfare of the body of wholesalers and grocers it was all right. Even if a few parties were injured, it was done for the purpose of helping honest men, we are not contradicting any statute, even through doing so may seem to fall under the statute."

He referred also to the Ontario Salt Co. vs. Merchants' Salt Co. case, where several companies co-operated to operate salt manufactories, all salt to be sold through trustees of the company only.

A sarcastic reference was made to the judging of such cases as this by public opinion—by "men who never sold a pound of tea or bought a plug of tobacco in their lives, and yet would tell us on a moment's notice how trade with all its intricacies, should be controlled and regulated."

Continuing the citation of authorities bearing on the present case at the afternoon session, Mr. Johnston referred to "Eddy on Combinations," which sets forth the law as recognized on the other side.

Another case from the Kentucky statistics of 1903, referring to conspiracy and combination was cited.

In the case also of the Queen against the American Tobacco Co., the defendants entered into an agreement not to sell cigarettes at a lower price than per agreement, did not bring the company under the law, inasmuch as they had a right to sell their goods as they saw fit, within the scope of the law.

A Right to Fix Prices.

"This case," said Mr. Johnston, "backs up my position—the manufacturers have a right to fix prices and to dispose of their goods to the retailer as they see fit. There is nothing to prevent others from going into the same business."

Under the common law the element of wrong-doing was the object of doing material injury to someone else. The combination was not questioned unless material injury was done. The statute carried the matter no further than the common law. It made two classes of conspiracy (1) in common law, (2) in trade conspiracy, the first totally different from the second.

"If three men concoct the committal of a robbery and is overheard conspiracy is proved and these men may be committed. The other must have certain results, otherwise it is not a conspiracy.

"This binds the Crown to the trade conspiracy idea," he said.

"If the defendants continue to protect their own interests, they are not within the scope of section, even though it may injure others. The primary object of the Guild is to take in any wholesale and to make them live up to their contracts. There is not a single instance given in twenty years where prices were enhanced. There are no signs of limiting production nor interferring with transportation.

The Crown must prove the conclusion of the offence, not leave this to be drawn into the conclusion.

"In the case of Hern v. Griffin," went on Mr. Johnston, "a decision was made in a similar case. If this was good, then it is infinitely better to-day, when business has been so much intensified by modern conditions."

A number of other cases were referred to, but not cited at length.

Parliament has determined the mode of trial and penalty in connection with a trade conspiracy, and failing to show that a conspiracy under this head had occurred, the Crown was endeavoring to show by some other means.

Present Methods Necessary.

Everyone knows that for manifest reasons three classes were necessary to carry on the business of the country. They were the manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer. In Canada, with an enormous stretch of country, with villages starting up here and there, the conditions are vastly different from those in large cities. In sparsely settled districts wholesale dealers are necessary as the retailer could not very well obtain his goods direct from the manufacturer. There can be no competition in the manufacture of a particular article. The man who produces can fix his own price. The articles he produces are proprietary in their nature, and he has no competition, but he can be ousted from the market by another firm, presenting another and better article to the public. For instance, there can be no competition in the production of the Macdonald tobacco. No other manufacturer can produce that brand.

The wholesaler buys in car lots, which the retailer cannot do, and the former is, therefore, able to make a profit. The man from a legal standpoint has power to secure his own agents to sell direct to retailers. He fixes the cost of his own productions and the wholesalers have never interfered. There was no evidence of an authoritative nature to show otherwise.

He hoped that his Lordship would not take into consideration evidence of men of low moral standing or of men who were breakers of agreements. The wholesalers were fighting the manufacturer for their profits.

Prices Decreased.

In many cases as had been shown, prices have decreased since the formation of the Guild. A few years ago sugar was sold at 15 or 16 lbs. for a dollar, while now 20 lbs. or more can be bought. If the demand throughout the country can be reached by the wholesale trade then the production would entirely depend on the demand. The manufacturer does not control the demand. The amount of goods that pass down through the wholesaler to the retailer and consumer are the test for the production. The action of manufacturers having the objective point of cheapness to the consumer in view, show they acknowledge the means adopted as the best and most ready.

The wholesale dealers are engaged in distributing and storing goods, and he must have them on hand to deliver when called upon. He can get goods cheaper in large quantities, and he has the means for distribution. They save the cost of travelers to the manufacturer; they often carry the retailer through difficult times; they save freight rates by sending many lines of goods in one shipment; and they distribute quickly. But the wholesaler must have a profit, and after there had been so much cutting of prices it was no wonder that the wholesalers formed a Guild to protect themselves. What they were aiming at was the cutting of prices, and that alone because it went to the foundation their own business. It had a demoralizing effect on the whole commercial business of the country.

"After Mr. Zealand's exposure in the box, after Mr. Hudson's and others disclosures, is it any wonder that these men had to make some arrangement to protect themselves and their business?" said Mr. Johnston.

There has been no attempt to show prices unjust, unreasonable or unfair. They are down, salt, sugar, etc., to as low as is reasonable. The retailer gets his goods on this uniform basis. The freight, warehousing, travelers, etc., is saved under this system. Can it be said the price is increased?

Retailers Favor Guild.

Mr. Trowern's evidence and that of Mr. Baker, shows that the retailers are in favor of this. The Crown's interests, most of them admitted that the present is the proper system, the only true one. Robertson, for instance, says the principle is all right, but he objected to the competition.

"If the present method is acknowleged to be cheapest it follows that this must be regulated. It cannot be allowed to be violated by unscrupulous men.

"Men like Kinnear, Beckett, etc., were apparently trying to do an honest thing. They were selling at a loss in many instances owing to dishonesty on the part of other men and manufacturers."

The object of the Guild was to carry on honest business which was not frustrated by dishonest men among manufacturers in their own ranks. If this was so, was this an illegal act?

"It may be, though the Crown has brought out no evidence as such, that prices have been enhanced. The reason it wasn't given was that it can't be found.

"What the Guild were aiming at was the prevention of cutting of prices. There is nothing troublesome about who is a wholesaler. There was no objection to manufacturers selling to any retailer in the country. The whole burden of the song was the cutting of prices. The moment this begins you have disorganization of trade and dishonesty creeps in.

"These men were trying to make dishonest men honest and this was the object of the Guild."

What other course could be suggested? The manufacturers violated agreements by selling to retailers. To show there was no object to hurt anybody when the Guild was formed and that there was no discrimination, they opened their gates to every wholesaler in Canada. They said: "You keep faith with us, everything is open to you."

None Refused Membership.

"There's no evidence that any wholesale man was refused membership. Any who were were not legitimate wholesalers. We never sought to hurt the right or privilege of a single wholesale dealer. We did seek to coerce the manufacturers to give us bigger profits, so that we could make a living in business.

"These men had a right to band together, combine, if you like, for this, and as such they are not under the limits of the statute.

When a man played traitor to the Guild he was fined and suspended for a time, but in twenty years there was only one instance, or two, at most, of this being done. The next penalty would be that if they continued the manufacturers would refuse to sell, a very wise and mild regulation, surely?

"The Guild came into existence in a feeble and informal way at first, with not even a list of members in 1903."

Mr. Johnston went on to criticize the use as evidence of letters written by Mr. Gillard as "fished out of the dustheap," and saying that it surely could not be taken to apply to the present instances. The letters were written evidently without consultation. The fact of cutting prices is the evil complained of all through these letters.

"The Guild couldn't cut these questionable men off any list," continued the lawyer. "It was not the intention of the Guild to interfere with the private rights of other persons, simply to protect the character of their trade. They were actually selling tobacco and sugar at this time at 1½c profit when it cost them 7½c to handle them. They never asked for prices to be increased, only for increased rebate in order to get a living profit.

"Everybody knows sugar is cheaper now than 20 years ago. So also with tobacco and canned goods, other things being equal. If so, there has been no increase to the consumer. The attempt was to get better profit, as was shown in the evidence of Messrs. Beckett, Davidson, Blair and Kinnear."

Mr. Johnston, who was suffering from a cold had by this time become husky, so the court was adjourned till Saturday morning.

Mr. Johnston, continuing his address on Saturday morning, referred to a statement made by the Lord Chancellor in the Quinn-Bethan case, stating that this was applicable closely to his case.

The evidence shows that the guild did not try to confine sales to its members alone, several firms, wholesale men, were getting goods and the same privileges as the members of the guild. The question as to membership in the guild then, was a negligible one. Sir Wm. McDonald, Eddy and others had their own lists. We took possession of no field as Mr. Blackstock says. It was created by reason of the commercial circumstances of the country. They were willing to give up the field if the arrangements they made were not acceded to. The question is whether these terms were unreasonable or unduly planned. "The Crown must prove that they were excessive or immoderate."

Quoting from several dictionaries, both "unduly" amd "unreasonably" must be considered above what your Lordship and myself would consider ordinary.

Were No Agreements.

Coming to the various so-called agreements: "So far as tobacco is concerned there is no evidence of any agreement. Nobody touched tobacco. The price was fixed by the manufacturer, was influenced by the tariff. Clancy's evidence regarding this could not be correct. The reason he couldn't get tobacco was because he wasn't a wholesale dealer. His bankruptcy came not because he couldn't get tobacco, but for various other reasons. He applied for membership but failed shortly afterward. He further said he couldn't get canned goods in 1903. You will remember that Graham couldn't sell in the same year, all on account of the guild. This seems very peculiar.

"Andrew MacLean came and complained of the guild's operation," continued Mr. Johnston. "He has been able to gather together $300,000 fortune in spite of this. He was a wholesaler with a retail counter and consequently could not be expected to share in the advantages of the guild.

Referring to certain pages of the evidence, Mr. Johnston claimed that the guild had never interfered with Mr. McLean. Certain conversations to this effect in Montreal could not be taken in evidence.

"The McAlpine Tobacco Co., again, never cut McLean off. His system of buying wholesale and selling to the consumer was not an honest way of doing business, in regard to the existing conditions.

"Curtis, of Kingston, was in the same position. He says he couldn't buy tobacco because of the guild, and yet we have evidence from travelers who tried to sell him.

"Are we to be condemned on evidence of this kind?" Mr. Johnston asked.

Referring to the canners' agreement, Mr. Johnston said:—"The Canadian Canners were the people who combined, not the guild."

"These things being so, what objection was there to the guild? There are presumably certain understandings in trade.

"The Canadian Canners did not get all the wholesalers, nor all the members of the guild. They gave a loyalty rebate to those whom they did sell to. Their goods were more or less in the shape of a proprietary article in special brands, manufactured only by them.

Starch, Salt and Sugar.

Coming to the case of starch, Mr. Johnston referred to numerous instances in the evidence to show that the changed price to the consumer came from an increase in cost of product and manufacturer's price.

"There was no agreement as regards salt, nor as to sugar either. There was no fixed price for sugar. These prices were fixed by manufacturer daily. Beckett, who desired to be in touch, informed his wholesale friends of the changes. This is not capable of being regarded as the agreement alleged. The only agreement in sugar was not to cut prices. Sugar, too, is cheaper to-day than before the guild was thought of."

"In regard to the equalized freight rates, the shipping rates are less than before the system was adopted, if the price of production is the same. This places every man in the same town on the same footing so far as rates are concerned and is what the retailers wanted.

"Regarding Crosse & Blackwell, and to begin with I don't think the letters of Mr. Coulson can be taken as bearing against us. 'The guild won't let me' was a ready excuse.

"Mr. Beckett's evidence deals with the matter. Nobody pretends that the guild affected or sought to affect the price of Crosse & Blackwell's goods. The real reason Zealand couldn't buy was because he wasn't a wholesaler. At the same time they were selling to wholesalers who were not members of the guild."

"The manufacturers were seeking the cheapest and best method of handling their goods and they found the wholesale system to be this. Is it conspiracy that for years and years this has been going on with the approval of the wholesale and retail trade of the country and yet your Lordship is asked to convict us on this."

Denies Any Cost of Violation.

Referring again to sub-section A of the statute, Mr. Johnston said:—"There were always enough goods on hand, nor did the public suffer by a violation of this. Nor does anything show that the retailer couldn't get his goods. There was no limit to production in any shape or form."

"Regarding section B, trade and commerce has nothing to do with the internal business of the country. This matter cannot apply here in any way.

"In regard to section D, there is no violation shown nor anything that would result as a violation of this.

What Increases Cost of Living?

Mr. Washington argued counsel continued that the increase in the cost of living during the past 20 years was a result of the guild. No man, surely, could be serious in this. It is increased cost of production. Eggs were then 10 cents, now are 22 or 24c. Butter was 10 cents, and is now 30 cents. Rent has increased from $15 to $20 per month. These are the matters which affect the cost of living.

Referring to certain matters which have taken place since the case was taken up, Mr. Johnston said:—"The press has published inflammatory articles of nothing but a general character, circulating all over the country. Articles have been written by men against conspirators in trade, who evidently have not studied the existing conditions. The newspapers have had a great deal to do with the trial of these defendants before it has gone before your Lordship at all.

"All the Crown has been able to get," continued Mr. Johnston, "has been Clancy, MacLean, Curtis, Graham, whose evidence has been exploded, and Baker, Robertson, Zealand, eight men among the thousands who have been doing business in all these years. They are the only men to come forward, and they interested men. Not a single consumer, not a single producer.

Surprised They Didn't Do More.

"Yet on this class of evidence you are asked to condemn men struggling for existence among conditions in which I am surprised they did not do more than they did. I would ask your Lordship, therefore not to convict my clients."

In closing, Mr. Johnston referred in kindly terms to the Crown counsel, taking the responsibility himself to a great extent for the large delay in the case, necessary, as he said, from its magnitude and importance.

E. H. Ambrose's Address.

In concluding the case for the defence Mr. Ambrose first referred to references made by Mr. Washington. Regarding Mr. Clancy, he asked that the evidence of Mr. Beckett be read. He referred to the evidence of Mr. Beckett, also to the class of business Mr. Zealand did.

In the matter of the refiners, Mr. Thompson had stated in his evidence that the guild had nothing to do with the refiners, that it did not control them. The refiners were shown to have acted independently, and that each refiner fixed his own price.

There is no case in which the guild influence has been used against anyone except in the case of a man who will not keep his agreement and in no court should any consideration be given to the man who refuses to deal honestly in his business with those with whom he comes in contact.

The Final Reply.

In the address which brought to a conclusion this famous case, Mr. Blackstock regretted that the counsel for the defence had made disparaging references against some of the witnesses for the Crown who had given such valuable evidence. He had never seen a more gentlemanly lot of witnesses. He would not defend nor apologize for Mr. Zealand, but in regard to Mr. Hudson, who had furnished the Crown with such important letters, he must take offence to the "cruel injustice done to a man who had had his business taken away from him by the guild."

He also referred to the "cruel injustice" to Mr. Gillard, the man who had been president of the guild and who had been "egged on to do their acts of injustice."

"Men have come here after his death to unload the responsibility of their actions on the man not living to defend himself," added Mr. Blackstock.

Several judgments in cases, which in the counsel's opinion, were analogous to the one at issue were cited. Reading from a circular of a wholesale grocery firm Mr. Blackstock asked, "Can there be a more monstrous thing than that these men should be sitting in judgment ruling Mr. Clancy on his entrance into the guild?"

"Here at the eleventh hour we have received no documents from the defendants regarding for instance, sugar agreements. It is a mistake to say that every wholesaler could get what he wanted. The whole artillery of the guild was arrayed, for example, against Mr. Robertson of Kingston."

"The counsel for the defence," said Mr. Blackstock, "has lost sight of what the members of the guild were entitled to do singly and collectively. In the matter of competition he had stated that the manufacturer fixed the price. But that was part of the arrangement with the wholesalers. It was a mistake to say that McDonald's tobacco or any other kind was a proprietary article in the sense that Radway's Ready Relief was.

In concluding Mr. Blackstock said:—"This question of trade relations is the great problem of modern civilization. Every regulation of any kind is some restriction on human liberty. Large numbers of retailers had for years been buying from the manufacturers, contrary to the statements made by defence counsel, and for years the wholesalers have attempted to deny them this right. Freedom of trade is the great principle of liberty, but this freedom has been entirely circumvented. I submit by the objects of the defendants."

Judgment Withheld.

His Lordship, intimated that a speedy judgment could not be expected on account of the volume of evidence and the length of the arguments, and also because his other duties prevented him from making a study of the evidence and arguments in the near future.

The judgment will, however, probably be handed out in a few weeks.

REACHING OUT TO NEW MARKETS

The F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, manufacturers of 2 in 1 Shoe Polish, beside covering Canada and the United States, are now reaching out across the Atlantic. Mail orders and inquiries have been coming in large numbers recently from Great Britain, evidently as a result of the company's advertising in The Grocer, and the need for a man on the ground was felt. J. W. Gorham sailed on Tuesday for England to take up the work and will represent the company in England, Ireland and Scotland. The European market is also to be developed and with a view to this F. O. Creed, who has recently represented the company in Western Canada, will leave on Saturday for France, and will cover that country and also Germany and Spain.

Thos. Edey, of the same company, leaves this week to represent them in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Montreal Grocers Discuss Proposed Increase in Their Liquor Licenses—Decline in Price of Halifax Sugar—Storm at St. John Delays Freights.

HALIFAX.

January 12.—Following the holiday rush, business is now a little quiet and it is expected that it will continue so for some time. The wholesalers are now taking stock and the majority of the travelers are off the road. Some changes in prices are noted since the opening of the new year. Canned fruits and vegetables have been advanced five cents per dozen, and there is a drop of ten cents per hundred pounds in the price of all grades of sugar. Extra standard is now quoted at $4.76, No. 1 yellow at $4, Austrian at $4, and bright yellow at $4.30.

During the past week there was a big drop in the price of new laid eggs. During Christmas week and later fresh stock sold from 50 to 55 cents per dozen. At these prices the demand was very light and, in consequence, there was an accumulation of stock. This week the new stock was quoted at 35 cents per dozen, a drop of 15 cents. Sales even at this price were light. Many of the jobbers had expected that their stocks would go quickly at the reduced price, but such was not the case. The Nova Scotia poultry has almost all been cleared up and importations are now being made from Ontario. Only small quantities are coming to the market, as the prices are high.

A new company, called the Liverpool Fish Company, has been organized at Liverpool, N.S., with a capital of $10,000, for the purpose of carrying on a general fish purchasing and exporting business; dealing in canned and live lobsters, bait and ice; the curing, preparing and dealing in finnan haddies and boneless cod, and the shipping of fresh fish of all kinds. The principal business will be carried on from Coffin's Island, where icehouses will be erected, with storage plant. The have bought out the Mersey Packing Company and the trap business of Charles M. Firth, and the company will establish its head office at Liverpool. The officers of the company are: George S. McClearn, President; Directors, Winslow Cameron, C. M. Firth, Arthur S. Hutchins, John F. Seldon. W. A. Hemeon is manager and C. M. Firth secretary.

The Kensington Dairying Association, of Prince Edward Island, has had a good cheese season. The quantity of milk manufactured into cheese was 2,675,395 lbs., and the value of the cheese made was $30,786.

The Union Dairying Company, of Vernon River Bridge, P.E.I., had their banner season, paying on an average of one dollar for one hundred pounds of milk. The quantity of milk manufactured was 1,352,000 pounds.

Windsor, Nova Scotia, is undoubtedly a "sweet town." It is estimated that confectionery valued at $30,000 was sold in that town during last year. The confectionery business in Windsor has increased rapidly during the past few years. The sale of temperance drinks has also largely increased.

Alderman Andrew Hubley has disposed of his business on Windsor Street to David Markley, and is retired from the grocery trade, after a most successful experience. Mr. Hubley opened his shop on Windsor Street about thirty-one years ago, and built up his business so well that the premises had to be gradually enlarged, and the establishment became a land mark in the west end of the city. Mr. Markley, besides purchasing the grocery, feed and meat departments, takes a lease of the stores. The change in proprietorship went into effect without any interruption of business. It is understood that the alderman has aspirations for the Mayor's chair, and that he will be in the field as a candidate at the civic elections, to be held in April next. Ald. Hubley is a strong advocate of temperance.

ST. JOHN.

January 12.—The heavy gale and rain storm which raged here last week on Tuesday and Wednesday had the effect of completely isolating the city so far as railway communication was concerned, until Thursday evening. Washouts on the C.P.R. and I.C.R. held trains up and no passengers, mails or freights were moved inward or outward during that time. Considerable damage was done about the city by the downpour of rain and high winds, and a number of stores had windows smashed and signboards blown down. In the wholesale grocery houses on the north and south market wharves, some damage was done to stocks by the high tides, which washed over the wharves and flooded the basements. In Haymarket Square several small stores were flooded as a result of the high tides forcing water back through the sewers.

The wholesale merchants are taking advantage of the quiet season to take stock.

Several changes in quotations are reported. Raisins and currants are slightly lower, hand-picked beans are held at $2 and $2.10 a bushel; cornmeal is quoted at $3.50 to $3.55; sugar is down 10 cents per hundred pounds, and oatmeal is a little easier. All grades of canned goods, vegetables and fruits are up five cents a dozen.

In the produce market, some Western beef is selling as low as 6½c a pound, while pork is scarce and commands from 8½c to 9c a pound. Most vegetables and roots have increased in price. Chickens and fowls remain about the same, but ducks are higher and turkeys are selling wholesale at from 20c to 23c a pound. Hennery eggs are quoted from 30c to 40c a dozen and case eggs from 25c to 28c. Tub butter remains about the same but roll butter is not quite so dear. In the fish line, frozen British Columbia salmon are selling for from 12c to 15c a pound.

The annual sale of the harbor fisheries was held on Tuesday, January 5. The amount realized was considerably below last year, the reason being given that the catch was away below the average. The sale netted $1,516.25, as compared with $4,275.10 in 1908, and $6.187 in 1907.

J. J. McGoffigan, tea merchant, who is about to leave on a vacation trip to the South, was called upon at his office on Mill Street last Wednesday by a number of friends and presented with an address and a pair of gold cuff links. Mr. McGoffigan is leaving for a five months' trip to New York, Washington, New Orleans, Texas, California, Mexica, Verna Cruz, Cuba and Florida. —W. E. H.

MONTREAL.

Jan. 13.—A meeting of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association, was held Thursday evening, Jan. 7 at the association's hall on St. Catherine east. J. A. Dore, president, occupied the chair, and other officers present included A. Sarrasin, J. D. Boileau, and A. Malo. There was a large attendance of members, and several questions of interest were discussed. The association members were unanimous in their condemnation of the peddling practice, especially peddlers of fruit and vegetables. At a previous meeting a motion was adopted to the effect that each member of the association interview the alderman representing his district, and try and secure his co-operation in putting a stop to the practice. D. Lesage reported that he had seen Ald. Robertson, and Ald. Clerihue in regard to the matter, and both these gentlemen had promised to do what they could, to assist the grocers. P. St. Pierre saw Ald. Dagenais, and he also promised to assist the association in their work. President Dore stated that he had received the assurance of the Butchers' Association that they would co-operate with the grocers in this matter.

The contemplated action of the city council in probibiting the sale of milk in grocery stores was discussed, and strongly condemned.

It was also decided to appoint a committee to interview the Premier, Sir Lomer Gouin, on the proposed increase in grocery liquor licenses. Considerable discussion took place regarding this matter, and it was unanimously agreed, that the grocery license was already high enough. In view of this it was deemed best to interview the Premier, and lay the matter before him.

It was decided to hold a euchre and dance for the members of the association and friends. The date was fixed for Jan. 26, the function to be held in the Auditorium.

J. G. Gordon, of McClure & Langley, 30 William St., is spending a few days in Toronto.

A representative of The Grocer called on several local grocers to discuss the milk question, and the proposed increase in the price of liquor licenses. Many grocers expressed themselves as indifferent to the course of the City Council in the milk question because in the great majority of cases, it is kept, merely to accommodate customers 'and is no source of any very great income. Being unable to accurately judge the amount which is required, in many cases considerable is left over, and in this way the profits are soon turned into losses. Montreal has been suffering more or less from typhoid fever, and it has been suggested by some that its spread has been due to the milk kept in grocery stores. The action of the Council in rushing to this conclusion is not put in a very favorable light now, as many of these cases of supposed typhoid fever are turning out to be a form of intestinal grip, and not typhoid fever at all. The action of the Council is thought by a number of grocers to be a trifle high handed in this matter, as it is possible for milk to be kept in grocery stores, in as sanitary a condition as it can be kept elsewhere. What is thought to be less arbitrary and better for all concerned, is the establishment of an inspectorship, which would regulate its sale and improve the methods. All interested grocers are opposed to the raise in liquor licenses as they believe it is as high now as is commensurate with the profits, which are not as large as some may imagine. If there are irregularities let the police investigate the cases they say, and then they may be dealt with. It is unfair to make all the grocers suffer on account of a few black sheep.

F. Barriere has accepted a position with the Retail Grocers' Association as canvasser and collector.

Chas. Ferry has opened a confectionery and delicatessen store at 302 Bleury St.

P. Daust, 140 St. Catherine, has a very attractive window composed of the cheaper grades of candies, and evergreens. The candies are arranged in blocks about a foot square and separated from one another by ropes of evergreen. This is a window that appeals to the children, as it is nicely arranged, and contains only candies which come within the reach of all.

A local grocer who sells liquors has arranged his bulk goods in a very convenient way. Instead of having the barrels in an ill-lighted cellar he has them placed in the coolest end of his store, in three tiers. The first tier consists of the largest, and most frequently used stock. These casks are at a comfortable height and beneath them are smaller barrels, containing stock which takes the second preference. Above the first described row are the smallest casks, containing the rarely used liquors. The grocer claims this arrangement to be the most satisfactory which he has ever used.

Western Canada Notes

Introduction of Barley Flakes—Creameries May Gather Eggs From Farmers—New Canneries to Open.

VANCOUVER.

Jan. 12.—A new western product is being introduced to the trade this week. It is known as Caverhill's barley flakes, and is something on the same principal as rolled oats, only with a different grain as a basis. Mr. Caverhill, the originator of the process, is personally engaged in seeing the grocers. The manufacturers are Messrs. Brackman & Ker, who have the sole right, and to enable them to produce the article, machinery costing $40,000 has been installed in their mill at Calgary. The fact that this has been done is an indication of the faith that they have in the article, and they are quite sure it will meet with popular favor as a breakfast food. If it does, they will instal machinery in their mill at Victoria, so that it can be manufactured close to the coast market. An extensive advertising campaign is being prosecuted.

An unusual feature of the Christmas trade was the complete selling out of the imported poultry. This has never happened before. It shows that trade is fairly good, and that money is not altogether scarce, for the stock of turkeys that arrived was by no means small.

The directors of the Duncans Creamery Association are considering the suggestion by W. H. Hayward, M.P.P., at their annual meeting that the creamery gather eggs from the farmer the same as they do cream. He pointed out that in Denmark this scheme is successfully worked, as well as in other places. It gave a more stable market and better prices. When more particulars are obtained, the directors will hold a special meeting to consider the matter. The officers appointed were:—President, G. T. Corfield; vice-president, J. N. Evans; directors, Wm. Bazett, David Alexander, F. A. Jackson, Wm. Herd and C. T. Gibbons.

George Wolfenden, who has had considerable experience in the grocery business, is the manager of the co-operative store at New Westminster, which formally opened for business last Saturday.

C. A. Welsh, of New Westminster, has purchased the grocery business at Sapperton, of J. J. Efford, and took charge last Saturday. Howard Welsh is in charge.

J. R. Armstrong has opened a large grocery store in Penticton.

The fruit season of 1909 will see several new canneries in operation in the interior of the Province, where the fruit ranches are located. Those already established have proved successes, and growers and business men in the different localities are seeing the advantages of having a factory to utilize all the fruit that is not adapted for packing, yet is too good to throw away. The Thompson Valley Canning Company, composed of citizens of Kamloops, will have its factory ready for both fruit and vegetables, and at Summerland a proposition is also being considered. At the latter place a provisional board of directors has been appointed, consisting of Hon. W. M. Hespeler, H. C. Mellor, Rev. H. A. Solly, R. H. English and Hector Sutherland. At first a proposition was made to the city council, asking that body to guarantee the interest on the stock for ten years at 8 per cent., the capitalization being $30,000. If this were done the Summerland Fruit Company would build a cannery with a capacity of from 10,000 to 12,000 cans daily. It was found the council could not do this, so a public meeting was called, at which over $10,000 was subscribed forthwith, and no difficulty was anticipated in getting the other $8,000 or $10,000 necessary to go on with. It was pointed out at the meeting that other factories in the Okanagan district which operated during 1908, not only paid good prices for peaches, but piled up handsome dividends, and that in the first year, with established eastern opposition to meet. One thing that seemed to favor the institution of such companies in the interior is the large number of well-to-do people who have come west from east of the Rockies. These have invested in fruit lands, some on a large scale, and have the money to place into canning factories which help out their own interests. Co-operation along this line brings mutual benefits which are by no means inconsiderable.

REGINA.

Jan. 12.—The retail merchants here report that the Christmas trade was entirely satisfactory. While the volume of business was larger than last year there was no indication of customers buying what might be termed extravagant luxuries. The same keynote dominates this as all other lines of business and the lesson taught last year will not readily be forgotten. Extravagance and speculation are two words that have been rubbed off the slate and business generally will be conducted on sane and reasonable principles to the enormous benefit of the country at large.

C. W. Vivian, traveler for Campbell Bros. & Wilson, wholesale grocers, spent the holiday season with his parents in Winnipeg and is now back on his territory.

C. A. Michie, of the staff of Campbell Bros. & Wilson, is spending his holidays in Ontario and will be back about January 15th.

R. Alvin Wright, traveler for Cameron & Heap, is receiving the congratulations of his friends on his marriage to Miss Leila Ross. The ceremony was celebrated at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Ross, Stoughton, Sask., on Dec. 23rd.

The wholesale houses of this city are looking forward to the completion early this year of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's branch from here to connect with their Pheasant Hills branch at a point at or near Bulyea on the east side of Last Mountain Lake. This would give us some two hundred miles more territory and in a district that is well settled.

The Canadian Pacific Railay have shown their appreciation of the importance of Regina as a shipping point by the appointment of Mr. Harold Allison as district freight agent, under Mr. W. B. Lanigan. Mr. Allison is to have charge of the freight business for the province and will make headquarters here.

KINGSTON.

Jan. 13.—Grocers were well pleased with the Xmas trade, and as is always the case, there is a calm after the storm. That calm is extended by the elections, in which many grocers were interested. It always makes a grocer feel good when he hears of his fellow-tradesman being elected to represent cities and towns. Grocers may not always be able to make long speeches, but they have something in reserve which many of the others lack.

Dan Couper, grocer, was elected Mayor of our illustrious military city by a majority of 935 over his opponent, Lawyer Givens.

C. J. Graham, once a grocer, but now a contractor, defeated Marshall Reid, a grocer, by 75. There are an even number of Liberals and Conservatives in the council.

Arthur Craig, of the firm of W. G. Craig & Co., met with an accident which will necessitate his retirement from active canvassing for some time. He slipped coming down stairs at his home and badly strained the ligaments of his left leg. It is an unfortunate accident just at the time when the new firm, of which he is a member, was getting into shape to occupy its new premises.

A new idea with Ontario Government institutions here is to send out a typewritten circular to the patrons asking prices for tea, sugar, etc. This is about the same as asking tenders and those who have been getting patronage do not like the idea.

The by-law to give $10,000 to the Wormworth Piano Co., who were burned out a short time ago, was defeated by a small vote owing to a poorly gotten up ballot paper with too much small type. The Board of Trade does not feel satisfied and the by-law is to be voted on again.

Lipton's teas, coffees and jellies are being demonstrated by Miss Wood at Gilbert's Grocery.

David Gibson, for many years in the grocery business on Princess St. years ago, died recently. He was honest in all his dealings and had a kind word to those with whom he came in contact.

Our broom factories here have put up brooms 25c a dozen, and the end is not yet. None of the wholesale men have advanced prices so far.

"Jim," the grocer, bought a load of lemons when he heard about the earthquake at Messina.

Large hand-bills big enough to make kites, are flying all over the streets and January sales are in order now. It gives us a chill when a draft comes, and especially when you can't meet it.

All the aldermen who endorsed compulsory vaccination were defeated at the late elections.

ST. THOMAS.

January 13.—St. Thomas had two aldermanic candidates who are active officers of the R. M. A., viz., President Dubber and Wm. V. McDonald, First Vice-President, the latter being elected. Mr. Dubber is chairman of the Board of Health, and was an alderman for 1908, but we regret he was defeated this year.

Mr. McDonald, the successful candidate, and well-known merchant, was born in Ayr, Ont., in 1863, his father G. A. McDonald, conducted a general store there for many years. Mr. McDonald received his education in the Public and High Schools of Mitchell, Ont., and came to St. Thomas in 1881, where he was employed as clerk by H. G. Broderick. He then took a position with the Elliot Dry Goods Co., of Detroit. He returned to St. Thomas in the fall of 1895 and commenced business for himself on Ross Street with a stock of dry goods. He sold out this business five years later, and went into the shoe business, the new firm being Raven & McDonald. Mr. McDonald served two years as school trustee, and has given much time for the public benefit, and his election shows that his services have been appreciated. He has always taken a deep interest in the affairs of the R.M.A., and has the congratulations of his fellow merchants.

PETERBORO.

Jan. 14.—The Christmas trade has been considering it generally, most satisfactory and in practically every case has been as good as, if not better, than last year. It has also been remarked by several grocers here that they have not noticed any decided falling off since the close of the holiday season in grocery purchases.

Whatever may be the explanation, there is not nearly as much distress reported to the dispensers of civic charity as there was at this time last year. The requests for assistance have been few and there will be no necessity for the establishing of a relief house as was done last winter.

A step in the right direction has been made by some of the uptown merchants and is being appreciated by their clerks. The dry goods and millinery stores close on Saturday night at nine o'clock. The change was made last Saturday night and resulted in bringing out the purchasers at an earlier hour. The new system will probably remain. It can scarcely be stated yet whether it will spread to the grocers or not.

GUELPH.

January 13.—The Guelph Retail Merchants' Association took a very active part in the municipal elections. They are to be congratulated on the fact that in nearly every ward their choice of candidates was endorsed. In St. John's Ward the president of the association was elected. Among the others elected was J. A. McCrae, of J. A. McCrae & Son, who two years ago was in the council and made a good chairman of finance. It was considered by many that Mr. McCrae would have been elected mayor if he had allowed his name to go to the people. Another grocer who has entered the municipal field is S. E. Wiggins, who was elected school trustee in St. Patrick's Ward, after a good fight. Now the elections are over most grocers will settle down to the annual stock-taking and see how much money they have made or lost during the past year. Some grocers here do not bother taking stock at all.

A special car bringing members of the Toronto Fruit Dealers' Bowling Club is to arrive here to-night, the bowlers to play a friendly game.

There was a good market on Saturday and the plentiful supply of butter was the cause of a drop in the price, but it is expected to get back to fairly decent prices. When butter gets over 25c to 30c a lb. plenty of people refuse to use it and others cannot afford to do so, which may be one reason for the present drop in price.

The banquet held on Tuesday evening, Jan. 5th, of the staff of the J. A. McCrea & Sons's grocery store, was one of the most pleasant events of similar events held here. About twenty were in attendance and in addition to partaking of a dainty spread there were several toasts and a musical programme. The invited guests, in addition to the staff were J. W. Charles, W. Grindlay and D. C. Munro. Both members of the firm responded to the toast of "The Firm." Miss Dougherty rendered a mandolin solo, R. Gerrard and Miss Ethel Bott, piano solo. Will Dougherty sang a song and Albert Vass made a hit with a recitation on "The Noted Tea Store." The event was a pleasant one and served to produce a better feeling between employer and employe of J. A. McCrea & Son's store.

GALT.

January 13.—The grocery business in Galt is particularly brisk at present, having fully recovered from the after-holiday re-action. Canned goods are moving out briskly, as is to be expected at this time of year. Grocers also report a large demand for fancy biscuits—that is, the expensive brand to be used at "pink" teas and such like.

The price of eggs, which has been soaring for the past month, took a sudden drop on Saturday last. Immense quantities were offered at the market, and as a result the price came down from 35c to 30c, with a further decrease probable. Butter was 30c per pound.

At the inaugural meeting of the town council on Monday, Ald. Jaffray gave notice that he would introduce a by-law to appoint a market committee, whose sole duty it would be to boom the Galt market.

The Board of Trade, under the able direction of John Sloan, is negotiating for several new industries, and the present year promises much good work on the part of that energetic body.

LONDON.

January 13.—Sidney Screaton, son of Samuel Screaton, of Edward Adams & Co., till recently manager of the Lea Pickling Co., of Simcoe, Ont., has accepted a position with Mason & Hickey, grocery brokers, of Winnipeg, Man.

Thos. Janes, grocer, South London, came within 127 votes of being elected alderman.

Jas. Fitzgerald, until recently a member of the firm of Fitzgerald & Duncan, grocers, was a successful candidate for alderman.

ST. CATHARINES.

January 13.—Alderman Petrie has purchased the building occupied by Simson's grocery, at Thorold, Ont., by auction Saturday last. The building is three storeys high—the two flats above the store being used as lodgerooms, etc. The store is situated in the heart of the business section of Thorold. Mr. Petrie has not yet stated whether he will occupy the store section or whether it will be to rent. The purchase price was in the neighborhood of five thousand dollars.

One small lot of canned tomatoes, some twenty-odd cases of three's, and a very fine sample, changed hands last week at 65c per dozen. This is the lowest price on record for the season.

Butter was fairly easy this week, there being a good supply on the market Saturday. Prices ranged from 25c to 28c by the basket. New laid eggs were also easier under increased offerings, selling at 30c in quantities.

BOARD OF TRADE OFFICERS.

The new officers of the Toronto Board of Trade elected by acclamation are James P. Watson, president; W. J. Gage, 1st vice-president; R. S. Gourlay, 2nd vice-president, and John F. Ellis, treasurer.

DECLARING ANNUAL DIVIDENDS.

At a meeting of the directors of the Canada Brokerage Co., Toronto, on Tuesday, Jan. 12, the following dividends were declared: On the preferred stock, 7 per cent. and on the common stock, 5 per cent. The annual general meeting will be held in the company's offices, Toronto, on Wednesday, Jan. 27.

A NEW STARCH FACTORY?

A rumor, which has been given a good deal of credence, has been going the rounds of the trade recently that a new starch factory is to be started in Ontario. The story says that D. A. Gordon, president of the Wallaceburg Sugar Company, is being backed by Michigan interests to begin the manufacture of starch in Wallacebueg. At present nothing definite can be learned as to the matter.

Another story says that the same interests have been negotiating for the control of the Ontario Sugar Co.'s factory at Berlin, to be used for the manufacture of starch and glucose. The latter proposition seems to have apparently fallen through, however.

DINNER TO TRAVELING STAFF.

Good fellowship and loyalty to the firm were prevalent at a banquet of the traveling staff of Eby, Blain & Co., at the National Club, Toronto. The dinner came at the end of day's review of the work of the year. Several speeches were given by members of the firm, Mr. Hugh Blain giving the "boys" some words of advice, and J. W. Borsbery, who has been with the firm 28 years, spoke on behalf of the travelers. Those present were: J. F. Eby, W. P. Eby, H. Hardy, H. Meath, J. W. Borsbery, J. A. Milne, H. A. Ernst, F. J. Watson, L. E. Morden, A. L. McKechnie, R. D. Robertson, F. I. Hartley, H. Blain H. D. Eby, J. M. Stalker, D. Casey, T. S. Grant, J. A. Montgomery, J. A. Taylor, W. Brooke, A. S. Williamson, R. Pinchin, J. N. Notter.

OFF FOR EUROPEAN TRIP.

P. C. Larkin, of the Salada Tea Co., Toronto, left on Thursday with Mrs. and Miss Larkin for an extended European trip. The party will sail via New York this week for Genoa, and the winter will be spent in the south of France. Mr. Larkin has made no definite plans for the time following, but is taking his automobile along and will probably spend some time in touring Europe.

PERSONAL.

On Tuesday, December 29, the marriage was solemnized at Osgoode, near Kemptville, of George Wilson, general merchant, Reid's Mills, to Miss Mary J. Dillon, daughter of James Dillon, Osgoode.

George D. Sinclair, Winnipeg, representative, and T. T. Cartwright, special, New Brunswick and Newfoundland representative of E. W. Gillett Co., Ltd., Toronto, were callers on The Grocer this week.

A. G. Syer, merchant, North Bay, has been elected to the Council of 1909 of that place. He enjoys the unique distinction of having been given the honor without personal canvass to secure his election.

Judgment for one cent was the award made recently to the Ladago Canning Company, of Louisville, Ky., against the Corydon Canning Company. The plaintiff, however, has to pay the costs of the action, and the verdict is actually in favor of the defendant. The suit was brought upon the failure of the Corydon Company to deliver canned tomatoes as contracted.

STRONG MOLASSES SITUATION.

Very low stocks, a none too favorable outlook for the new crop, and continued demand resulted this week in a further advance of 2c a gallon on molasses. As forecasted in The Canadian Grocer several weeks ago the situation has become acute. It is very difficult to secure molasses. Stocks held in all parts of the Dominion are exceedingly low. One authority stated that holdings were never so light in his experience of over a quarter of a century. In Montreal it is estimated that stocks are less than one-quarter of what they were a year ago. Conditions are similar elsewhere in Canada, and even in Newfoundland.

It was thought in many quarters that we would have fancy molasses here in February, as reports from the Barbadoes stated that there would be some grinding in January, and that first shipments could be made toward the end of February. Later advices contradict this.

One of our best importing houses stated, re the situation in the West Indies: "They have had exceptionally dry weather in the Barbadoes, and crops have suffered very much; they have had some nice showers recently (December 24, in the Barbadoes), which may improve the situation a little, but they have been too late in coming to be of very much use to the growing crop. It would not surprise us if the market opened high."

Another house particularly well posted says: "Until recently the reports from the British West Indies were very discouraging (January 9, in Canada), owing to the excessive drought which prevailed all through the season—but we are now advised that during the last few weeks moderate rains have prevailed, and, while these will probably not bring the crop up to the average, at the same time it will be a very great improvement on what has been anticipated, and the probability is that a very fair crop will be made. Naturally, owing to prevailing conditions, the market will open high, but the future must be governed entirely by weather conditions between now and March. We might also add that favorable growing weather will result in the crop being delayed, whereas if dry weather prevails the crop will come on early and be comparatively short."

An average crop would mean in the neighborhood of 40,000 puncheons. Last year's yield was about 48,000 puncheons, while two years ago 60,000 puncheons were obtained. It takes some 10,000 puncheons to supply the Canadian trade.

It is hardly likely that we will have any molasses to speak of here before April. Some fancy may be brought in via St. John and Halifax, in March, but it is choice molasses that the trade desires most, and it comes in direct steamers in April.

ADULTERATIONS IN CANADIAN PEPPER.

A bulletin just issued by the laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department at Ottawa gives some interesting information regarding the ground pepper used in Canada. The Department has analyzed 146 samples of white pepper, gathered from different districts in the Dominion and out of these finds 106 genuine, 32 adulterated and 8 doubtful. This shows a percentage of 21.9 adulterated. Black pepper gives even a less favorable showing. Of 152 samples analyzed, 110 are genuine, 37 adulterated, and 5 doubtful.

While the test in question showed a gratifying improvement in that for 28 years past, the average of adulteration has been 50 per cent. Pepper still remains one of the most badly adulterated foods in Canada. The enforcement of the new Pure Food Laws in the United States has resulted in the prohibition of the importation of materials ordinarily used for the adulteration of spices, and it seems probable that some of these goods have found their way into Canada, a factor much to be regretted.

The report points out that the substances used as adulterants, pepper dust, ground bushes, sand, flour, cayenne, cocoanut shells, are not distinctly unwholesome, but these materials, besides being undesirable mixtures, are certainly frauds and more or less injurious when used as food.

BROOM PRICES GOING UP.

The advance in brooms spoken of as probable last week seems to be surely coming. Already at one or two Ontario points the price has been advanced 25 cents per dozen and a further advance is probable.

The shortage spoken of in the Oklahoma and Indiana broom corn crops seems to be a fact. At a meeting of manufacturers in Chicago last week figures in Chicago last week figures quoted showed the 1908 Oklahoma crop to be 16,000 tons as against 40,000 in 1907, and 65,000 in 1908. In Illinois the 1908 crop is given as only 5,000, as compared with 8,000, the year before and 15,000 in 1906.

United States manufacturers advanced their price from 25 to 50 cents last year, while the Canadian firms kept them on the same basis. From this it will be seen that the prospects of a sweeping advance shortly are very likely.

WHERE GOVERNMENT ERRED.

The Onfario Government could not have had the best interests of the commercial travelers at heart judging from their appointment of the special commissioner to look after the equipment of hotels in the province. W. K. Snider, as was mentioned in last week's issue, received the appointment. Mr. Snider has for the past three or more years been organizer for the Conservative party and therefore would naturally be much interested in the Government wishes.

It would appear that had the appointment gone to a member of the Travelers' Association, the work of improving the hotel equipments would have been attended to with more decision by a man not directly interested in politics. A traveler, too, who has been on the road for some time knows the faults in hotels, and how they can be best remedied. The broad field he has to cover brings him in contact with every class of hotel and he is in a position to determine the deficiences and intelligently order improvements.

The Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada had endorsed the appointment of Lieut.-Col. John Stoneman who, we believe, would have been the right man for the position, but the Government has seen fit to do otherwise.

Rates Affected Fruit and Provision Firms

Proposed New Express Classification Would Have Been Serious for Commission Houses Who do Large Outside Business —Clause Regarding "Enclosures" Meant Much to Country Merchants—Railway Commission's Order Obviates Difficulty at Present.

The prompt, decisive and effective measures adopted by the Railway Commission, sitting at Ottawa, in cancelling the new express rates, which went into force on January 1 last, and restoring the old tariff, brought joy to the hearts of those merchants who would be very seriously affected by the change. Judge Mabee, after hearing evidence from the express companies and from shippers, gave judgment summarily annulling the new classification. He explained that the commissioners understood the new arrangement would on the whole mean a slight reduction in rates to the general shipping public and they had relied on the companies keeping the agreement entered into with Judge Killam, that no radical changes would be made in the rates, pending the result of a general inquiry.

The evidence, however, seemed to show that the new classification involved serious changes and general increases, and the board felt its duty was to recall its order of approval.

Hard on Fruit and Provision Men.

A point in the new rates affecting the country merchant was that providing against the forwarding of enclosures, as when a wholesale house making up a shipment include a parcel for another firm or for another party in the same town. If carried out, this would have been rather inconvenient as well as costly for the country merchant, but the annulment of the new rates will, of course, avoid this.

While the new rates, or rather classifications, did not seriously affect the grocery houses of the country, they did affect the wholesale provision, fruit and fish men, more especially in the matter of making a charge for the return of empty boxes, cans and crates, and on this point representations were made to the commission while sitting at Montreal by the Toronto fruit and provision men complaining of the charge. The commission promised to investigate the question and it was thought a sitting at Toronto would be necessary. The action of the board in cancelling the rates, however, may make this unnecessary.

The new classification adopted by the express companies on empties stated that charges must be prepaid, and even then were accepted only at owner's risk if lost or damaged. It affected butter boxes, cans, fish boxes and barrels, flower baskets and crates, fruit and vegetable empties, oyster tubs, pails and cases, poultry boxes, yeast boxes, soda water cases and bread and biscuit empties. The rates ran all the way from 5c to a charge one-half that of the merchandise rate. There has been for some years now a charge on the return of egg cases and chicken coops, but the new rate would include all other empties, the only exception being milk and cream cans.

Toronto Board of Trade Acts.

On January 7 the produce section of the Toronto Board of Trade met and sent the following telegram:

"Judge Mabee,
"Chairman Railway Commission,
"Montreal.

"The produce section of the Board of Trade, Toronto, in session, wish to go on record as protesting against existing charges by express companies on dairy products; also against the recent added charges on returned empties, which charges are more than covered by the existing rates on produce.

"J. T. MADDEN,
"Chairman."

Gradually Increasing Charges.

Mr. Madden, who is manager of the Wm. Ryan Co., provision merchants, on being interviewed, said the charge was unfair. Some seven years ago the express companies raised the rates, but when an objection was made, said the increase was to cover the return charges. Two years later a charge of 5c was placed on the return of egg cases. On being questioned regarding this charge and showing that the former increase was to cover such cases, the express companies made some explanation about a specific charge on egg crates. The provision men did not object, believing the charge a fair one and thinking the companies would be responsible for the proper care and return of empties. Up to that time provision men lost many egg crates, and it was a serious loss in the carrying on of business. But things did not improve very appreciably. When there was a rush, Mr. Madden had seen his egg crates standing on the station platform for a week at a time. His company now was obliged to buy a thousand new cases every year and import a car load of egg fillers because of the neglect of the express companies. Then the loss sustained in having eggs packed in these cases which had been exposed to the weather was incalculable. The charge was very unfair.

Might Mean Shipping by Freight.

J. L. Bowes, manager of the J. A. McLean Produce Co., was another man who believed the charge unfair, and if it had gone through it would probably mean that the express business would be cut out and shipments would be made by freight.

W. H. Despard, of White & Co., who ship fruit, vegetables and fish, in specially-constructed crates, said the charges would be quite heavy so far as they were concerned. It was on this account that he had wired the commission protesting against the charge on empties and received a reply stating the matter would be investigated.

H. W. Thorpe, of McWilliam & Everist, said his company would not be affected, as they shipped in original package and these were not returned.

F. T. James, of F. T. James & Co., fish dealers, felt that his company would not be affected, shipping, as they do, oysters and fish in cheap, neat and new packages, which were not to be returned.

Members of the wholesale grocery trade say the new classification would not affect them materially, since grocers in the country usually waited until a carload of empty cases accumulated and then shipped them back by freight.

M. P. Mallon, poultry dealer, felt that the charge was unfair, but that so far as he was concerned, the extra express charges were met by the shippers outside the city.

C. E. Edmonds, of Christie, Brown & Co., said his company shipped biscuits by car lots only and when doing so used freight cars. Tae boxes are returned the same way, for it would be more profitable to make new boxes than use express and pay the charges. He also said it would cost more to bring in a car of empty boxes from, say Hamilton, by freight than it would to send the same quantity of full boxes to Hamilton by boat.

GROCERS IN HOCKEY.

During the past week three good games in the Wholesale Grocers' League, Toronto, were played. On Friday night of last week the T. Kinnear & Co.'s team ran away with the Brokers II. team by the score of 9 to 1. The line ups were:

Brokers II.—Goal, Patrick; point, P. Millman; cover, Shea; forwards, Watt, Hortop, A. Millman.

H. P. Eckardt & Co. defeated Brokers I. by 4 goals to 1 on Monday night, the half-time score being 1 all, with play very evenly divided. The teams:

H. P. Eckardt & Co.—Goal, Joyce; point, Wilkinson; cover, Brown; centre, Thompson; right wing, Wilkinson; left wing, Cowan.

Possibly the closest fought game of the three was the one of Wednesday night, when the Jas. Lumber Co.'s team won out in the latter half by the score of 7 to 4. At half-time it was 3 all, and shortly after the breathing spell it was 4—4, but at no time were the winners behind. Some great games are expected in the coming week. The teams were:

Eby-Blain Co.—Goal, Kelly; point, Thomas; cover, Gay; forwards, Niel, Bond, Meath.

Jas. Lumbers Co.—Goal, Lumbers; point, Kerr; cover, Nelles, forwards, Ford, Pyne, Carradus.

JS LAND COMMISSIONER.

Frederick Dane, grocery broker, Yonge Street, Toronto, has been appointed Land Commissioner of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway. One of the important features of his work will be to advise intending purchasers of land along these railways in the interests of the settlement of the districts contiguous to them. Mr. Dane is also a member of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway Commission.

QUEBEC MARKETS

POINTERS—
Lard—Advanced ½c.
Fish—Declined.
Sugar—Firm.
Flour—Declined 10c.
Molasses—Advanced 2c gal.

Montreal, Jan. 13.

Conditions generally are as good as can be expected at this time of the year. Travelers are reporting prospects very good in the country. Stocks, which have been low during the whole year, are now very much depleted, consequently with returning confidence in business conditions, it is thought that trade prospects should be good for the spring. Satisfaction is expressed generally regarding the volume of the Christmas trade. Remittances and collections have been very good, and this is regarded as a favorable augury. Locally trade has been a little on the quiet side, which is not unusual after the holidays.

Some changes have taken place in the market, chief among which is the decline in flour of 10c per barrel. In the ordinary course of events declines are quite in order at this season of the year, as some inducement must be offered the buyers, in this way to stimulate trade at a dull time. Molasses, however, owing to extraordinary conditions, failed to react to this rule, and has advanced 2c gallon. A full explanation of the reason will be found on another page of The Grocer, under a special heading. Owing to the active demand for hogs, lard has gone up a step. Butter remains fairly stationary, while cheese has slumped. Canned goods are dull. Furs are decidedly on the high side, and such lines as lynx, red fox, and fisher are scarce. Peppers are strong in the primary markets. Poultry is scarce. Sugar has shown pronounced strength during the week.

It is remarkable what an influence a disaster to any quarter of the globe has on the rest of the world. Owing to the recent catastrophe in Sicily we are now paying more for filberts, Sicily wines, Tanagona almonds, olive and essential oils, showing plainly the economic importance of this little island in the Mediterranean.

SUGAR—A firmer feeling is developing in the sugar market which was not expected so quickly. Refiners are well supplied with raw sugar for their requirements, and are not taking very large quantities. Locally, the demand for sugar is reported by some of the wholesale houses as better than at this time last year. So far, prices have been fully maintained at last week's level.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—Molasses has developed a strong position owing to small supplies held and not the best of prospects of the situation being relieved as soon as was expected. Prices have risen 2c a gallon on all lines and are now about 10c higher than those of a year ago. Corn syrups are only fairly active, some trade developing in small tinned lines. Grocers are not much interested in high-grade teas as they think from now till spring people will favor the lower-priced product. No new quotations have been announced during the week. It is rather difficult to forecast the movements of the market, as the stocks held throughout the city and country are extremely low.

DRIED FRUITS—Owing to a general stock-taking, business in these lines has been of a limited character. Currants have dropped ½c for fine filiatras, and a generally easy feeling exists in the market. This is due to an easier tone which has developed in Greece. Stocks throughout the country are distinctly on the light side, therefore a good trade will probably develop in the spring. Dates are strongly held as stocks available are much less than last year.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL.—Altogether the demand for canned goods is decidedly poor. Vegetables and fruits, however, are bright spots in the market. Canned fish is fair for the season, which is always a dull one for this commodity, but canned meats are slow.

TORONTO.—Peas, corn and tomatoes are passing off fairly well and the demand for the more used lines of fruits is also good. There's little doing in salmon and other lines of fish.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—
Molasses—An advance in price.
Coffee—Good demand, market firm.
Canned Goods—Steady in fruits and vegetables.

Toronto, Jan. 14, 1909.

Local wholesalers report business generally to be rather brisk this week. Of course there are some articles in more demand than others, due to the particular time and season of the year. Retailers still continue to complain about quietness in business, but a change for the better may be expected at any time.

One of the chief items of interest this week is an advance in molasses from the Barbadoes and West Indies. The reason for this increase in price is not exactly known yet to the wholesalers, but it has been reported that a shortage in rain has been the cause.

Business seems to be rather brisk in canned goods, so far as fruit and vegetables are concerned, probably because the supply of fruit put up by the housewives is in many cases getting low.

Collections during the week are reported good, which seems to be a good indication that the retailer is doing some business.

SUGAR—The market in sugar this week is rather quiet, prices being quoted similar to those of last week.

TEA—The good demand for Ceylons noted during the past few weeks still continues with perhaps a slight falling off. There seems to be a considerable call for Indians, both of the cheaper and highly flavored varieties, whereas highly flavored Ceylons are somewhat scarce.

COFFEE—There is a firmness noticeable in the coffee market this week and business locally continues good with no changes in prices. Willett & Gray, in their report on the situation, give the following on the past year and the outlook for the future: The past year in coffee was marked by a great deal of mistrust to the exclusion of different features that have been constantly contributing to heal their conditions. It now appears that the coffee trade proper begins to realize that instead of the Government holdings being any menace to the market, the new loan and agreement conserving those holdings have put the coffee beyond all peradventure of indiscriminate sale, and what is more, not a bag will be sold within a year from now and after that only limited quantities year to year. All this has finally forced attention to the true situation and the available supplies.

After a very active month of deliveries to the interior—1,835,000 bags during December in Europe and the States—the world's visible supply has decreased 580,000 bags since December 1st, and the total world's supplies in sight today are 1,000,000 bags less than January 1, 1908, say 15,700,000 bags, out of which the Government holdings are about 7,000,000 bags. The coffee world, therefore, has to reckon with available supplies of only 8,700,000 bags, and with it only about 1,500,000 bags of the present crop to come down in Santos and 700,000 bags in Rio during the second half of the crop season, together with the movement of the mild crops. The combined deliveries in Europe and the States for the first six months of the crop were 9,300,000 bags in a period of restricted buying by the trade, which strongly emphasizes probable total deliveries of upward of 18,000,000 bags for the crop year 1908-09. These are the main points which make the true position of coffee all the more interesting and attractive on the natural basis of supply and demand, and it is little wonder that dealers, roasters and jobbers commence to look ahead in order to get the assortment and descriptions which their trade will require right along.

The outlook for the 1909-10crops shows no improvement. The latest reports on the Santos crop still speak of the strong probability of the yield being less than the current crop, while nothing new is heard from Rio. The extent of the crops on the present prospects can now be judged fairly close, but whatever happens in the remaining months, when the crop is maturing, nothing can occur to increase the yield.

Looking at present values of the far-off options in New York, 75 to 100 points less than the same time a year ago, and the statistical position present and prospective in strong contrast, an improvement in prices seems natural.

DRIED FRUITS—The demand in dried fruits has not been very great since the passing of the holiday season. The prices are steady.

INDEPENDENT CANNERS MEET.

The annual meeting of the Independent Canners' Association of Ontario was held at the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, on Thursday and Friday, January 7th and 8th.

The association has shown gratifying progress during the year, both as regards membership and the work done, and has been an influential factor in the canned goods trade of Canada.

In the election of officers, E. D. Smith, of Winona, and the Beamsville Preserving Co., was re-elected President. W. G. Trethewey, of the Sanitary Packing Co., Weston, is First Vice-President, and T. E. Owens, of the Bloomfield Canning Co., Bloomfield, Second Vice-President. R. W. Bael, Toronto, was re-elected Secretary-Treasurer.

The Board of Directors includes S. E. Masten, the Farmers' Canning Co., Bloomfield; F. J. Lowe, J. H. Wethey, St. Catharines; R. C. Eckhert, Gorman-Eckhert, London; Geo. E. Fisher, Burlington Canning Co., and W. A. Carson, Napanee Canning Co.

The Legislative Committee is made up of the President Vice-President and Secretary.

One of the interesting points of Thursday's meeting was a discussion on "Systems of Processing," which was taken part in by nearly every one present.

Geo. E. Fisher, of the Burlington Canning Co., gave a report on cans, including interesting information on can making, and the quality of tin which should be used.

Mr. Fisher also spoke on the standard weight of 2s and 3s.

One of the most important matters discussed at the meeting was that of the advisability of fixing a time allowance for swells and leaks. As a result, a definite term will likely be fixed at the next meeting.

A pleasant conclusion to the two days' meeting was the banquet and theatre party tendered to the delegates by Rolph & Clark at the National Club and Massey Hall respectively, on Thursday evening. The dinner party was a very recherche affair, and the hosts, Frank A. Rolph and T. J. Clark, chairmen, expressed their pleasure in having the privilege of entertaining their many friends in such an important and growing industry as the canned goods trade. Owing to the short time at the disposal of the party before attending Harry Lauder's Scotch concert at Massey Hall only a few short addresses were made by Mr. Rolph, J. M. Clark, and S. Edgar Masten of the Farmers' Canning Co., Bloomfield, the latter in a happy speech extending the thanks of the Independent Canners to their hosts. Of the number of canners attending the meeting only about twenty-five were able to be present on account of having had other engagements.

R. W. Ball, of the Essex Canning and Preserving Co., was a friendly guide of the party through the winding streets to Massey Hall, and a useful interpreter of the mysterious and incomprehensible Scotch expressions of the great Lauder.

THE SITUATION IN THE WEST

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Severe Cold Prevailing Makes Business Quiet—Checker Playing in the Grain Exchange—Grain Traffic Department Begun — Rates on Night Messages Reduced.

Added to the holiday dulness the Canadian West has been battling with the coldest snap in ten years during the past week, and, consequently, things have been somewhat quiet along the lines of regular trade. Stocktaking is about finished in the retail houses, and returns are being made up. Wholesale houses are jogging along filling small sorting orders, but really putting in an extremely quiet time.

At the Grain Exchange the smoking room has been far more popular than the trading room and about the only excitement has been some stiff games of checkers that have been fought to a finish. It has been nothing unusual to find eight or ten games in progress at one time, each table with its little crowd of spectators and round the reading tables groups of men with feet comfortably elevated reading quietly. Once in a while an active broker breaks in upon the peace and harmony, but is sure to be regarded rather as an intruder.

Although in regular lines the week has been deadly dull, the West has not been inactive by any means, and some of the announcements of the week are among the most important for many months. At the head of the list probably is the establishment by the Canadian Pacific Railway of a "Grain Traffic Department," which will have jurisdiction from Fort William to Laggan. Thos. S. Acheson, who has for some time acted as traveling freight agent for the C.P.R., is now appointed to the head of this department, and will be known officially as "Grain Agent of the C.P.R." Important questions in connection with grain matters have heretofore been handled by the various general freight agents, now all questions relating to the transportation of grain will be handled by the new department. The step has been decided upon owing to the enormous increase in the business attendant upon the movement of the Western crop. Every year brings new problems in the handling of grain, and it is felt by the C.P.R. that all such questions can best be met by a special department, a department whose entire time, energy and ability will be devoted to the movement of the Western crop. This action on the part of the C.P.R. is a popular one.

Proposed Railway Extensions.

While on the subject of the Canadian Pacific it might be mentioned that at present writing William Whyte, second vice-president of the road, is in the East making arrangements for the work of this year. He is asking for $30,000.000 to be expended upon Western lines. This is a very large sum in view of the fact that the double-tracking is now practically completed, which has been one of the heaviest items in construction work for the past three years. The money asked for is mainly for extending lines that are already begun. Among the new lines or rather extensions that will be pushed this year is the one from Stoughton to Weyburn. It is expected that this line will ultimately reach Lethbridge and in doing so will pass through an exceptionally fine farming section of Southern Alberta, much of which is suitable for the cultivation of fall wheat.

It is expected that some 100 miles of this road will be completed during the present year in order to accommodate the large number of farmers that have moved into the more eastern section of the country, that will eventually be served by this road.

The present year is one that should rejoice the heart of all makers of rails, structural steel and railway supplies generally for all plans are tending in the direction of a most exceptional railway development.

Message Rates Reduced.

The Winnipeg Jobbers' and Shippers' Union have gained a victory that will be much appreciated by all business men. This is a reduction of the night rate on commercial messages to 50c for ten words from Winnipeg to Vancouver. Heretofore there has been no reduced night rate between Winnipeg and the coast, although there has been a rate equivalent to half the day rate from points in Eastern Canada to the coast. Jobbers in Winnipeg have long felt that this was a most unjust discrimination and the announcement of the new rate has been received with much enthusiasm.

During the week the contract was let for an additional elevator at Port Arthur. This elevator will be the property of the Thunder Bay Elevator Company, Limited, and will have a capacity of 1,500,000 bushels. It will be located 1,000 feet west of the Antikokan Iron Works at Port Arthur, and the elevator and the site together will cost, with trackage, $550,000. It will have three unloading tracks and a complete system of nine interlocking pits, each with a capacity of 2.000 bushels, and will be able to unload 200 cars every 10 hours and to load into vessels at the rate of 50,000 bushels per hour. Already the contractors, the Barnet, McQueen Co., of Fort William, have commenced operations on the driving of piles and they are under heavy penalties to have the elevator ready for use on September 15 of this year.

The question of Government ownership of interior elevators is going to prove one of the live issues of the winter. It has already been broached in the Saskatchewan House, and Premier Scott intimated that the Premiers of the three Provinces were seriously considering the matter. He further intimated that if the Provincial Government should undertake such an ownership it would only be as a complete monopoly. This question will also be the piece de resistance at the annual meeting of the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, to be held at Brandon during the current month.

The matter is a very serious one, and the quieter and more thoughtful of the farmers are very dubious of any good resulting from Government ownership of interior elevators, although all are agreed as to the wisdom of Government (that is Dominion Government control) of terminals. This, of course, is practically achieved at the present time.

Wheat Market Dull.

Although the wheat market has been a dull one all week it has been remarkably strong and towards the end of the week there was a decided improvement in export inquiry. The fact is, Liverpool stocks are small, and though our prices are high, they are nearly 6c under the American. To this must be added anxiety as to the damage done winter wheat by the extreme cold weather and the absence of a snow blanket.

At present it would appear that there are still some 13,000,000 in the hands of Western farmers available for market. Stocks in the interior to come forward are about 18,000,000 bushels. Receipts have been almost nothing during the past week.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, January 14, 1909.)

Values are steady in most lines this week, the only feature of particular interest being a sharp decline in corn syrups. This is referred to below.

Business is active. Travelers are now covering their routes again and from the volume of orders received it is evident that Christmas and holiday trade was very active throughout the country, materially reducing retail stocks. The first month of 1908 was very disappointing, but the experience this year is different.

SUGAR—Prices have remained unchanged since the reduction noted in last issue. Quotations are as follows:

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES—The feature of the local market has been a sharp reduction in corn syrups. This is not due to the lower price of corn, as manufacturers have to use corn one year old and the product being put on the market now is manufactured from corn bought at high prices last year. The reduction is caused by strong competition from the United States. Quotations are:

Prize-Winning Christmas Windows

The Results in The Grocer's Holiday Window Dressing Competition—Windows From Town and Country From Nova Scotia to Vancouver Island—Some New Ideas and How They Were Worked Out — How the Leading Designs Were Worked Out.

CLASS I.

FIRST PRIZE—Window dressed by Harry Young, with Fred. Carne, Victoria, B.C.

SECOND PRIZE—Window dressed by J. H. Connal, of P. Connal & Son, Peterboro.

CLASS II.

FIRST PRIZE—Window dressed by J. McDermid, Georgetown.

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION—FIRST PRIZE WINDOW CLASS I.

SECOND PRIZE—Window dressed by E. J. Kirk, with Kirk Bros., Bracebridge.

Such is the result of The Grocer's Christmas Window Dressing Competition, as announced by the judges this week.

It was a bigger task than ever. For two or three weeks previous to the last day of the year when the contest closed, almost every day saw a new bunch of photos on the editor's desk and in the last few days, after the grocers had gotten through with the Christmas rush and had time to devote to something else than serving customers, they came in shoals.

And they came from all over Canada, from Nova Scotia to British Columbia, one of the latter a prize-winner by the way, and from nearly every city in each of the Provinces. The interest in this annual contest is certainly growing, and is very gratifying to the publishers of the paper. A pleasing feature was the number of entries from Western Canada. There were big windows and little windows, some splendidly mounted on large mounts, and others that came in rolled up and that curled up like a pug dog's tail when they came to be examined. There were windows with Christmas trees and windows with Santa Clauses, some with dolls and some with pictures. There were fruit windows and candy windows, biscuit windows and canned goods windows, plain windows and luxurious windows, and so on, almost ad infinitum.

The plan inaugurated last year, of dividing the entries into two classes, with the idea of giving a more just opportunity to the grocers in the smaller towns and country districts, who are presumed to have less facilities for window dressing than their confreres in the cities, was followed this year, and seemed to work satisfactorily. It is rather peculiar, however, that on the whole the windows entered in Class II. compare very favorably, if they do not surpass, those in Class I. Something of this can be judged from the photos reproduced here. Those shown are the four prize-winners, two in each class.

Something About the Prize Winners.

The first prize window in Class I. comes from Harry Young, in Fred. Carne's grocery, Victoria, B.C., several of whose windows have previously appeared in these pages. Mr. Young's windows are always timely, and the Christmas season and spirit fairly breathes out of this one. In describing the window, Mr. Young says:

"The window is banked up from the front about four feet on a angle. The sides are Sultanas and Valencias. Apples are on the outside of them and currants in the middle. Peels form the dividing lines. A Merry Xmas is laid in cube sugar. The rest of the window is white bunting trimmed with holly and silver tinsel. On the top stand boxes of prunes and bon-bons, with tinsel around the sides of the boxes. Boxes of figs, with red and green ribbon trimming. Other rows are fruit, bunches of grapes and fancy boxes of candy and bon-bons.

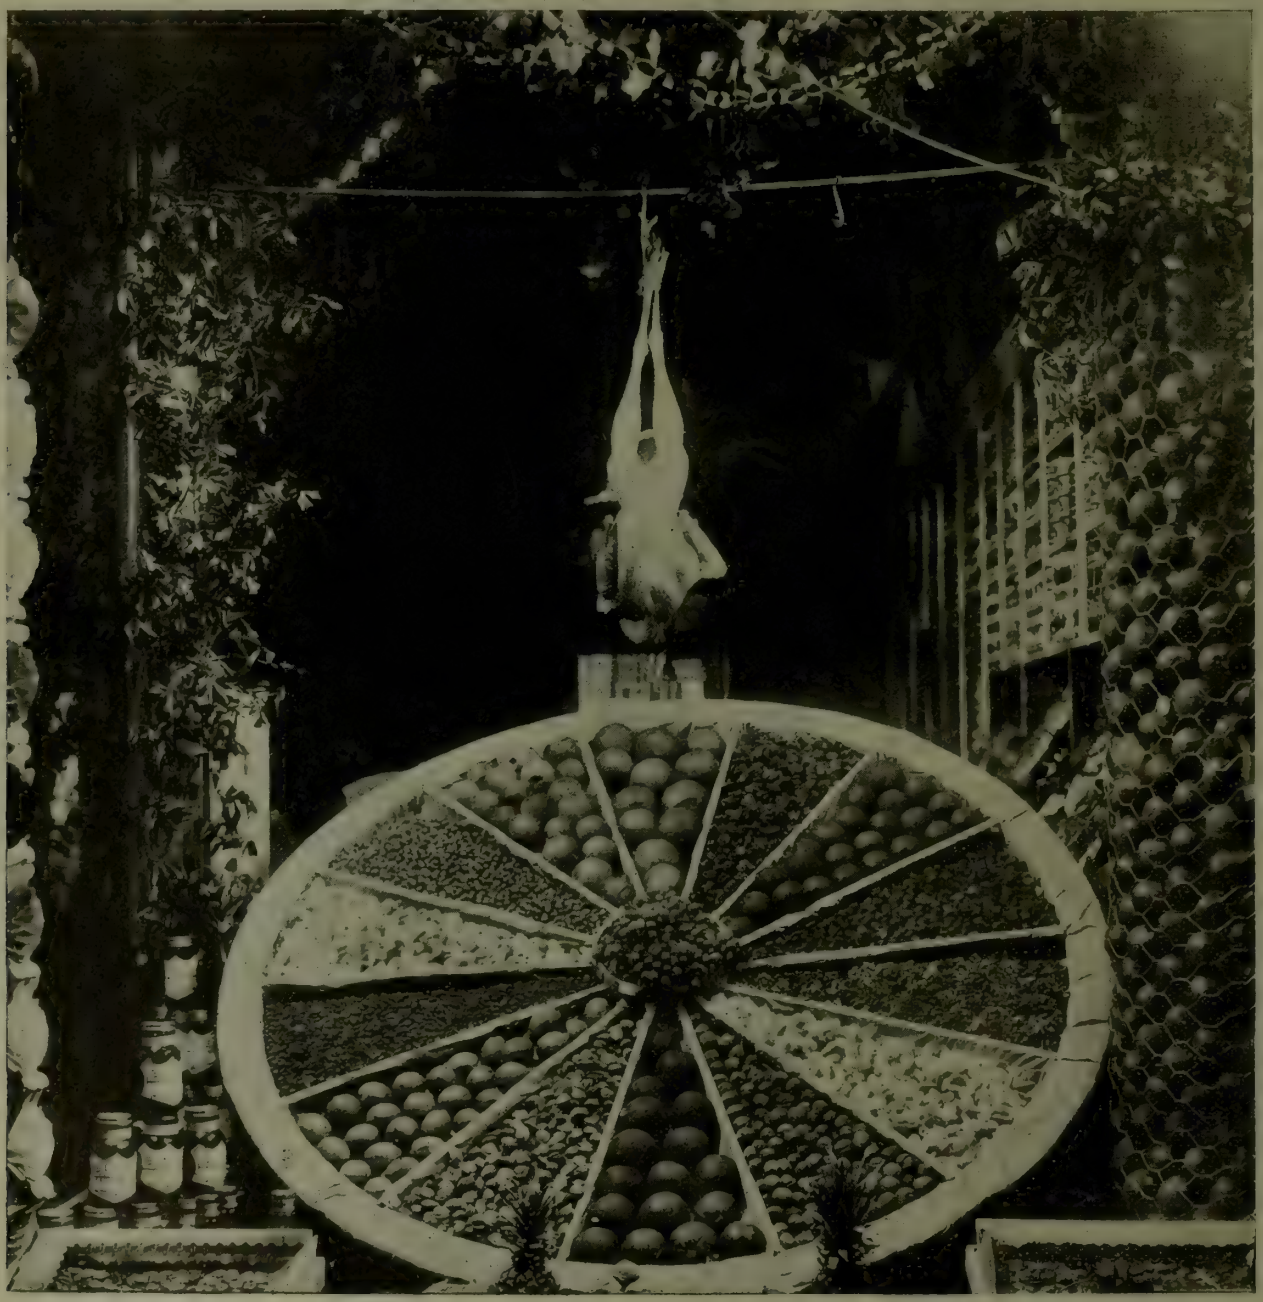
Up the sides of the windows are pink boards with holly leaves and lettering in silver tinsel. The middle of the window is a large looking glass reflecting back the fruit in front, looking like a hole. The roof is all boxed in with white bunting with a hole in the middle for the light to hang in. There are two hundred and fifty glass prisms attached to the roof with silver pendants here and there, with holly on the sides and silver tinsel around the hole where the lamp hangs. At the back is red ribbons twisted, forming a sun burst."

Another note in Mr. Young's letter draws attention to the white and pink roses scattered here and there through the display, which, he says, were grown outside just before Christmas, a tribute to Victoria's climate, surely.

The second prize window in Class I. won its place more because of the novelty of arrangement and the new ideas presented rather than for any fine decoration effects. A taking feature of this window, too, is that practically everything bears a price ticket. In describing the window, Connal & Son say:

"The idea of the window was to emphasize the quality of our goods as the Queen of Quality. The central figure, a beautiful doll, dressed in royal robes, with a crown of gold or her head, stands under a light canopy made of light framework trimmed with silver paper, with a white sateen curtain as a background. The roof is made from paper covered with silver paper. The ridges of roof are trimmed with holly, with silver tinsel hung in loops along the eves as a finish. The floor of the window was built up at the back with steps leading down to the front of the window. The whole was covered with white sheet cotton batting. Along the front of the window are arranged nuts of all kinds, with price tickets attached. On the steps were placed fancy table raisins in layers, fancy box candies, also candies in fancy glass dishes with price tickets on each. On each side of the steps are pillars made from a length of stove pipe covered with white cotton, with blocks of wood top and bottom, covered with turkey red cotton. On top of each of these five pillars we placed a cheese box cover, covered with white and trimmed with holly. These all filled with different kinds of candy, which we sell at special prices during Christmas season, each kind with a price card on it. A clothes basket filled with California seedless oranges placed on each side of the queen's canopy completed the window."

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITIO N—2ND PRIZE WINDOW, CLASS I.



The first prize winner in Class II. is one that its owner, J. McDermid, Georgetown, Ont., really ought to be proud of. He has conceived a good idea and has carried it out in excellent effect. Mr. McDermid's store is a typical small town grocery, the window is not by any means a large one, and the design used is admirably suited both to the store and the window.

Several novel ideas have been used in this window, particularly in the building up of their large pillar of oranges, which will give some useful hints to other grocers. Mr. McDermid, who designed and dressed the window himself, writes regarding it:

"The centre-piece, you will notice, is in the shape of a wheel, set at an angle of 45 degrees. The bottom of the wheel is covered with half-inch boards and divided into fourteen compartments with a small circle in the centre, all of which is covered with tissue paper, one division being done in green, the next in cerisse, and so on. Starting at the centre division at the top to the right is grape fruit, chocolate candy, oranges, walnut candy, shelled walnuts, cream candy, walnuts, oranges, almond nuts, lemons, shelled almonds, mixed candy, filberts, apples and the centre circle is filled with Malaga grapes, giving a nice contrast. On the right you see a pillar of California oranges six feet high which fills that side of the window nicely. The rack which holds the oranges is made of poultry wire with a tin tube inside, the oranges being slipped down between the tin and the wire. On the left of the wheel is a pyramid of Wagstaffe's cherries and peaches in glass. In the centre of the window between the wheel and the glass there is a fancy china plate filled with natural figs, on either side of which is a pineapple, then boxes of bon bons, and at either end a box of fancy table raisins, some of which show very clearly in the photo. The window is decorated with natural holly at the back and paper festooning across the top and down the sides at the front. Across the back of the window I had a row of fine turkeys hanging on the iron bar which shows in the photo, which made a splendid background for the window, but as the photographer couldn't photograph the window until after Xmas, the turkeys with one exception had to go and I feel it would have helped the appearance of the window very considerably had they appeared in the photo."

Kirk Bros., Bracebridge, whose window, chiefly a fruit display, carried off the second prize in Class II., is reproduced herewith, sent another window which was rather novel in the form of a ferris wheel, which, however, did not strike the judges so favorably as the one shown. While they sent no detailed discription of this window the photo pretty well explains it. The pyramid idea has been carried out to form an attractive display and certainly Christmas goods are well put forward. The display, like many of the others, might have been made much more effective by the use of well-written price tickets.

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITION—1ST PRIZE WINDOW, CLASS II.

Some of the Other Entries.

While the above are the features of the prize-winners, which, of course, deserve to be treated at some length, there are besides these a large number of windows which are worthy of special mention, some of which will be reproduced in various issues throughout the year. From the city grocers there were a number which, while not prize-winners, were not far behind them.

A window sent by E. A. Reed, clerk with W. Dowling & Co. Brandon, Man., who, by the way, was one of the prize-winners last year, shows a novel arrangement of Christmas goods and confectionery, with an arched background of latticework and canned goods trimmed with Christmas stockings and bells to give a pleasing effect. A mirror in the side of the window bearing words of greeting was an added feature.

A window from White & Gillespie, Peterboro, also came well up in this class. In this the floor was covered with dried fruits and a diamond-shaped display in the centre was well arranged. A background decorated with holly and evergreen covered half the rear of the window and in front of this a series of three shelves trimmed with crepe tissue carried boxes of fine confectionery, grapes and lines of fancy goods.

W. J. Southern & Son, grocers and confectioners, St. Thomas, sent a couple of attractive windows, one a shelf arrangement of Christmas fruits and nuts with background and side of twisted ribbons, and the other a dainty display of fine confectionery topped with a horseshoe bearing "Merry Christmas."

A somewhat novel window came from Geo. J. Harp, Brantford. A shelf bearing a message of Christmas greeting divided the window half way up. The bottom half was filled with nuts, fancy boxes of confectionery and pails of candy. Up above were candy in bulk, Almeria grapes, and a couple of palms which added to the alternative effect.

John Hickman, 374 College St., Toronto, sent in a well-arranged window packed full of suggestions for the Christmas shopper with a couple of greeting cards, some well written price tickets and a hoop and bell decoration at the top. The side was a looking-glass with diagnols of green stuff. Another fine window from Toronto was dressed by George Shelby, with J. H. Kerr, 408 Spadina Ave. This was divided in sections showing various lines of Christmas price tickets and the back built up with canned and bottled goods and wreaths of holly.

A window from Fred. C. Harp's cash bargain grocery, Brantford, brings out the price-ticket idea excellently and has a stop arrangement carrying Christmas crackers and fancy confectionery and topped off with a miniature Santa Claus that catches the eye.

J. F. Pelan, St. Thomas, had somewhat of a novel window. An arrangement of steps running the full length of the window carried a number of dishes, covered with tissue napkins and these bore samples of various lines of goods. The background was formed of honey in the comb and various lines of package goods.

Dudgeon & Lloyd, 406 Queen St. west, Toronto entered three windows, one of which is particularly worthy of mention. A row of turkeys outside gives a good foundation to begin on and in the window proper various lines of goods are divided by partitions of peel and holly. Wire netting is worked in to form cylinders for the display of nuts and oranges and a line filled with Christmas stockings swung across the rear of the window, gave a good suggestion for the kiddies in the homes of customers.

J. M. Donovan, Peterboro, sent in a photo of his store front, including a real good old-time Christmas window, with a line of candy canes to make the youngsters' mouths water and a row of stockings above. The base of the window was filled with an appetizing display of regular Christmas groceries.

WINDOW DRESSING COMPETITIO N—2ND PRIZE WINDOW, CLASS II.

There were some splendid windows entered under Class II. which included the grocers in the smaller towns and villages. These showed that advantage had been taken of all the facilities at hand, and also that the grocers are studying this department of their business more thoroughly.

J. S. Pinch, of Sault Ste. Marie, sends in a very attractive window that shows many good features. The bed of the window shows a neat diamond and triangle form worked out in boxes of seeded raisins and the spaces thus outlined are filled with nuts, raisins, peels, etc. The background is built up of oranges half wrapped in tissue and cases of fruits, the spaces between the latter filled in with canned and bottled goods. Well-placed price tickets in the bulk goods are a valued feature.

John Goods, Walkerton, Ont., entered three windows, a couple of which deserve special attention, though, unfortunately the photos are so small that the details are scarcely brought out. One in particular shows a star-shaped arrangement of peels in the bed of the window, the remaining space being filled with special Christmas goods. A background of packages of seeded raisins topped off with three palms in pots, gives a pleasant effect.

J. C. Ecklin, who, by the way, won one of the first prizes last year, when working in a Toronto store, has sent in a couple of windows from Port Arthur, where he is now working. One of these, a grocery window, has as the principal feature, boxes of fruit of graduating sizes, laid on one another with the cover off and the paper fringe opened out, the whole giving the effect of a huge four-storeyed Christmas cake, icing and all. In the background is an arched background effect made of cloth, bearing the words "Christmas Cheer," the pillars being made up of puffed material. The other window is a display of crockery arranged in an attractive, though, perhaps, a somewhat formal way.

A. E. Jones, of the Hudson's Bay Co.'s store, Macleod, Alta., sends in a small photo of a big window, which is a daisy. The feature of this window is a big fireplace in the centre, with mantle, stockings and all complete. On either side of this are varied arrangements of practically all lines of Christmas goods.

A window employing three small tables, carrying canned goods as the main display, is sent in by W. D. Laidlaw, of Cranbrook, B.C. The base of the window is covered with an arrangement of pyramids of bottled goods standing on glass, and below this again are banks of dried fruits.

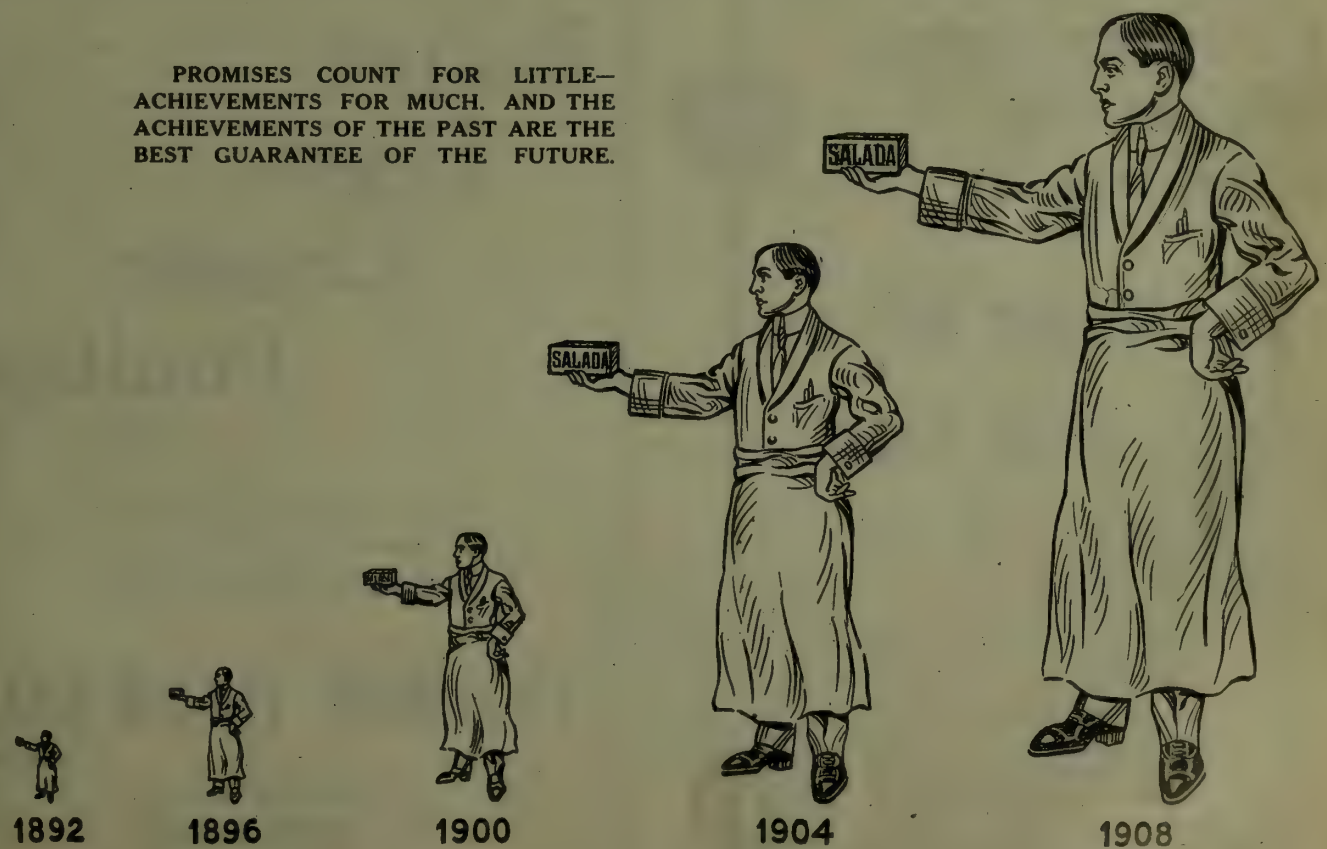
A. W. Corbett, Brownsville, Ontario, entered a rather striking window, showing Christmas trees, Christmas bells, stars, holly, etc., as well as Christmas groceries. The back of window is covered by a sheet which is decorated with sprigs of holly and bears the lettering, "Merry Christmas." In front of this is a pair of steps covered with white and carrying various lines of goods, and below this again the floor of the window is covered with nuts and confectionery, with a couple of pyramids of oranges and dishes of various lines of goods in the foreground.

From Ruppel & Co., Elmira, came a window dressed along rather new lines with the sets of steps built up of boxes, with lines of special Christmas goods on these and pyramids of canned goods on top. A number of timely display cards add attractiveness to the window.

It would be a pleasure to mention the good points of all the windows if that were possible. We wish to thank, however, the many grocers and clerks who aided in making the contest a success.

A STORY OF PROGRESS

An Occurrence that has been an Uplift to the Tea-Trade of Two Nations.



Away back in the early "nineties" nearly all the tea drunk in America and England came from China and Japan. In 1892 after long and deliberate investigation we were led to believe that the tea of the future was that grown in Ceylon (a British possession in the North Indian Ocean, now conceded to be the finest tea-producing country in the world). Before the introduction of "Salada" the trade was in a wretched condition, the peddlers and department stores doing such a large share of it in bulk form. Hence having come to the decision that there was no tea the equal of Ceylon tea we decided to place "Salada" upon the market in sealed lead packets and offering it in this form to the consumer through the retail grocer. Could anything help a retail grocer more than to be able to absolutely guarantee his customers tea "fresh from the gardens," absolutely pure, of incomparable flavor and fragrance and strictly uniform quality? "Salada" has made this possible.

The immense output of "Salada" (now amounting to over NINETEEN MILLION PACKETS ANNUALLY) has resulted from the appreciation of the public for BETTER tea. Every grocer by selling "Salada" makes for the betterment of his tea trade all the way round—better satisfaction—better tea—better profits—better trade. No heavy stock to carry—no freight to pay—no competition from the peddler—no deterioration—no loss in interest—no loss in weighing—sale absolutely guaranteed or the full purchase price refunded.

Our success is your success—our reputation for serving the public with good tea all the time gives you the same reputation. Our integrity is your integrity—our enterprise is your enterprise. Our knowledge of tea is as beneficial to you as it is to us. We appreciate your co-operation—your goodwill in making "Salada" a household word on this Continent—a word that signifies the highest standard of excellence in tea.

The "Salada" Tea Co. has branch offices in the following cities in Canada—Toronto and Montreal. In the United States—New York, Boston, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Philadelphia, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and Los Angeles.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Jan. 13.

Since our last report the market has been doing a little spurting in an export way as considerable cheese has gone forward which was held for English account. In addition several firms have sold very respectable amounts, the total of which, together with that being held, which was released, will make large shipments for the week.

Such a stir as this was rather unusual for this time of the year, and as a result the market has subsided into quietness, and a generally weak feeling has developed. Estimates of cheese left over in Canada place it at 70,000 boxes less than at this time last year. The fact is quite obvious that there is not anything like the quantity held here at the present time, which was held last year at the same time. If the demand is only normal from now onward, the spring will see some pretty fancy figures developed. Finest Westerns are being quoted at 12¼c to 12½c and Easterns at 11¾c to 12¼c.

Locally, butter has been moving fairly well, and the tone of the market is healthy. Considerable second quality stock has been arriving. A few sales of September stock have been reported and in every case fancy figures were received as competition for these lines is very active. Those in a position to know predict a strong future for butter, as stocks held by grocers are very low, and the cold weather, which is almost sure to prevail, during the ensuing two months, will give the market an impulse upward. Enquiries from the Northwest and Vancouver, have been received, but so far no business has transpired. Locally finest creamery is being quoted at 26½c to 27c and fresh receipts are selling at 25½c to 26c.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

Toronto, January 14, 1909.

The provision situation on account of peculiar circumstances cannot be used in ordinary business regulation. At present the cured meal market is a trifle lower and at the same time hogs are higher. Owing to the large number of packing houses throughout the country, the production of hogs is scarcely sufficient to keep them all supplied, and under these conditions the packers are largely at the mercy of the farmers. Years ago, the English market, to a large extent, governed the market here, but not so now. Many of the packers depend entirely on the local demand for their output, and the larger packers must pay for hogs on the basis of the local market for the manufactured goods, and take chances for what they export. It is admitted by all that the price of hogs is dangerously high, especially to compete with the prices in England, over which we have no control, as these markets are entirely controlled by other countries. Packers are paying $6 f.o.b. for good stock this week.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Increased demand for dressed hogs, which have advanced 25c per 100 lbs., has stimulated the lard market. In addition to this there is a very active demand for both pure and compound lines. Tierces, boxes, and tubs are the chief lines affected, all of which are about ½c higher this week.

BUTTER—Early fall stock is in good demand, and holders are asking fancy prices, the quotations being a ½c higher for this line. Fresh creamery, solids and prints, are active, also dairy and large rolls. Receipts are remarkably good for the season, but demand is better, consequently firm feeling continues.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The peculiarity of the pork market this week is the fact that hogs are dearer and cured meats a trifle cheaper. Hogs are worth $9 per 100 lbs., which is a point seldom reached. While prices may be said to be unchanged, the most of the stock can be bought for about ½ a cent below quotations.

BUTTER—The butter market is reported to be easier and prices about 1c lower. This, however, is entirely owing to the fact that there is a large percentage of the butter not good, and in order to effect sales, lower prices must be accepted. For some reason the quality of butter is below the average. Whether this is caused through carelessness on the part of the makers, condition of the weather or on the food that is fed, cannot be determined. Real good butter is in good demand and always wanted.

EGGS—Owing to the extraordinary diligent habits of our egg producers, ever ready to take advantage of every moment the temperature of the weather allows them to perform their work with safety, they started operations during the recent mild weather. This may, perhaps, not be altogether attributed to the industry of the hens, but the wily farmer with 40c or 50c a dozen in his eye, coaxes them with pretended extra kindness, and all kinds of varieties of food. As a result of all this, new laid eggs are coming in freely, but the people in the city look upon them, and touch them with their hands, but won't buy them. They are too dear, and the result is that they accumulate and will likely be sold, in the near future at a price that will be within easier reach. It must, however, be remembered that we are still in January, and owing to the great demand for old stock, which is rapidly diminishing, it cannot be expected that eggs will be much cheaper, in fact, there is a feeling that held stock is not sufficient to carry us through, in which case very high prices will rule.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Decline in Montreal Flour Market—News Expected Next Week in Rolled Oats Situation.

Last week's prices in the flour and cereal markets still prevail, but something new is expected in the course of a few days in the rolled oats situation.

Wheat seems to be difficult to obtain for some manufacturers, the price for best Ontario being quoted at 99c to $1. Both Chicago and Winnipeg wheat is easier in view of the reports from Argentine that the crops there which are just now being harvested are splendid.

Business generally in the cereals seems to have picked up since the New Year. In Montreal there was a rumor that rolled oats had declined, but on investigation there was found to be no truth in the report. Ontario bran is reported scarce, but there has been no change in the price as yet.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The market has declined slightly during the week. The decline is due to a variety of causes mainly among which is the season of the year, which is a dull one generally, and declines are only a natural outcome. This condition, however, is somewhat remarkable as supplies arriving are not excessively large. Reports from the country continue to state stocks on the light side, and some noticeably better business has developed in these quarters.

ROLLED OATS—Last week a rumor gained considerable currency regarding a drop in prices for rolled oats. This, however, proved to have no foundation, and prices have been fully maintained. Locally trade has brightened up during the week. Other lines are the same as last reported.

FEED—Ontario bran is scarce, but this fact has not exerted any influence upon the price yet. The market for bran generally is very good, but supplies are limited. Shorts and middlings are still in good demand.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—No material change has occurred during the week in the flour market, prices continuing as they were last week. The millers are fairly busy attending to the local wheat supply.

CEREALS—There has been an advance in rolled wheat of 10 cents to the wholesalers so that the retailers may expect something similar soon. During the stock-taking season there has not been much movement in oatmeal but this market is expected to pick up in the near future. The prices still remain the same.

CRISPNESS

in soda biscuits means good profits to the grocer man. What particularly delights the purchaser of a package of Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas is the fact that the last biscuit in the package is as fresh and crisp and tasty as the first one she took out. You can't say this about all soda biscuits but you can truthfully say it about every package of Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas. It'll pay any grocer to specialize on Mooney's.

THE NEW MESSINA.

Speaking of the effects of the earthquake on the lemon business, Peter Brucato, a native Sicilian, though for many years an American citizen and leading lemon importer, discussed the situation interestingly a few days ago with the writer. Mr. Brucato is not only familiar with Sicily and its people, but has been there during similar, though less destructive, earthquakes and knows something of the probable course to be followed in any possible rehabilitation of the fated city.

"I do not believe that Messina will ever be rebuilt—at least on its former site," he said. "It never was a healthy city and was constantly susceptible to earthquake. Its chief redeeming feature was its unparalleled landscape across the Straits. But, with its harbor destroyed by the slipping into the sea of the outer rim of sand, its roadstead will have very little value in rough weather.

"As for the lemon industry, I believe it will not again centre at Messina, even if rebuilding is attempted. The lemon growing district of that end of the island was about ten miles from Messina, along the north shore of the island. The town of Milazzo, a place of about 10,000 people, had grown up as its centre and I believe will now succeed Messina as the shipping point for the lemon packers. Very likely those of the packers who have survived will remove their business headquarters to Palermo, 130 miles away, and the packing for the Messina district will be done at Milazzo. It has a good harbor and is already the local shipping point for a considerable portion of the crop which grows around it and which is probably not injured.

"There will be some changes in the commerce of the lemon industry on the island. Till now the bulk of the Messina shipments have gone to Germany, Russia, Sweden and Norway, Canada, Australia and Austria, owing to connections built up in a century or more of business on the part of some of the older packing houses. For those countries, Messina had practically a monopoly, save that Hamburg drew possibly 100,000 boxes a year—a fifth of her needs—from Palermo. With Messina wiped out of existence, these people must turn to Palermo or Catania for lemons and already, I presume, Palermo houses are trying to pick up the trade of the destroyed Messina packing concerns. It would appear to me that the owners of the groves near Milazzo would be forced to establish their packing houses there in place of those destroyed at Messina. To ship to Palermo would cost from 15c to 20c a box, a handicap too great to be sustained, with the competition as keen as it always has been.

"It looks to me as though Messina is a city of the past and will never again rise from her ashes. The new lemon centre for that end of the island will be Milazzo and Palermo will become even more of a shipping centre than before. But with the exception of the necessary changes in the traffic, I think the effects of the earthquake, so far as the lemon crop is concerned, will not be felt after a few months. For the present, however, I look for better prices, owing to the extra pressure on the remaining packing houses."—N.Y. Journal of Commerce.

MONTREAL.

Green Fruits—The lemon market is strong in its tendency, owing to the recent disaster in Sicily, but it probably will not put a prohibitive price on this product, as further details indicate no great destruction of stocks or crops. California navels are easier at $3.00. Almeira grapes are also lower. Bananas are in good demand, and remain the same in price. Other lines show no alterations:

Vegetables—Up and down movements have taken place in the vegetable market during the week. Sweet potatoes are higher owing to the scarcity. Parsley is up, for best varieties, while it may be purchased even below last weeks quotations for inferior stock. Montreal potatoes are obtainable at a better figure this week. Green Mountains have gone forward, now bringing $1 a bag, New Brunswicks are also lower. Turnips are in good supply at a reduced figure. Pumpkins are very scarce.

TORONTO.

Green Fruits—Lemons are still the almost sole topic of conversation on the fruit market. Prices have stiffened up and Toronto quotations have advanced 25 cents a case, with a still further advance in prospect. There will be a shortage of Sicilian lemons this year and New York has advanced prices almost a dollar a box. Californias, too, have gone up a little both the local market in the East. One of our importers received a cable that his shipper in Messina, Matteo Gatto, wife, three daughters and one son are all dead, but that the bookkeeper has escaped and will continue the business from Catania in the near future.

Oranges are easier, California navels being particularly so. Car lots are arriving almost daily. Valencias are up 25 cents being a little scarce. The first shipment of the season of bitter Seville oranges for marmalade is in and are held at a good price. Jamaica grape fruit is yet competing with the Florida line and is quoted about 35 cents lower in price than the first mentioned. Ontario and Nova Scotia cranberries are off, and Cape Cods are firmer, though some slightly wet berries are offered at very nearly the half price figure of select stock. Apples continue scarce and are high in price. They are not going out in large lots, and grocers are wise in taking limited quantities. The keeping qualities of even the higher grades are none too good. Russets are more plentiful this week, but spies and kings have the call, with greenings well up to the front. What appears to be one of the soundest lines offering is for some unexplainable reason the unpopular Ben Davis. Tolman Sweets are fair sellers. Strawberries are off again, dealers saying they are unprofitable sellers just now. At the price quotations, 75 cents, very few wanted to buy.

Vegetables—The vegetable market is inactive, and whether real or imaginary potatoes are quoted about 5c a bag higher. Some say they are 5 cents higher and others say they should be that much higher. Cabbage also is about 25c a barrel higher. New cucumbers are quoted from $2.00 to $2 25, a dozen.

Fish—The fish trade is more or less effected by every change in the weather. The sharp cold snap, after the mild spell, caused a brisk and lively market. With the exception of a limited quantity of winter catch white fish, the stock is all in cold storage, and prices are without change.

BRUNSWICK BRAND HERRINGS

IN TINS

We are particularly proud of our Kippered Herring and Herring in Tomato Sauce. We have very good reason for our pride, we are sure.

It has taken us years to bring Brunswick Brand Herrings up to their present high standard of quality. Much money has been spent in experimenting with different processes, and cash has never been spared in the securing of the choicest fish to begin with.

We, however, are satisfied, for to-day we can offer the trade fish that are not surpassed anywhere. The large and growing demand of to-day for Brunswick Brand Herrings proves their popularity with the consumer.

NOW IS THE APPOINTED TIME TO ORDER.

ORANGES AND RHEUMATISM

Citric Acid of the Fruit Said to Dispel the Aches and Pains of the Rheumatic—A Dry Goods Merchant's Experience—Takes Three Oranges for Breakfast.

Hitherto the grocer and fruit dealer have been selling oranges to be used principally as a dessert fruit, or for the manufacture of preserves and marmalade. But if the statement is proven true that the popular fruit can be successfully used because of its medicinal properties, a new channel for its disposal will be opened out which should prove of particular pecuniary value to the grocer. The public has long since been educated to the fact that the orange, as well as numerous other Southern fruits, is valuable as a laxative and it is not an uncommon occurrence to find people who have their orange regularly for their morning meal for this special reason.

In addition to the value of the fruit, when used as mentioned above, it is stated that the orange can also be utilized as a cure for rheumatism. This value has as yet been little advanced and The Grocer in an endeavor to obtain some information on the question has secured the testimony of a Toronto dry goods merchant who has learned by experience and found it true so far as he is concerned.

The representative of The Grocer called on him this week and found him ready and quite willing to explain in what manner he had been led to try the orange fruit as a remedy for rheumatic troubles.

Took His Friend's Advice.

"Six years ago," he began, "I was in Montreal and called on a business friend, who at the time was suffering severely from a bad attack of rheumatism. So much trouble were the aches and pains giving him that he scarcely got a wink of sleep at nights, and very little any other time. The next time I went to Montreal I called on him again and found him hale and hearty."

A Dozen Oranges Per Day.

The merchant was, of course, much surprised at the change of physique and health of the man, and upon inquiry learned that oranges had worked the somewhat mysterious wonder.

"He told me," remarked The Grocer's informant, "that he ate a dozen oranges every day, and that he practically made oranges his entire diet.

"I myself had been troubled with rheumatism, not regularly, but occasionally, wild shooting pains passed through my body. Particularly between the toes on my feet and in the palms of my hands, did I feel the trouble and I suffered considerably while they lasted. From the hint my Montreal friend gave me, I began to eat oranges, kept it up and I haven't had a touch of rheumatism since."

"Every morning my breakfast consists of three or four oranges, and in addition to the fact that the old trouble has disappeared, I find that food a splendid laxative, quite necessary to my physical comfort and just what a man like me would require.''

Asked what portion of the orange he ate, he said, that the meat and juice were taken out by means of the ridged pyramid-shaped glass, well known to those familiar with handling lemons for lemonade. They were all ground together to be made more palatable and eaten without sugar. Sometimes he also ate a portion of a grape fruit, but nothing else, and he never had better health.

Buys by the Crate.

''Why I always lay in four or five crates of oranges in the cellar when the season arrives in which they are the best and just now is as good a time as any,'' he added. ''This amount lasts for a considerable length of time.''

The explanation he gave of the medicinal properties of the orange is the effect of the citric acid it contains, which in addition to being a medicine is very palatable to the taste. The uric acid, which forms in the joints of the anatomy, as well as in the heart, liver, brain and blood, is said to be largely the cause of the muscular fatigue so common to rheumatics. The theory is that the citric acid of the orange acts as a counter-agent to the uric acid of the system by dissolving it, thus dispelling the aches and pains.

''I have mentioned my experience to several of my friends with similar troubles,'' said The Grocer's informant, ''and I understand the orange cure has worked wonders with them also.''

The popular conception has always been that the superior quality of the orange depended on its sweetness, but if the above theory is correct, the amount of acid has a good deal to do with the quality. As to the difference in oranges grown under humid and arid conditions, the moisture being supplied by rainfall in the one case and by irrigation in the other, there has been shown in the latter a superior density; thinness and texture of rind, higher sugar and higher acid percentages, and a more sprightly flavor. The idea of the public generally that the superior sweetness of the orange grown in humid countries seems to be due to a greater amount of sugar in the juice and a less amount of acid. It has been calculated that in some oranges the total percentage of sugar is about ten per cent., and of citric acid one and a half per cent.

If any reader has made discoveries along this line The Grocer would be pleased to hear of them.

C. W. Reynolds, general storekeeper, of the village of Nilestone, in Western Ontario, has left there and prior to his departure he was the guest of honor at a banquet given by his fellow villagers. He was presented witha handsome parlor suite in addition to an address.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Where Cinnamon Spice Comes From and How it is Prepared—Known to the Ancients—Inner Bark of an Evergreen Tree.

CINNAMON.—The history of cinnamon spice is interesting and one with which every grocer should be conversant. It is the inner bark of a small evergreen tree, the leaves being oblong in shape and the flowers of a greenish color and of a rather disagreeable odor. Cinnamon has been known to the world from the most remote antiquity, and it was so highly prized among the ancient nations that even in very small quantities it was regarded as a present fit for monarchs and high state officials. It is referred to in the Bible in Exod. xxx.—23, where Moses is commanded to use both sweet cinnamon (kinmon) and cassia.

This spice is now almost exclusively a product of Ceylon, in Southern Asia, and China, but the origin of the plant and the derivation of its name are matters of considerable doubt and dispute. The Arab traders, by whom the trade in this and other Oriental spices was conducted in ancient times, surrounded the history and production of these precious and lucrative products with grotesque tales of mystery. It is contended by some that cinnamon was originally obtained from the promontory of Gardafui, while others lean to the opinion that it was brought from China. But it is stated that no other situation and climate has yet been found where the trees flourish so well and yield a bark so fine and so delicately aromatic as in Ceylon.

The gardens of cinnamon are confined to a strip of country in the neighborhood of Colombo. When the trade was at its best, five of the principal gardens measured from 15 to 20 miles in circumference, but now the area of cultivation is very much restricted and plants which at one time were tended with the greatest of care are choked with the natural profusion of jungle vegetation.

How Cinnamon is Prepared.

The bark is taken from shoots of eighteen months to two years growth, in which time they attain a length of from six to ten feet and a thickness of from a half to two inches. Only four or five shoots are allowed to grow up from each stool. They are cut down twice a year after the rains and the bark is detached in lengths of about a foot. After lying in bundles, as taken from the shoots for about a day, each separate piece is carefully scraped to remove the outer and middle layers of the bark, and the remaining portion is, thereby, often reduced to the thickness of one-hundredth part of an inch. The pieces are then made up into composite quills by placing the smaller pieces inside the larger, and thus the cinnamon is often formed into straight, firm, rods, of from three to four feet in length, and after drying in the sun the bark is ready to make up into bundles for exportation.

Cinnamon of inferior quality is grown in Southern India, and in Java Island, the cultivation was introduced by the Dutch about the year 1825. The plant has been grown in the colony of French Guiana, South America, and in other localities. The produce in none of these places, however, approaches in quality to the Ceylon cinnamon, from where also the largest proportion of the entire consumption is supplied. Nearly the whole quantity prepared in Ceylon is brought to the British market. The value of the spice submitted to the English Board of Trade in 1874 was more than 54 cents per lb., that from other localities being estimated at about twenty cents.

The Ceylon variety of fine quality is a very thin, smooth bark, with a light brownish color, a highly fragrant odor, and a peculiarly, sweet, warm and pleasing aromatic taste. Its peculiar flavor is due to an aromatic oil which it contains to the extent of from one-half to one per cent. The essential oil of cinnamon as an article of commerce is prepared chiefly in Ceylon, where the coarser pieces of bark are used for its extraction. These are roughly powdered and mixed in sea water for two days, when the whole is quickly distilled.

Cinnamon spice, as all grocers know, is principally employed in cookery as a condiment and flavoring material, and is also being largely used in the preparation of some kinds of chocolates and liquors. In medicine it acts as a stimulant and cordial, but it is chiefly prescribed for improving the flavor of bitter substances and to correct the griping action of purgatives. Being a much more costly spice than cassia, that comparatively harsh-flavored substance is frequently substituted for or added to cinnamon.

The Detection of Cassia.

When powdered bark is treated with tincture of iodine, little effect is visible in the case of pure cinnamon, but with cassia, a deep blue tint is noticeable, the intensity of the coloration depending on the proportion of cassia. But it must not be misunderstood that all varieties of cassia are inferior to cinnamon. The kind known as Corintijie is superior to the best cinnamon and commands a higher price.

Cinnamon spice is not used to a very great extent in Canada and the demand is spread over the entire year.

CORN SYRUP PLENTIFUL.

The Interstate Grocer, St. Louis, of January 2, 1909, has the following about corn syrup which applies to the conditions existing in Canada: According to statistics published recently, the production of cane syrup in the country amounts to only about 346,000 barrels per annum, of which 60 per cent. is exported, and 40 per cent. or 138,400 barrels, are consumed in this country, while 1,350,000 barrels of corn syrup or glucose, are made per annum, in which there is about 10 per cent. or 135,000 barrels, of cane syrup, almost as much as is made from all the sugar cane grown in the country.

OPENING TORONTO BRANCH.

A branch office has been opened in Toronto, C. Ryan & Co., room 74 Yonge Street Arcade, in charge, by the Brodie's Manufacturing Company, Montreal. This concern, which has developed a nice business within the past couple of years, puts out Red Rose baking powder, flavoring extracts and jelly powders, as well as Brodie's polishes for silver and other purposes. Mr. Ryan and his partner, A. J. Duggan, are widely known in Toronto and Ontario grocery circles, and will be in a position to thoroughly serve the trade in that district, which they will cover exclusively. The Brodie's Mfg. Co. but recently moved into large new quarters in Montreal, being now located at 589 St. Paul Street.

AGED GROCER'S SUDDEN DEATH.

Daniel Langlois, a grocer in Windsor for half a century, dropped dead on the threshold of his home on Thursday night, January 7. He was 80 years old and apparently in good health up to the time of his death.

HINTS TO BUYERS.

It is a fact, in business, that a merchant's success depends, not so much on his ability to sell goods as on his ability to buy right, to buy at the right time and at the right prices. Laporte, Martin and Co., Montreal, find themselves in a position wherein they can afford to sacrifice certain lines of standard goods, of which they have a surplus stock. These goods, which are listed in another page are worth to-day as much as they were worth yesterday, and as much as they will be worth to-morrow, but they must be sold before stocktaking, and this is the retailer's opportunity. It will be a good thing for merchants to study the list which is published in another page of this issue, to select the products which they require, and to ask for quotations on same, as soon as possible, before February 1st—advt.

The screw part or burner-base is covered, which protects against fire. Many burners are made cheaper by leaving the screw part open so that dust, dead insects, or charred portions of wick may collect thus becoming saturated with oil and liable to catch fire. OURS DON'T.

Satisfied Customers

It does you a lot of harm for a woman to come into your store and say—"That can of tomatoes you sent me the other day wasn't very good—kind of sour and musty." But when she comes in and says: "Send me some canned tomatoes—same kind as you sent the other day as they were real nice" it does you a lot of good. It certainly pays to think of quality first when ordering canned goods.

Old Homestead Brand Canned Fruits and Vegetables

The Tea That Quality Made Famous

A reputation for reliability, the securing of the public confidence, account for the extraordinary fact that "Salada" is the only tea in the world that holds the remarkable record of doubling its enormous sales every four years—a fact which proves that the public don't care for imitations, they don't care for inferior goods.

Seventeen years ago the first pound of "Salada" was offered to the public. Our determination was "to serve the public well." Have we not done so? Then think of what this means to you.

This diagram drawn on an exact mathematical basis represents the growth of "Salada" sales in seventeen years.

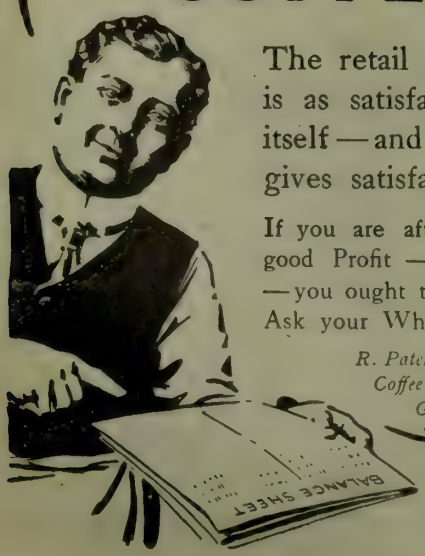
As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty-mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.



The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

Winner in The Grocer's Ad. Contest

The best test of an advertisement is its ability to sell goods and add to the renown of the advertiser. But, in judging this advertising contest, the judges had to be guided by the acknowledged principles that underlie all good advertising; not knowing the actual results produced by the many contesting ads.

FORSYTH JR., The man who makes good his ads.

The Prize Winner.—Christmas Ad. of Forsyth, Jr., Dartmouth, N.S.

The contest was a fairly close one; but we venture to think all the contestants will agree that the price has been fairly won by Forsyth, Jr., Dartmouth, N.S.

This ad. occupied full-page space. Its size, together with its clean, readable set-up, and the sprightly persuasiveness of its paragraphs makes it one of the most attractive grocery ads. we have ever seen. The Christmas sentiment which commences in the well-written brief editorial, permeates the entire page. Read some of the paragraphs. It just shows what can be said about commonplace groceries by a man who knows his business and the taste of his public as well. Forsyth, Jr., has also made the most of his china department in the way of gift goods suggestion; and the footnote of his ad. (which, we understand, is a permanent feature of all his advertising)—"The man who makes good his ads."—is calculated to inspire confidence. If there is any criticism we might offer to the winning advertiser it is that he persuade the publisher of his advertising medium to get in some display type figures for use in bringing out the prices in a stronger manner.

The Runners Up.

There are no second or third prizes in this contest, for which the judges are sincerely thankful. There are so many close "runners-up" that the awarding of any additional prizes would have to take the form of an even distribution of the money between quite a number of people.

We are reproducing one of several attractive ads. sent in by Kirkup & Wilkie, Fort William, written by W. H. Thompson, manager of their china department, as an example of excellent set-up in four-column space. The cut and the caption are very appropriate; and the inquiry, "What have you forgotten for the Christmas dinner?" is well calculated to inspire a reading of the list of groceries which follows. Here is a list of the contestants whose efforts merit special mention. Lack of space forbids us going into the details of these ads. this week, but we hope to do so in the very near future:

LOWNEY'S ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Walter M. Lowney Company, of Canada, took place in Montreal on Tuesday of this week. Walter M. Lowney, of Boston, was present, and was re-elected President. Other officers were re-elected as follows: Vice-President, Arthur Lyman; Secretary-Treasurer, T. W. Dodds, and Managing Director, E. Littler.

On Monday 100 employes of the company participated in the annual profit-sharing of the company. By this plan every employe who has been with the concern over a year is made the recipient of a portion of the profits.

Tuesday afternoon the employes presented Mr. Lowney with a loving cup.

The Christmas Ad. of Kirkup & Wilkie, Fort William, Deserving of Special Mention.

AFTER BRANDY CHOCOLATES.

Provincial Revenue officers in Montreal on Friday last seized a quantity of brandy cordial chocolates from the factory of the Walter M. Lowney Company, of Canada, William Street, and also took possession of a few jars of brandy used in the manufacture of this sweetmeat. On Tuesday summonses were served upon some thirty retail confectioners charged with selling such chocolates, and they will appear in the Police Court to-day to explain why they are "selling liquor without a license," as the Revenue officials allege they are. The Lowney Company will have to answer to the same charge.

These chocolates, which are known in the trade by various names, such as brandy cordial chocolates (which they actually are) and other names less suggestive of one of the substances used in their manufacture, are composed of sugar, chocolate coating and syrup flavored with brandy. Many Canadian confectionery houses manufacture the line, while some imported chocolates contain the same liquid.

"By Their Fruits Ye Shall Know Them"

Kimpton's King Pins Go Down to Defeat at the Hands of the Guelph Trundlers—Toronto Fruiters and Grocers Royally Entertained in the "Royal City"—But Are Crestfallen Over Result of the Games—Story of the Memorable Trip.

The Toronto wholesale fruit dealers have caught the fever and believe they can bowl. A large party of them, and some of their grocery friends, went to Guelph on Wednesday, Jan. 13, with the object of teaching their friends and enemies in the Royal City the game of bowls.

In the party were Dave Spence, H. J. Ash, E. Oake, Jno. McBride, Art McBride, W. B. Stringer, Geo. Stronach, J. J. McCabe, Geo. Everist, Frank Everist, W. Radcliffe, Geo. Olcott, Norman Peters, Tom Clark, Geo. Kent, J. Langskill, C. Husband, D. Radcliffe, Allen

"KING PIN" KIMPTON,
The Daddy of Them all, and he Knows how to Play Euchre, too.

Leadley, of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, H. W. Dawson and A. Hutcheson.

The Toronto crowd were so sure of success, seeing that the Guelphites did not know even the rudiments of the game, that they did not bring along enough money to pay for the games, but, sad to relate, the unexpected happened, and Guelph trimmed the Torontonians good and sure.

Kimpton's King Pins.

Charlie Kimpton was as usual chief agitator and master of ceremonies, and he handled the bunch well. A luxuriously appointed box car was attached to the G.T.R. morning train for the exclusive use of the party. Dave Spence's first impression on entering it was: "We hadn't better smoke in here." Immediately some joker started singing, "We're here because the Duke and Duchess were never here." The excursionists evidently did not care to look at the beautiful scenery, and could not if they would, for some of C. K.'s admirers had tastefully decorated the windows with life-size cards bearing mottoes such as "Kimpton's King Pins" and "The Tenpin Ticklers of the Toronto Fruit Trade."

At Parkdale the "not early risers" got on. Geo. Everist, with his indispensable "picture frame," was there, and "Phoebe Snow" Leadley, who brought out a box of cigars, and he surely struck the right chord, too, for Jim Langskill forgot his cigarettes.

First Taste of Defeat.

The "picture frame" being displayed Frank Everist and W. Radcliffe started in to play euchre with Cameron Husband and Charlie Kimpton. They got such a walloping, however, winning but one game out of seven, making Radcliffe remark that Cameron Husband had hypnotised Frank Everist.

But they should not have forgotten Kimpton's prowess in being the champion euchre player in Canada. However, the losers were "awfully" glad when the conductor shouted "Guelph." They had heard "Chicago" sung out so often that they thought they were near 'Frisco.

Some Classy Bowling.

Geo. Walker, of Hugh Walker & Son, met the party at the Guelph station and played the part of host while the Torontonians were there. He showed the fruit bowlers over his palatial fruit warehouse before proceeding to the alleys; and it certainly was a revelation to even the Toronto fruit kings.

Oh, my, didn't Frank Everist try hard to beat Dave Spence when the games began, both being coached by Harry Ash, who has developed into a bowler of "class." Norman Peters showed "good results" with his "graceful" delivery; but Geo. Everist took the lead with his 270 game. Geo. Stronach was always on the job, and Cameron Husband would have done better only he seemed afraid to hurt the pins. The only trouble with him was that the tenpins looked like a hundred and he invariably left a pair of horns staring him in the face. He made the remark to a nearby fruit man that "if he could only have his youth back again what he would not do."

J. J. McCabe couldn't get up to the century mark and handled the bowls as if he were trying to keep the baby quiet. He thought they were lemons and threw them so far that he nearly knocked the nose off one of the fruit men. Oke, Hutcheson, Radcliffe, Stringer and Langskill, of the "Old Guard," gave a good account of themselves, and Geo. Kent was good on splits, but bad on spares. Jim Langskill started off as though he were a boy again in the Orkneys, but he soon found how old he was when the pins refused to fall. George Stronach told a friend he did not want to make McCabe feel bad, as he was a particular friend of his, and had promised not to beat him. In consequence, he rolled up but 61 to McCabe's 62.

GEORGE STRONACH,
The Man Who Rolls the Bowles Nearly as Well as His Rs.

Had Seen Better Days.

Tom Clark, the grocer, is an enthusiastic sportsman, but is only a beginner at bowling, so that much must be overlooked for his attempts to turn the pins over. He said he had done better in the past, but Charlie Kimpton will have to see him do it again before he will believe the yarn. D. Radcliffe is another Toronto grocer who thinks he can bowl. He went on the alleys as if he owned them, but when the Guelph boys got through with him he could have been bought for a two-cent postage stamp. Had there been a train leaving for the city just then he would have been aboard on his way home. After refreshments his courage came back, and he was ready for another defeat. Allen Leadley is a good sport, but a bad bowler. As a consolation, C. K. promised to route his next car of lemons through his office. Art McBride covered himself with glory and proved himself the peer of all. His brother, John, not quite so demonstrative, did exceedingly well, but he will never be the bowler his brother promises to be.

The Tale Left Untold.

The most disappointed man was Charlie Kimpton, who had been bowling low all day. In the evening he, George Stronach, J. J. McCabe, Norman Peters and George Walker bowled against Ryan's celebrated team, but charity prevents telling the result. Charlie, however, came back to his "old-time" form and rolled up 200. W. B. Stringer, the winner of the D. & L. cup, had been going around the alleys all day with his chest bulged out, but it was noticed that he came off the alleys in the evening looking pretty much like Tommy

FRANK EVERIST,

Burns. It would be a shame to tell what was done to him.

The boys had been bowling all day and all evening, finishing up about midnight. A few afterwards "slid off" to bed, evidently trying to escape the fitting climax. This was regarded as an offence, and they were punished by having to prepare for retirement a second time. Five hours' sleep was allowed the party before the Thursday morning train left.

A Prolonged Visit.

Some of them caught that, others who slept in came back in the evening, and the rest of them are there yet.

The Guelph fruiters and grocers united to give the Toronto fruiters and grocers a good time, and there is no question about it that the Toronto men had the time of their lives.

Strikes and Spares.

When Charlie Kimpton held the ace, king, queen, jack and ten-spot of diamonds he wanted to change the game right off. Is it any wonder?

McCabe went off worse than the Messina earthquake when he was bowled over.

Harry Dawson wanted the train to stop for an hour at Brampton. It looked like home to him.

Geo. Stronach's burr nearly threw the train off at Limehouse.

What a lot of lemons the Toronto bunch looked like after the Guelph boys got through with them.

Oke's artistic delivery was the envy of his beholders. Geo. Stronach thought he was trying a hop, skip and jump.

"Earnest" Geo. Everist had one of his good days, and cleaned up more spondulex than the last time he went to the Woodbine and had to walk home.

Wm. Radcliffe found it just as difficult to pick the winners at Guelph as he did to pick up a "sure thing" at Cobalt.

Olcott, White & Co.'s bowling wonder, distinguished himself by "nearly" knocking down the pins.

Norman Peters, the "boy orator," surprised everyone by having nothing to say. Speak up, Norman, what's wrong?

Geo. Kent was the prize beauty and looked fresh coming out of cold storage. He had a glass arm, however, which prevented him doing damage to the pins.

"Soapy" Hutcheson was there trying to induce the fruitmen to clean their stock with his "new process" brands.

It was a great day for the Georges.

A MONSTER PRESENTATION.

Seventeen Thousand Pounds Tea Given by Ceylon Planters' Association to Men of U.S. Warships.

The Weekly Times, of Ceylon, December 12, says: The Ceylon Planters' Association presentation tea, which is to be formally handed over to Rear-Admiral C. S. Sperry, on board of the Connecticut next Friday, is composed of some 15 different estate teas blended to suit the American taste, specially selected at the Colombo tea sale by Messrs. Bois Bros. & Co., at the request of the Planters' Association and packeted by them at their mills at Hunupitiva. There are about 13,000 one-lb. packets for presentation to each member of the crew, and about 800 five-lb. boxes for presentation to the officers. The one-lb. quantities are in lead oblong packets and are encircled over the longer circumference by a yellow and gold label, specially prepared and very attractive. On the front there is a picture of a Tamil girl plucking tea, printed in different colors, with the word "Hillgrown. Specially selected and packed for presentation to the American fleet." On the reverse side is a design, embodying the two national flags and a shield bearing the Ceylon coat-of-arms. Underneath are directions how to make a cup of Ceylon tea. At one end are the words, "Finest hillgrown, pure Ceylon tea," and on the other end is "With greetings and good wishes from the Planters' Association of Ceylon. Colombo, December, 1908." There is also stamped the crest of the Planters' Association.

"ST. NICHOLAS" McCABE,"
Who Said the Bowls were too Large for "November Cuts."

The 5-lb. boxes are stencilled on all sides with similar wording as on the packages. Special attention was given by Mr. Percy Bois to the stencilling of the national flags and coats-of-arms which have been printed in eight different colors.

A special 10-lb. box has been made for presentation to Rear-Admiral C. S. Sperry. The wood of the box is satinwood, and as it would have spoilt the wood to put lettering on it, the box was covered with Holland cloth, and the lettering has been done on the cloth.

Mr. Percy Bois had a photograph of the tea taken at the mills this morning. Immediately the officials of the Planters' Association make the formal presentation to the Rear-Admiral, the tea will be despatched, in the required quantities, to each of the ships.

Retail Grocers Elect Officers

Hold Important Business Meeting—T. Clark, the New President—The Peddlers' License Question to Come Before Toronto City Council—Increase in License Asked for—Grocers Interested in Bowling—A Presentation Made.

Peddlers' licenses, bowling, the annual excursion, election of officers and a presentation to the retiring President were the features under consideration at the annual meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association, of Toronto, on Monday night, Jan. 18th. The meeting was held in the hall of the Association in the Temple Building and proved to be one of the best from an educative as well as from a social standpoint in some time.

T. CLARK,

President C. F. Thorne occupied the chair, and conducted the business of the meeting until the election of new officers. There was a feeling of mutual regard for each others' best interests pervading the meeting, each member in a most unselfish spirit giving the information at his command which would benefit his fellow grocer, demonstrating the value of such an association to the retail grocers of any town or city.

Want Higher License.

One of the first items of business arising was the question of a deputation of the Retail Grocers' Association waiting on the City Council at its next meeting. This had previously been decided upon and as the Council is likely to meet towards the end of the month something more will be heard of this important question.

The present peddlers' license is ten dollars annually and five dollars for six months. The worst feature of this to the grocers is the fact that most peddlers take out a half-yearly license in July thereby selling in the season of the year most detrimental to the retailers who are permanent taxpayers and who have to keep up houses and stores.

The act governing peddlers' latitudes states that they cannot sell within 200 feet of a retailer's store, but some of the grocers at the meeting maintained that "they come right up to my door and laugh at me."

"I wouldn't mind so much," said another, "if they would confine themselves to fruit alone, but they sell butter, eggs, canned goods and vegetables, and everything a man keeps in his store."

Statistics show, one member stated, that 70 per cent. of the peddlers take out their licenses in July and take them out half-yearly.

"What we want," he said, "was a license fee of $30 annually, with the restriction that the licenses are taken out near the beginning of the year."

Since the grocers have begun the agitation they have been given a promise that no more licenses would be issued before February 1, when it is expected the matter will be cleared up. Everything now depends on the attitude of the Council towards the change.

DONALD McLEAN,
Who Will Occupy the Vice-President's Chair of the Association During the Coming Year.

Have the Bowling Fever.

The grocers as well as the wholesale fruiters have broken out into bowling and during the meeting there was considerable talk about the high scores made. The others were, of course, not alluded to, but from all accounts the association is going to have some pretty fair trundlers within a week or two. They held a practice last night at the Minerva alleys and some of them are proving to be classy rollers.

Only members of the Association will be allowed to compete in any tournament or challenge games which may be held from time to time.

Annual Excursion.

David Bell, one of the committee to look after the securing of a boat for the annual summer excursion, reported on what had been accomplished. The committee was asked to go ahead with arrangements.

The excursion last year proved a very successful affair, the total receipts amounting to more than $880, and after all expenses were paid, over $113 remained.

Election of Officers.

Only one officer was elected by acclamation. That was T. Clark, who will occupy the President's chair for the year to come. The other offices were almost all keenly contested, showing that the members display interest in their Association. The list in its entirety is as follows:

President—T. Clark.
Vice-President—D. McLean.
Treasurer—B. Snow.
Secretary—J. C. Beaumont.
Executive Committee—D. Bell, R. Van Loan, D. W. Clarke, R. W. Davies and ex-President C. F. Thorne.
Trustees—F. W. Johnston, D. Bell and D. W. Clarke.

Appreciate Their President.

Before the close of the meeting a pleasing event took place when a presentation of a handsome chime clock was presented to C. F. Thorne, the retiring President. The presentation was made by B. Panter, who in a verbal and informal address referred to the sterling services of Mr. Thorne as leader of the Association during 1908. He had been a worker in the interests of the grocers for years and all appreciated what he had done. The clock was presented, not only in recognition of his services, but also as a memento of the good times enjoyed together and of the good fellowship that always marked the meetings.

C. F. THORNE,
Retiring President of Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, Who Was Presented With a Clock.

In reply, Mr. Thorne was more than surprised and delighted at receiving the gift. He was glad to know of the good feeling among the members of the Association, and pledged himself to continue to work in its interests.

A vote of thanks, moved by C. F. Thorne, and R. Van Loan, was tendered to David Bell, the retiring Secretary, who has occupied that position for two years. Mr. Bell made a suitable reply. A committee composed of C. F. Thorne, D. McLean, F. W. Johnston and B. Panter was appointed to prepare a testimonial to him.

New President's Address.

On taking his seat in the President's chair, Mr. Clark, in his address, asked for the co-operation of all his fellow officers in making the year 1909 the banner one in the history of the Association. The new ideas advanced, which, if carried out, would mean many new members and more interest in the work.

BAILEY SNOW,
Elected Treasurer of the Association.

The newly-elected Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary, after being installed, also made some brief remarks, thanking their fellow members for the honors conferred on them.

The Auditors' report showed a balance on hand of $98.16, the receipts for the year being $227.16.

ERROR IN AN AD.

In the advertisement of the Canada Brokerage Co., Ltd., wholesale grocers, which appeared in last week's issue of The Grocer, an error occurred. Thompson's California Seedless Raisins should have read "10 oz. pkgs." instead of "103 pkgs."

Theatre party.

Members of the convention and their ladies will be the guests of the American Can Company this evening. As it is impossible to get one theatre in Louisville large enough to entertain all of the guests, arrangements are now being made to care for the party in the two largest theatres of the town. It is impossible yet for the host to announce particulars.

Friday, Feb. 5th—Evening Session.

Views on Insurance Rates

Claims Underwriters Have Lived Up to Their Agreement—City Must Go Farther and Complete Pumping Capacity of the High Pressure System—A Further Reduction Then—What the Key Rate is.

By C. McKnaught.

Toronto's long looked for high pressure system is now an accomplished fact. The tests made were passed upon as satisfactory by Mr. Howe, expert of the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association. In making his report, Mr. Howe points out that the system is only fully effective while the present set of pumps are both in good working order; the disablement of one would seriously reduce the pressure—the vital requirement in the efficiency of all high pressure systems.

The necessity for increased fire-fighting equipment was most completely demonstrated by the conflagration which wiped out a large part of the wholesale and light-manufacturing district of this city in April, 1904, and insurance companies were compelled to reckon with a serious "conflagration hazard."

The immediate effect was the imposition by the companies of a surcharge or "conflagration extra" of $1.00 to the then existing rates in the congested district—a district in which buildings containing large values were closely grouped together and which were subject to complete annihilation should a fire get beyond control—as it was self-evident that the city's water service and fire-fighting equipment were utterly inadequate to cope with such a condition.

Risk Rated on Its Merits.

After the adjustments of the many losses occasioned by the conflagration were completed, the city was "specifically rated" by the underwriters,—that is, each individual risk was rated on its merits under a schedule rating system.

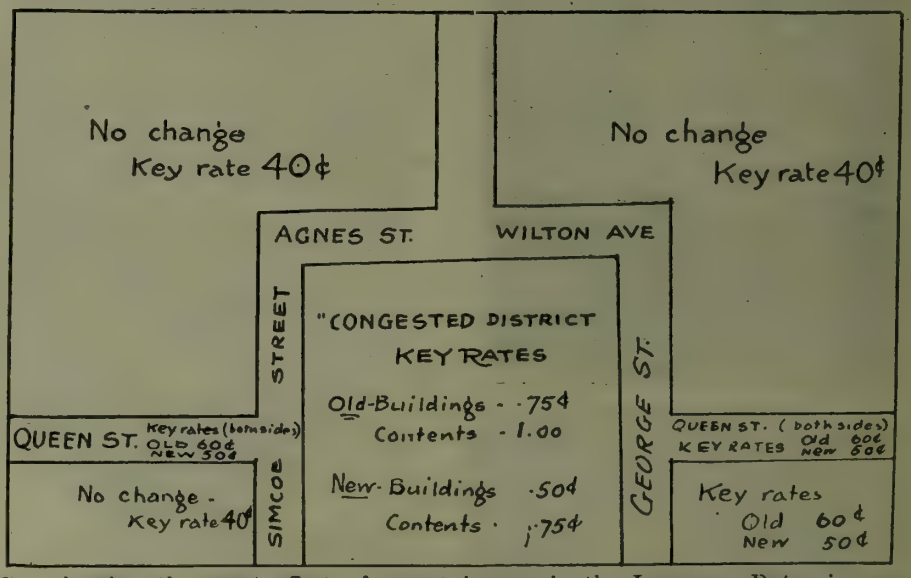
This rating system superceded the "conflagration extra" rates. It is made up of certain fixed charges for items, such as "defects of construction," "class of occupancy," etc.; and to these various charges is added the "key rate" of $1.00, which is based largely on the efficiency of the fire-fighting equipment.

Thus we come to the consideration of the conditions existing immediately after the fire of 1904. Merchants and insurers of all classes affected by the increased rates, while, in most cases, recognizing the justice of the action taken by the insurance companies, immediately began to co-operate with the underwriters in their effort to remedy the condition—and the grant for the high pressure system and the betterment of the fire-fighting equipment was the result.

After conferences between the city and the underwriters an agreement was entered into under which it was agreed that the "key rate" was to be reduced a certain definite amount for each of the several items of improvement that should be completed by the city—aggregating 50c in all.

More for City to Do.

When the city has completed the pumping capacity of the high pressure system, as promised, it will, with the other items now completed, have effected improvements which entitle it to a reduction of the key rate from $1.00 on contents and 75c on buildings to 75c and 50c respectively, in the congested district.



The underwriters, however, in endeavoring to show their absolute good faith and also in just recognition of the improvements completed and to be completed, immediately granted the reduction of 25c in the "key rate" in the congested district and have gone farther than their agreement with the city by also reducing the "key rate" of the intermediate district from 60c to 50c. They regarded the improved conditions as warranting this reduction.

Therefore, from January 1, 1909, all buildings in the congested district now rated on a key rate of 75c, contents $1, and all buildings and contents in the "intermediate" district now rated on a key rate of 60c, will be re-rated on "key rates" of 50c and 75c in congested district and 50c in the "intermediate," these reductions to affect all policies placed or renewed subsequent to Jan. 1, 1909. No refund for reductions in rate are to be granted on existing policies placed or renewed prior to January 1, 1909, unless they are cancelled at short date rates and replaced at the new rates.

This action on the part of the underwriters I think is only fair in view of the fact that when the rates were increased the extra rate was not charged on current policies and was only collected on renewals or new business placed after the increase went into effect.

Some Suggestions.

As a final word I would like to take this opportunity of urging insurers to have their ratings carefully gone into by some competent insurance man. I feel sure that in many cases suggestions for improvement and betterment of the insurers could be offered, which would lead to reduction in rate, altogether aside from the reduction granted because of the high pressure system, etc.; and, equally as important, would result in a lessening of the chance of fire.

BIG COCOA CROP.

"The cocoa crop of the State of Bahia for the 1908-9 season promises to be the most abundant on record. The local returns show an excess of over 71,000 bags, equivalent to over 4,000 metric tons, up to the end of October last, as compared with the output for the corresponding period of the 1907-8 season. It is the opinion of competent judges here that the total output of cocoa in the State of Bahia for the 1908-9 season will exceed by some 35,000 bags, equivalent to over 2,000 metric tons, the total output during the 1907-8 season, which amounted to 419,716 bags (25,182 metric tons.")—British Consular Report.

CALENDARS AND DISPLAYS

The Grocer's Sacrifice to Christmas Traditions—Experiences That Have Proved Beneficial—Simple, Attractive Displays Advocated—The Troubles Attending a Pretty Calendar.

By Victor Lauriston.

The Christmas season with its flaring decorations is all over, and has proven very successful to some grocers. Evergreens and holly, tinsel and tissue paper and Christmas bells, have been everywhere in evidence. Never have the grocery stores of your town or mine presented an appearance so dazzling. But, when it is all over, and the debris cleared away, many are apt to ask the question:

"Does it all pay?"

As a matter of fact, it is a grave question whether in most cases the grocer expects his Christmas display to pay him. It is not devised because the grocer sincerely expects that it will bring him results; but solely because it is the custom to decorate to an extraordinary degree at Christmas time. It is not a bid for business on the grocer's part so much as a sacrifice at the altar of tradition.

The Window Dressing That Pays.

In a certain Ontario town with which I am fairly familiar, there is a clean, attractive, well kept grocery store, the king-pin of which is an enterprising young man who does not mind work.

A year ago Christmas he went to work and decorated that store in a fashion that was the wonder of the whole town. His were no mere surface decorations, designed to tempt the passerby; the entire store, from the front window to the rear wall, was consistently glorious with streamers, tissue paper, Christmas bells and evergreens. A conspicuous feature in the window was a Christmas tree brilliant and gaudy with Christmas stockings and tinsel, and rearing its head proudly amid a descending cloud of snowflakes which looked real, if they were not.

From stem to stern that store was veritably Oriental in its magnificence. It was a nine days' wonder. In that particular town there certainly was not a single store which could equal it for general brilliancy of effect.

The display was one in which the cost of the materials in itself by no means small, was probably a minor item compared with the time and study involved.

A Striking Contrast.

This Christmas the passerby looked in vain for a repetition of the magnificence of a year ago. Instead of the streamers and the tissue paper, the interior presented just the clean, bright, attractive aspect common to every other day in the year; and the window displays were simple and tasty, comprising Christmas confectionery in boxes and articles likely to be attractive to Christmas customers, each item carefully tagged with the proper price.

"We are not going in for any big display this year," remarked the proprietor, in response to a query. "We are just plugging for business for all we are worth. Next year, maybe, we'll astonish the people, but this year——"

He left the rest to be inferred.

He told me at another time that his Christmas sales during the Christmas season of 1908, when he hadn't any decorations of any kind beyond the ordinary clean, bright interior and simple attractive window display were between $600 and $700 in excess of those during the Christmas season of 1907, when his Christmas display was on all sides freely admitted to be the handsomest in town.

It is Just Tradition.

True, business conditions a year ago were unfavorable. This Christmas they were much improved. But in any event the difference in business conditions, gauged from the statements of other grocers similarly situated in the same town, could at the most be responsible for an increase in business of no more than $500 at the most. The credit balance remains in favor of the year when the grocer, instead of devoting his attention altogether to decoration, devoted it to his customers.

And the result serves to emphasize the previous statement, that the Christmas display—that is, the excessively brilliant Christmas display—is not a matter of business, but solely one of tradition; that decorations are indulged in, not because they are wise from a business point of view, but because the custom demands them; that they are, in short, part of the grocer's annual sacrifice on the altar of the Christmas spirit.

Why the Difference?

Examine into the case in point.

A grocer's business is to sell that miscellaneous aggregation of articles of household utility which come within the scope of his business. He should make use of every means calculated to facilitate sales; he should discard everything which does not facilitate sales, and he should particularly discard anything which hampers sales, even in the least degree.

In the display of his goods, as in advertising, he should aim at simplicity and directness. As another repentant grocer once said:

"All this holly and tissue paper just distracts the attention of the customers from the subject of buying. They forget what they came for. More, it serves to keep them from seeing things which they did not come for, but which, if they saw, they would be very likely to buy."

After all, a little green stuff in the way of garnishing is not out of place, but always the foremost item in the grocer's display should be what he is interested in and what the customer is interested in—the things the grocer has to sell, and the customer is likely to buy. A display of Christmas confectionery in attractive boxes, with price tags, is a very direct hint at Christmas giving on the customer's part—far more direct than any amount of evergreens, which he isn't going to buy.

And Then the Calendar.

But the ornate Christmas display is not the grocer's only sacrifice at the altar of Christmas tradition. There is the calendar.

It is a sign of the times that the calendar is gradually passing into disuse. Advertising lithographs have become so common that the calendar is no longer prized as it once was; and it is becoming more and more the monopoly of the insurance companies, banks and other financial concerns. In the words of an eminent politician, such corporations have "neither bodies to be kicked, nor souls to be damned"—and hence, resentment on the part of the man who has been overlooked in the distribution of calendars is rarely forthcoming, because likely to be futile.

But the grocer has both soul and body, and they are, under certain contingencies, subject to the dire possibilities expressed by the politician. And it is represented that the calendar has brought down more wrath upon the grocer's head, and caused more heartburnings among his customers, than all the other business crimes of which he may have been guilty.

One Man's Experience.

There was one enterprising merchant who, in 1907, undertook to excel every other merchant on Main Street in the style of his calendar. He picked a particularly brilliant design, with a multitude of colors and a scroll work border. His calendars must have cost at the least twenty or twenty-five cents each.

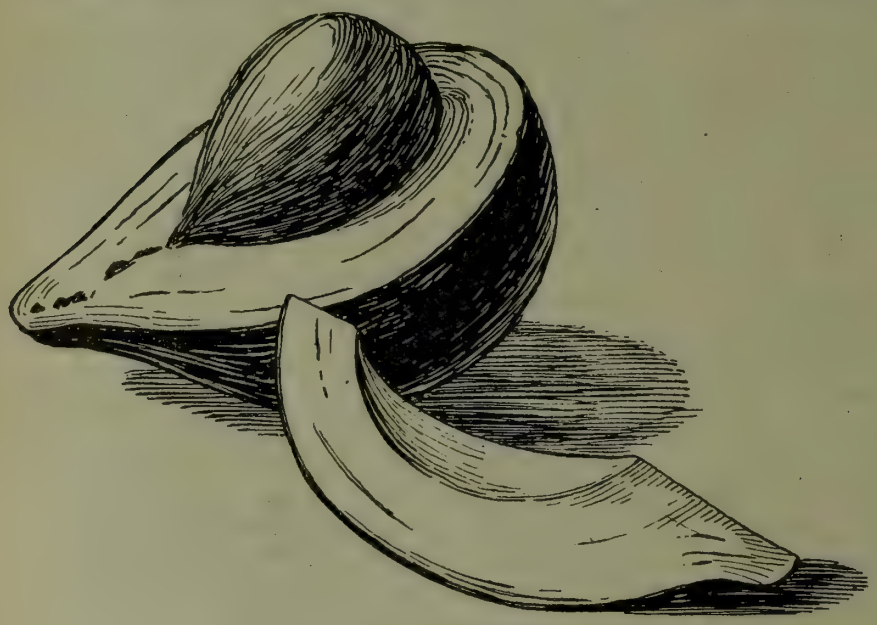
He didn't send out any calendar this year. Instead, he sunk about $100 more than usual in newspaper advertising during the Christmas season. He said:

"Yes, there was a rush for calendars. We ordered one big supply, and they went like hot cakes. Then we had to get another. We cut it out when that supply was exhausted, and thereby probably saved an assignment. There were old customers who thought we should supply a copy of that calendar to every member of the family, from Paterfamilias and Materfamilias down to the baby, including Aunt Mary and Uncle John and twenty-third cousin Ted, and the folks over in the Old Country, and the nephew, who was a missionary in Central Africa. And there were the old customers who were accidentally overlooked, and swore they would never purchase anything from us again. And there were the little kindergarten boys and girls who came in and pestered us for calendars, and if they got them, came in a second and a third time and pestered us for more, and if they didn't getthem, made faces and threw snowballs at us when we went home to dinner. And there were the people who never bought anything from us and never will who came in and purchased a postage stamp and asked for a calendar, and the people who are simply deadbeats and whose trade is a liability pure and simple, who came in and asked for a calendar and wanted us to add another charge to an account already too long; and there were the people who had never bought anything who came in and wanted calendars without pausing to buy anything at all. And, to cap the climax, when we sent out our errand boy with a supply of calendars, to deliver to old and tried customers, instead of doing so he catered to the public demand by selling them to passersby at five cents each—and you may judge the effect that had on the buying public. A business firm charging for its calendars!"

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Introduction of the Abogato Pear—A New and Delicious Fruit Having a Vegetable Nature—Used as a Breakfast Food—Cost to Canadian Consumers.

ABOGATO PEARS—Abogato or Alligator pears from the Hawaiian Islands are a tropical fruit constantly increasing in demand in the principal markets. The Abogato tree is of medium height, grows rapidly and bears its first fruit four or five years after planting, and then regularly for many years. The tree will admit of being cultivated and this cultivation shows itself in the improvement in both size and quality, and especially in flavor.



The experimental station of Hawaii has proved by tests and trial shipments that the Abogato pear can with proper packing and cold storage system in transport be shipped to every market having direct sailing connections, etc., with Hawaii. In Honolulu the fruit sells from 5c to 20c apiece ; in San Francisco from $2.50 to $4 per dozen, the demand in the latter port being usually greater than the supply.

A Breakfast Fruit.

The Abogato pear is a breakfast or salad fruit. The meat is oily, with a very rich, nutty flavor. The fruit is cut apart lengthwise, the large seeds removed and the meat served with salt, pepper, vinegar or sugar, according to one's taste.

Hawaii offers opportunities for the setting out of Abogato pear plantations to further stimulate the commercial demand. The trees frequently bear 200 to 500 fruits are are easily propagated through transplanting and pruning. There are over 40 different varieties of the tree, some of them being among the best of other tropical lands. The tree requires good soil, a fairly abundant supply of water (moisture), and protection against wind. The tree will grow on the islands at any altitude from sea level to 1,800 feet above.

Lately arrangements have been considered to place the fruit on the European markets.—Translated for The Grocer from the German paper Die Kolonialwaren-Woche, Dec. 16, 1908.

THE ABOGATO PEAR.

The Abogato or Avocado pear, as it is known in Canada, is a native of the West Indies, where it is grown quite abundantly. Especially is it cultivated in the Barbadoes. Central and the northern parts of South America also grow this fruit, and even as far south as Brazil is it well known. Possibly the best market to-day for avocadoes is British Guiana, that country taking pretty large quantities every year. Canada and the United States take little. In fact, there are few people in the northern part of this continent who know the fruit even by name.

Vegetable in Nature.

It is served at breakfast in many of the hotels in the West Indies, and hardly a steamer plying between the tropics and eastern Atlantic ports but has it on the bill of fare. While classed as a fruit, the avocado has the properties and taste and is put to the uses of a vegetable. At breakfast it is served alone, but many persons who have become accustomed to its taste, desire it served with steaks and meats of various kinds. Its principal use, however, is as a salad and as such the avacado has many devotees.

It resembles very much a Canadian Bartlett pear, slightly larger is size and in color the skin is a green-turning-to-yellow shade. The meat is white and juicy, just like a pear. There is a single large brown nut in the centre, as shown in the illustration, which is removed before serving. The principal reason so few of these avocadoes have come to Canada is on account of their poor keeping qualities, the fruit not being able to stand up after two days. Of course, the method of handling and caring for them has been crude. There has, too, been no demand for the fruit. With improved methods of packing and shipping something might be done, but as yet the person willing to take a risk and import a fair consignment has not come forth.

The Price in Canada.

Some samples of the Avocado are sold in Toronto during the autumn months being handled by one of the high-class fruit dealers, but the price at which they are sold, 50c each, is rather high for the ordinary consumer of fruit or vegetables.

DIVIDING THE LOSSES OF AN ESTATE.

A subscriber writes: "A and B form a partnership, A contributing 75 per cent. and B contributing 25 per cent. of the capital. A, in his will, provided that his interest shall be left in the business in the event of his death, to be under the sole control of B. A dies within a few months afterwards, and B elects to carry on the business. In the articles of agreement the profits were to be divided equally between A and B or the estate of A and B. Business was continued under this arrangement for 15 years, the balance sheets being signed yearly by the executors of A, and were always entirely satisfactory to them. The estate interest decided to wind up the business and forced it into liquidation, and afterwards forced it into court for settlement. They now claim that in winding up the business that the loss of about 14 per cent. on the capital of the two interests must be divided equally between the two interests. I claim that this loss should be divided pro rata with the capital of each. Interests of each at liquidation were both slightly reduced from amounts as standing at the time of death of A."

Remarks: The answer depends upon how the loss of 14 per cent. on the capital is made up. If in this loss are included any expenses of winding up the business, then B pays one-half of such expenses. If, however, the accounts have been correctly kept, and the loss of 14 per cent. represents the difference between the amount of cash put into the business and the amount received in payment for the business, then the division of the assets should be pro rata 75 per cent. and 25 per cent., and B would, therefore, bear only 25 per cent. of the loss. If B were entitled to pay one-half of the depreciation he would be entitled to receive one-half of the assets. If A's executor wishes to establish B's right to a half interest in the capital of the business, they should pursue their present claim. This opinion is given on the facts as presented and on the supposition that B had not altered his position by any definite agreement at the time of commencing the liquidation.—Editor Canadian Grocer.

BUILDING UP SMALLER PLACES

Why Winter Fairs and Similar Events Have a Higher Educational Value and Greater Strength When Held in Rural Communities—How Assistance Given to Such Institutions Helps the People of the Country as a Whole.

After the annual Winter Fair of Ontario, held each year in Guelph, there is generally an agitation in certain quarters to have the institution removed from the Royal City to some larger centre of population. The ground urged for shifting the scene is that hotel and other accommodations are not sufficient in a small city. Directly, the fair is not of live interest to business men, but indirectly it is of the greatest importance. It has been held regularly at Guelph in specially fitted-up buildings for many years and is steadily growing in strength and value.

On the face of things the proposal to remove the show would appear reasonable, but a close study of the whole situation strongly favors that the fair and all similar events should be held at the most advantageous outside points. Why? Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and other cities are now so big that their natural attractions will draw all the crowds they deserve without artificial aid or taking from the smaller cities and rural towns what properly belongs to them in the shape of institutions of the character and scope of the one at Guelph, which is designed primarily to be of practical, educational and instructive value, and secondly, competitive and spectacular, reaching as large a number of farmers, dairymen and stockmen as possible. The result is that those who patronize this and other like events, get the full benefit of them without any rival or counter attractions, which would not be the case in a populous centre. During its progress, the fair is the biggest thing in the place and naturally all visitors gravitate to it. The outcome is that the object sought—reaching as great a number as possible—is attained. Were such an attraction to take place in Torono, for instance, what would happen? The sidelights of a big city would prove a more powerful magnet to the majority of the visitors than the fair itself, and the result would be that, instead of witnessing the practical demonstrations, experiments and displays, as well as being present at the lectures and conferences on important matters, the attendance or rather those who should attend, would be visiting the Parliament buildings, the theatres, the department stores the large hotels and the other sources of amusement, sight-seeing or pleasure. The intent and purpose of the fair and its allied interests would thus be defeated for, after all, human nature is fond of enjoyment, and would naturally follow the city throng. At gatherings of this nature in smaller cities, so long as the latter are centrally situated, are reasonably easy of access by rail, and have hotel accommodation, the fruits of the assembly are more satisfactory. Any assistance given by the Government toward holding such events in less crowded places helps the people of the country as a whole.

Fairs of this character emphasize the interdependence of the business man and the farmer and bring home the lesson that they have many interests in common. Any medium that tends to increase the productivity of the farm and put more money into the pockets of the farmer, thus adding to his spending power, is one that should be encouraged. The greater the prosperity of the individual the greater is the progress and development of a community. These self-evident facts have been pointed out many times by C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, and others. The farmer, generally speaking, is to-day a good business man. Modern conveniences and facilities such as electric roads, rural mail delivery and telephones have made him so. He now buys and sells for cash, goes in for mixed farming and new lines of enterprise, studies the markets and the needs of those around him, and undertakes things on a broader basis and more intelligent scale than he ever did. The closer the mutual relations of the farmer and the business man, the more rapid and substantial will be the advancement of the smaller cities and country towns, many of which, in the absence of large industrial concerns, depend solely upon the agricultural districts in which they are located. The farmer is also closer in touch with the citizens of a country town than he is with the residents of a large city. He deserves attention from the merchants, as he is the controller of the food products and the producer of surplus cash. He has a moral effect or influence upon the country. The banks have recognized this by opening branches in nearly every village which have had the result of greatly increasing savings deposits.

A healthy, active, progressive rural life is one of the best assets of any people, and the more educative agencies at work among rural residents the greater the solidity and permanency of the country. Holding such events as the Provincial Winter Fair and Fat Stock Show at centres like Guelph, therefore, touches the farmer more closely than if they were held in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa or other big places. The indifferent farmer, like the indifferent citizen, is a decided obstacle. Anything that will arouse him to a more liberal conception of his possibilities, any missionary movement that will stimulate him to enter new avenues of activity, offers a solution of a vexed and far-reaching problem, tending to inaugurate a revolution in the conditions of rural life and render it more happy, contented, remunerative and attractive. No man can stand alone. We all depend on one another, and, as unity is the highest moral ideal in our national, educational and religious life, any institution that has in view this great and important end, should be warmly supported, having, of course, a just appreciation of the greatest good to the greatest number.

ONTARIO TOBACCO CULTURE.

Grown Extensively in the Western Peninsula—Just Becoming Profitable.

(By A. R. Ferris.)

The culture of certain varieties of tobacco has been carried on to quite a large extent for a number of years along the north shore of Lake Erie, in the Counties of Essex and Kent, and, I might say, with varying success both as to culture and marketing. As to culture, a great many farmers went into the production without giving it any study or without making any preparation for taking care of the crop, after it had been grown. They knew nothing of the selection of the proper soil adapted to the production of the variety of tobacco that grows here, and, consequently, made mistakes. A large percentage of them lost financially, and, in addition to this there was placed on the market a considerable quantity of inferior tobacco which was the worst feature of their failures to the trade generally. This should have been sold for insect powder, or as a fertilizer, instead of being used as a soother to the feelings of man.

Instead, it was sold a few cents cheaper than the good article, to the detriment of the honest grower, the manufacturer and the consumer. It takes the place of the best grade on account of its cheapness and spoils the opportunity of raising the standard of the Canadian leaf.

The marketing has not been as satisfactory as it should be, and it is hoped there will be an improvement along that line in the next few years. Until the present time the price for good quality has not been any or very little better than the poorer grade. This was not giving very much encouragement to a grower to be careful and attentive to his crop, and to place it on the market in good shape when his neighbor was getting the same price for an inferior product.

The industry at the present time looks as if we had passed over the experimental stage, and are making rapid strides in both Burley and Comstock varieties. The latter is a cigar leaf and has been grown quite extensively on limestone soil in the Township of Colchester this year. The samples produced have been in every case that came under my notice of an extra fine quality, with first-class burning qualities, and a very large percentage of wrappers which should take the place of foreign leaf to a large extent. This increases the acreage of cigar leaf, reduces the acreage of chewing, or Burley, and lessens the chance of over-production of either—an unfortunate position we as growers found ourselves placed in 1906 and 1907.

KNIFING THE OTHER FELLOW.

This heading at the first glance suggests murder, but is not used in such connection. It is practically what thoughtless business men are doing daily by the iniquitous practice which many of them unconsciously possess of starting and retailing gossip injurious to the reputation of their fellow-toilers.

During the past year the work of slippery tongues has been particularly noticeable. Many firms labored under a financial strain, serious enough, but which gave rise to needless rumors as to their solvency. Had they been left alone to fight their battle, without the handicap of dangerous gossip, everything would have righted itself eventually. But no, this could not be. Busy bodies interfered, starting stories which shook the credit of the temporarily embarrassed firm. In many instances this was the last straw needed to send them to the wall. They would have weathered the storm could they have secured the credit denied them as the result of nasty rumors spread by those who knew nothing about the actual state of affairs, but saw them through dark spectacles. Or, were they able to get through, despite the gossip, irreparable injury was done them. Years will not wipe out the stigma placed upon their reputation financially.

Other firms had narrow escapes, but, fortunately for them, gossip-retailers did not learn of their plight and they are still doing business at the old stand in the same old way. But the man across the street, in less shaky condition right through, has his work cut out for him to get back his credit standing.

Let us all begin the new year right. Boost, rather than knock. If you hear Smith is hard up, keep it to yourself. Do not tell it to Jones, who informs Brown that Smith will probably assign within a month. You do your little part. Do not repeat these stories and they will neither spread nor grow. If you do not believe in the Christian charity of this suggestion, then, from a selfish standpoint, refrain from gossiping of this nature, for it hurts business generally and indirectly injures you.

Another thing, resolve to shut down upon that man whose invariable greeting is: "Did you hear about So-and-so?" Tell him you did not; that you do not want to, and that unless he puts a clamp on his tongue in matters of this sort the less you see of him the better. That will give him something to think about.

Seventy-five per cent. of the rumors that do such incalculable harm arise from some innocent remark from which a double meaning may be taken. Somebody starts the story, and, like the snowball, it gathers volume as it proceeds. If the story is helped along in proper style, to make a simile again, the firm has about as much chance of continuing to exist as the proverbial snowball.

Do not gossip; do your utmost to stamp out the practice.

MESSINA LEMONS DESTROYED.

Authentic news has at last arrived from the East regarding the exact condition of the source of the Messina lemon market. There is no doubt now that a large quantity of lemons has been destroyed by the earthquake and the effect will likely be an advance in the price. The importation of fruits from the earthquake-stricken district has been badly disorganized and reports from New York indicate an advance in prices of from twenty-five to three hundred and fifty per cent. There was only one sale of Sicily lemons in New York last week, the cargo being that of the steamship Alice, consisting of about 18,000 boxes.

A local firm has secured information from its representative in Sicily, who, while he escaped himself, he cables that all the lemons stored have been destroyed. Well-founded reports indicate that some 500,000 boxes, November cut lemons, stored at Messina for America, have been lost, so that the market may be expected to be strong for some time. Of the above-mentioned number, 350,000 boxes were intended for New York and 150,000 for Canada, making the shortage considerable. In New York the price has advanced from 75 cents to one dollar per box, and, therefore, there is every prospect for a raise in Canadian prices.

To make the situation worse, hundreds of fruit handlers with their employers have suffered death from the catastrophe.

The November cut of lemons which were stored at Messina were probably the best the district could produce, as all those not suitable for shipment, if it were delayed, were culled. Shipments are usually made in January, February and March, those coming in the second month being the best. By the rapid moving vessels used for carrying lemons, cargoes have come from Messina in the Mediterranean to New York across the Atlantic in eight days.

There is no immediate prospect of "famine" prices, according to advices received by local dealers. A fair quantity of the fruit will be coming along in the no distant future.

POLICE COURT EXPOSURE.

Food adulteration is something which should be attended to with more promptness by the Dominion Government. As was pointed out in last week's Grocer, a report from the Inland Revenue Department showed considerable adulterations in pepper samples. What is the penalty for such an offence and who pays it? It seems that as a general rule the retailer who is guilty of the wrong has to pay the fine, but that he is refunded by the manufacturer, if the latter is responsible, and nothing more comes of the case. Probably in nine cases out of ten the adulteration of the same food goes on among the same parties.

What should be done to stamp out the evil is to expose the retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer, or whoever is to blame, in police court before the public and have the fine imposed by the police magistrate. That would tend to eliminate food adulteration infinitely better than a fine imposed by an inspector and which is only known to him and to the party who has to pay the penalty.

There are honest retailers who are undersold by those who adulterate goods and who can therefore afford to sell cheaper. Exposure in court seems to be the only effectual course and the Dominion government appears to be lax in its policy when it allows the present unsatisfactory state of affairs to exist.

What adulteration of food means and the penalty for a conviction appears in another column of this issue.

A WAR IN CORN SYRUPS.

In order to meet American competition in the West a heavy reduction in corn syrups has been announced by the Canadian manufacturers. At the present prices of corn it is probable that the reduced prices might be justifiable but as the manufacturers use corn that is at least a year old the product now on the market has been manufactured from very expensive raw material. American manufacturers are making a strong bid for Canadian business and a war of prices is the result.

POOR QUALIFICATIONS.

Information secured regarding the qualifications of W. K. Snider to suitably fill the position of special hotel commissioner does not impress one with the idea that he is the man for the position. He has been called upon by the Government of Ontario to look after the interests of the commercial travelers by ordering improvements in hotels and giving advice to hotel proprietors. The Government has done the proper thing in providing a special commissioner, but has it secured a man whose experience will teach him what is best to do?

For three years Mr. Snider was Conservative organizer. Prior to that he was interested in farming and lumbering, and also has organized companies, having been connected with the organization of the Wallaceburg Beet Sugar Company and others.

None of these would appear to give to any man qualifications that would make him a successful critic of what was lacking in a hotel. It is not probable that he has traveled extensively in the villages and smaller towns where proper hotel equipment is seldom met with, and, therefore, it seems quite improbable that he would be acquainted with the details that go to make a safe, sanitary and well-equipped public house.

A commercial traveler is the man who should have been appointed to take care of the safety and interests of the commercial travelers, and not a man who has had nothing heretofore to do with the knights of the grip and who naturally would not be much interested in their welfare.

ON BUSINESS PRINCIPLES.

The trouble arising out of the recent raising of rates by the express companies seems to be universal in the older Provinces of the Dominion. The action of the companies has not been a businesslike one. After leading Judge Mabee and the Railway Commission to believe that the rates were being lowered, they went up. However, upon hearing the evidence from both the shippers' and the companies, Judge Mabee has annulled the new classification, which shows the justification for the appointment of such a commission.

Evidence has shown that the employes of the companies have been indifferent towards the pleasing of their patrons, but that the fault lies not so much with these employes as with the system under which they have been working. This lofty action of the express companies has caused numerous losses in shipping, and it is none too soon that the commission is looking into their system and prices. They should be compelled to do business on business principles.

ADVANCE IN THE WEST.

Prospects for the future in the canning industry in Western Canada are very bright. So far it has developed much beyond the expectations of easterners, who, until a few years ago believed that fruit available for canning could not be produced outside the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. But now we find canneries being established in the Okanagan district, and in various other important fruit valleys in British Columbia. Within the past two weeks alone there have been two companies formed to establish canneries as will be observed from western correspondence in last week's issue of the Grocer.

The development of this industry out west has been phenomenal, due no doubt to the prominence given at recent big fruit exhibitions to the quality of the fruit produced in the province on the Pacific. Many of us in Ontario have been introduced to the pears, peaches and apples grown there and we know they are of a splendid quality.

Similar conditions are being experienced in the United States. Until a short time ago the fruit canning industry was confined almost solely to New York and a few other Eastern States. It has now spread to the middle west and is rapidly approaching this coast.

The fruit ranches in British Columbia are growing in number and with the genial climate there, the production is bound to be successful

NO CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT.

There appears to be a feeling general among the retailers that the grocery business since the opening of the New Year has been dull. But a lull in the trade at this time of the year is always to be expected. Grocers old in the business claim that such has been the case as long as they can remember, and it will likely continue in future years.

It is not anticipated that this will last much longer. There is every prospect for a good business in the coming year. Manufacturers claim that generally speaking there is a better trade outlook and this means more work for the labourers and a freer circulation of money. The grocer will certainly come in for his share. There is therefore not much use in complaining just now of a dull trade for at this season of the year business is invariably dull.

BUTTER PACKING IN STRAW BOXES.

The increase in commerce all over the civilized world is depleting at a very rapid rate all the forests of the world, and especially soft woods. Paper, of course, is the source of the greatest drain on the wood supply, but this is largely augmented by the manufacture of wooden boxes, for packing purposes. In Queensland they have perfected a process for the manufacture of butter boxes, out of straw. Butter shippers have used pine exclusively for this purpose, but owing to the rapid increase in the industry, and other demands upon the forestry reserves of the country, it has become necessary to look about for something to take the place of wood, as the price of this product has become prohibitive. To meet this contingency a new box composed chiefly of straw and clay has been invented. At the present time over three million boxes are used annually, representing an expenditure of something like two hundred thousand pounds a year in Australia in this trade alone. The new box costs only a few pence, and by its use farmers will be saved annually nearly fifty thousand pounds.

The box is odorless, damp-proof and strong, and compares very favorably in weight with the wooden article.

ADULTERATION OF FOOD.

What it Consists of and the Penalties That May Be Incurred.

Since the report of the Inland Revenue Department of the Dominion Government concerning the adulteration of pepper has been circulated, grocers will probably be interested in knowing what adulteration of food really means and what are the penalties inflicted upon a convicted party. These points are made clear by the act relating to this matter in the Revised Statutes of Canada, the substance of which is as follows :

Food shall be deemed to be adulterated if any substance has been mixed with it so as to reduce or lower or injuriously affect its quality or strength ; if any inferior or cheaper substance has been substituted wholly or in part for the article ; if any valuable constituent of the article has been wholly or in part abstracted ; it it is an imitation of, or is sold under the name of another article ; if it consists wholly or in part of a diseased or decomposed, or putrid or rotten animal or vegetable substance, whether manufactured or not, or in the case of milk or butter, if it is the produce of a diseased animal, or of an animal fed upon unwholesome food, or if it contains any added poisonous ingredient, or any ingredient which may render such an article injurious to the health of a person consuming it.

Some Exceptions.

The statute goes on to give a number of exceptions. The foregoing definitions as to the adulteration of food do not apply when the ingredient added is not injurious to the health and is required for the production or preparation of it as an article of commerce to make it fit for consumption or carriage and not done fraudulently to increase the bulk, weight or measure of the food or to conceal the inferior quality of it, providing such articles are distinctly labelled as a mixture in conspicuous characters forming an inseparable part of the general label which shall also bear the name and address of the manufacturer. Neither do the definitions apply when the food is a proprietary medicine or if it is unavoidably mixed with some extraneous matter in the process of collection or preparation.

Men have been appointed as food analysts who are supposed to possess competent medical, chemical and microscopic knowledge. Inspectors in cities, towns and villages are appointed by the municipal authorities to collect from time to time samples of food and have them analyzed by the Government officials.

Such an inspector may prosecute any person manufacturing, selling, or offering or exposing for sale any article of food which has been certified by any public analyst to have been adulterated within the meaning of the act.

Every person who wilfully adulterates any article of food or orders any other person to do so shall, if such adulteration is deemed to be injurious to the health, for the first offence incur a penalty not exceeding $50 and not less than $10 and costs, and for each subsequent offence a penalty not exceeding $200 and not less than $50 and costs. If the adulteration is deemed not to be injurious to the health the offence shall incur a penalty not exceeding $30 and costs and for each subsequent offence a penalty not exceeding $100 and not less than $50 and costs.

Fine for Selling.

The penalty for selling the adulterated article, if injurious, for a first offence is a fine not exceeding $50 and costs and for each subsequent offence a fine not exceeding $200, and not less than $50 and costs, and if not injurious the penalty is between $50 and $5 for any offence. But if it is shown that the person accused proves satisfactorily that he did not know of the article being adulterated and shows that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained that knowledge he shall be subject only to the liability to forfeiture.

PACKERS HOLD TOMATOES.

The situation in tomatoes in Baltimore as shown by the New York Journal of Commerce is as follows:—There has been a firm undertone to the market for No. 3 standard tomatoes during the last four or five weeks which caused an advance in the price of that article from 67½c to 70c per dozen, and, perhaps, the advance may go farther if there is a sufficient demand during January and February to satisfy the country canners. At present the country packers are not forcing their tomatoes on the market, for they have less cause to do so, and that is the chief basis for the better feeling in that line of goods. The average cost to the jobbers of the tomatoes which they are now carrying is above the present market values, and they would, undoubtedly, welcome an advance to a figure that would show them a profit, and it is up to them to pursue a more liberal policy in buying to help out the situation. As go tomatoes, so goes the rest of the list, is a saying in the trade which generally holds good.

DEATH OF WM. J. BRYAN.

Death removed on Tuesday morning, Jan. 19th, a one-time familiar figure in the wholesale grocery trade, in the person of William J. Bryan, Toronto. His death was due to apoplexy, after a two days' illness. The deceased was 75 years of age, was a native of England, and prior to his arrival in Toronto in 1870, resided in Hamilton and New York. For a number of years he was a member of Bryan, Ewart and Murray, wholesale grocers, and later on was with the Glasgow & London and the British America Insurance Companies.

He was also a past president of the Commercial Travelers' Association.

The funeral was held on Thursday to the Necropolis Cemetery.

UNJUSTIFIED EXPENDITURES.

Economy in the grocery trade is something that should be uppermost in the minds of the grocers. On it depends to a considerable extent the amount of profit at the end of the year, and all merchants are working with the prospect of making money. In working out a system to economize there are found many lines of expense which detract materially from the year's savings, and these should be eliminated if at all possible. But very often to discard such items is not practicable. The greatest care is necessary, for it often occurs that in attempting to save a dollar a grocer spends two in some other way without it being apparent that there is a further loss.

Spending money, for instance, on a large, up-to-date sign will prove a good investment to a retailer, whereas a small sign on the door of his establishment may just as well convey the fact that he is in business there. The external appearance of the store has a good deal to do with business, and it may be made attractive with profit. In such cases it is well to determine the amount of expenditure the plans demand, and secondly, how best these plans can be carried out with the amount at hand to produce the best results.

It has been known in a few exceptional cases that an expenditure not justified by the amount of capital has been followed by rewards, but if facts attending such cases were looked into, it would invariably be found that the success has been obtained by a fortunate conjunction of causes not originally considered in reference to the expenditure at all.

TRADE NOTES.

J. C. Rose, of Rose & Laflamme, of Montreal, returned Tuesday from Boston, where he was on a short business trip.

A. C. Pelton, formerly of San Jose, California, has purchased the grocery business of John Grierson, Ottawa, and will take possession in a few days.

The annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Association will be held on Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, Jan. 30th. The presentation of the annual report will be made and other important business transacted.

A. S. Williamson who represents Eby-Blain Limited in the North West and British Columbia, taking the territory from Regina to the Coast, left Toronto this week on his spring trip. Mr. Williamson has been during the past few months looking over the trade in the East and has gained many pointers which will be to the advantage of his customers in the West.

Montreal, Jan. 21, 1909.

Everything taken into consideration the week has been a good one. Travelers in the country report a better feeling generally, and all seem more buoyant with regard to the future than they have been for some time. Collections continue to improve, and country paper is being well met. Locally, a few lines have moved slightly. Molasses continues to hold a strong position, with every indication that another advance will take place before long. Butter has eased off a trifle, but cheese remains firm. Eggs are still mounting higher in price, having advanced 1c for best quality, and ½c to 1c for other grades. Beans are in the upward class also, having gone forward 5c to 10c. The scarcity of live hogs keeps the price of lard at a high figure. Fish have weakened generally, with perhaps one or two exceptions. The shortage in broom corn is responsible for a rise of 25 per cent. in the price of brooms. Rangoon rice is 10c higher, the advance taking place on Tuesday. Cottonseed, which is being used in many cases instead of olive oil, has gone forward, in sympathy with the advance in olive oil. No changes have taken place in other lines.

SUGAR—Demand for sugar continues fairly good, considering the time of the year. No further decline is anticipated, but rather a hardening of prices may be looked for. Local quotations continue unchanged.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES — Prices for molasses have been firmly maintained at the recent advance, and another movement forward is not improbable. A local dealer who has just returned from Boston states that the situation there is quite as strong as here. Stocks are very short and the arrival of new crop molasses is eagerly looked forward to. He reports the market as being in an exceedingly healthy condition. Syrups are being distributed in the smaller sizes for immediate wants only.

TEA—Reports from primary markets state low grade Indian blacks are decidedly firm, with an upward tendency, and an upward tone also for medium and high grade stock. In Ceylons the low grade teas are firm, with an easier feeling for medium and high grades, which has been due to deterioration by weather conditions. Locally the market is only fairly active, with no changes in prices. Japans are moving out satisfactorily according to some exporters, while others declare business very quiet.

SPICES—During the coming year the markets for spices, according to reports from the primary sources, will be steady in character, with the exception of pepper, cassia and nutmegs, which will display an irregularly upward tendency. There will be a rather strong undertone in other lines, but changes will take place slowly. Locally conditions are as last reported, with peppers showing an easier undertone.

CANNED GOODS

MONTREAL—Fruits and vegetables are more active this week. Canned meats are also in better demand, than for some time. Canned fish, with the exception of salmon, are very much neglected.

TORONTO—The demand for canned goods in the fruit line is reported good while peas, corn and tomatoes are being called for as much as usual.

The market is represented by several of the brokers interested in canned goods as more active than for some time.

Toronto, Jan. 21, 1909.

No features are noticeable in the markets of this week. The wholesalers all report business good and one remarked that he was particularly well pleased with the business he had turned over since the opening of the new year.

"It was beyond my anticipation," he said, "and much better than during the corresponding two weeks of last year."

An activity is noticeable in canned goods this week. Some lines of fruit are selling well on account of the lessening of the supplies of the consumers. Dried fruits are also firm.

SUGAR—During the week the market was quiet in sugar beyond the usual steady demand.

TEA—The demand for Indian teas is very good this week, the market being particularly firm in low grades. Ceylons as well are in good demand.

Regarding market conditions last year one broker said they were particularly hard. Selling prices were a little higher, he said, but not nearly enough to offset the higher cost. The markets declined some during the year, the commonest grades to fairly low prices, but medium grades are now very firm and quite distinctly higher than a few months ago ; while teas which retail at 40 to 50 cents are higher than at any time since he went into the business. People seem to be appreciating to a much greater extent than ever before the real value of a tea that can be sold at 40 cents. This is only in line with the fact that people are buying better goods of every kind.

COFFEE—The coffee market has remained rather firm during the past week the demand continuing fairly good on the whole.

DRIED FRUITS—The movement in dried fruits is reported good. The demand for prunes is better, the market being firm. Apricots, too, are selling well. Although no change is noticeable in Valencia raisins, advices from the east tell of the supply being nearly exhausted in Spain. The same applies to figs produced in Turkey.

THE WHEAT OF WESTERN CANADA

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Jan. 19.—The sharp, cold weather has given place to a strong wind from the south that is blowing something of a blizzard, but is very mild. Railway traffic is being delayed to some extent, but nothing serious is anticipated. Further west, in Alberta, the sudden rise in temperature is a great relief as the continued extreme cold was very bad for stock. Fortunately there was not much snow at the time, so that forage was not covered and the cattle when they ventured from the shelter of bluffs and sheds were able to get plenty to eat. This puts matters on a very different footing to what they were two years ago when the snowfall was heavy and followed by very cold weather.

One of the surprises to people arriving in Winnipeg is the fact that during the very coldest days we have had this winter, the erection of the structural steel has proceeded steadily on the new Union Depot for the C.N.R. and G.T.P., several thousand tons having been put in place in the past two weeks. This is not the only building on which steel is being erected during the winter months, but it is the largest.

A real estate deal of more than usual interest went through during the week. This was the sale of the northwest corner of Lombard and Rorie Streets to the Great West Life Company. The block sold was 100 feet square and the price was $1,000 per foot. The price was nothing out of the way, though it is a good one, but the old and extremely ramshackle building that now occupies the premises was, in the days that have gone by, the home of Winnipeg's first Post Office. At that time Lombard Street was known as Post Office Road, and this building was marked No. 16 on the very crude little map which appears in Begg's "Ten Years in Winnipeg," which is now out of print.

The property mentioned is right across Rorie Street, from the new Grain Exchange, and as soon as possible in the spring the Great West Life will commence the erection of a handsome three storey re-enforced concrete office building for their own use. History repeats itself, for in the days when the Red River was the chief means of communication Lombard Street, or Post Office Road, was one of the business centres. For years all business drifted away from it, excepting of the poorest and most peddling kind, and now business is going back to it by leaps and bounds. A few years ago one of the largest cold storage and creamery plants was erected at the foot of the street close to the river, and transfer tracks; next came the Kemp Manufacturing Company; then the Great West Wire Fence Company; then Telfer Bros., biscuits, and MacNab & Roberts, manufacturers' agents, all erecting fine brick and concrete buildings; last year the Winnipeg Grain Exchange and now the Great West Life Assurance Company. Each additional business planted on this street has witnessed a substantial increase in the prices paid for real estate.

To Erect Sub-Station.

Another real estate deal that carries with it much more than the mere transfer of a block of land at a good figure, is the purchase by the Canadian Pacific Railway just north of Portage Avenue on the spur track of the Great West Development Company on the Western boundary of the city of a large block. This site has been secured by the railway for the purpose of erecting a sub-station for freight. The C.P.R. has bought the spur as well as the land along it, and this purchase and the erection of the freight sub-station is necessitated by the rapid development of manufacturing of various kinds in that part of the city. In addition to a number of factories already in the neighborhood several large industries have under consideration plans for the erection of buildings next spring. Four years ago this section of Winnipeg was open prairie, and now it needs a sub-station for freight. The matter needs no comment.

A Romance in Wheat.

A new and very interesting development in the culture of winter wheat has come to light in Alberta.

It is some 25 years ago that Francis Wilcock, formerly of Ontario, made the first attempt at growing winter wheat in Alberta and the experiment was made at Pincher Creek. Mr. Wilcock farmed for a time in Manitoba, and having decided to try his fortunes in the then just opening Territory of Alberta, sold out his Manitoba farm and went to his old home in Ontario for a visit before starting for the further west. When he reached his old home, fall wheat cutting was in progress. It was some years since he had seen fall wheat, and struck with the beauty of some of the heads—the variety was Dawson's gold chaff—he plucked them and put them in his pocket intending to show them to his wife when he reached the house. His attention was taken by something else and he forgot about the wheat. The coat was packed hastily when the time came to leave and the wheat was still in the pocket. When he reached Alberta it was about the middle of August, and coming across the wheat one day, he thought he would try it. There was a little patch that some previous occupant had used for a garden. This he dug carefully and planted the grain taken from the three or four heads. The wheat came up quickly and showed a fine, strong growth, but one morning he found that the gophers had eaten all but about a dozen stalks. Over these he placed a puncheon that had held the family crockery on its trip, having first removed the bottom. This preserved the few stalks, and the next spring it came up all right, and in due time was reaped and rubbed out by hand. It was sown again that year and from this small beginning has come the fall wheat industry of Alberta. A great many Americans, and, alas, a great many Canadians, continue to delight in attributing the first growing of fall wheat in Alberta to the Mormons. This is the true story.

But to return to the present developments. With the passing of the years and the increase of farming, came the introduction of Kansas Turkey Red wheat into Alberta. The first seed was brought in by the C.P.R., and was distributed for experiment in 1899. It was an almost immediate success. It seemed as if Alberta had been waiting for Turkey Red. The writer has a sample taken from the first car of seed brought in and a sample of the wheat raised from that seed on the second crop, and it is hard to realize that the two are the same variety of wheat. Not only are the berries large, and more uniform, but they have attained much of the flinty appearance so characteristic of Red Fyfe and not in appearance only, for Turkey Red grown in Alberta is nearly as hard again as Turkey Red grown in Kansas. And now comes the crux of the story.

While Turkey Red in Alberta has been forging ahead, giving large yields, increasing in density and in beauty of appearance, Turkey Red in Kansas has been growing steadily behind until that State is confronted with the necessity of getting seed from outside or going out of the wheat raising business. The eyes of the farmers of Kansas have turned to Alberta as a source for good seed, and one of the big commission houses of that State sought the assistance of the C.P.R. land department. The commissioner, Mr. Griffin, furnished them with an average sample, and this company has reported that in their opinion this is the very best seed that Kansas can procure. Of course the duty at the present time is prohibitive, but the farmers of Kansas are making a most strenuous effort to have Congress view this need for good and pure seed in the right light, and to have regulations that will permit of Kansas securing seed from Alberta to take the place of what has so completely run out.

A Wonderful Development.

Up to the present there has been inspected out of Alberta this year 2,271,610 bushels of winter wheat, and of this 1,526,000 was Alberta Red Winter. This development is certainly a great encouragement to the Alberta farmers to grow winter wheat. It not only opens a market for their wheat in Kansas if the duties can be adjusted, but it calls the attention of the milling world to the fact that Alberta can produce a winter wheat of superior milling quality.

In stock and wheat circles the week has been singularly barren of news. Great Britain is inclined to take a little wheat on our low spots, but outside of that she is shy. The weather has been too cold for cattle movement.

Retail and wholesale trade are moving quietly and indeed there is nothing very new in any line of trade.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, January 21, 1909.)

Business is active for the season. Country collections are in fairly satisfactory condition, sales are large for the month of January in spite of the cold weather which has hindered the movements of travelers, and the members of the grocery trade are in an optimistic mood.

Values are steady in nearly all lines, but there are one or two exceptions. Corn syrups have been reduced again owing to sharp competition. California raisins are weak. Broom corn is costing at least 50 per cent. more than formerly, and the result has been an advance in practically all makes of brooms. A recent advance of 25 cents per dozen is likely to be followed very soon by another advance of the same amount.

BRANTFORD MERCHANTS' TROUBLE.

A Brantford correspondent calls the attention of The Grocer's readers to what he believes to be a fradulent practice of an oil and soap traveler. He was supposed to represent a new United States firm and wanted to introduce his goods. Samples were to be given away from a quart to a gallon of oil. If satisfactory he would be around again in about four weeks to take orders. The merchants were to sign blank forms to show they wanted samples, but they now claim they signed order blanks for oil from 5 gallons up to a barrel. The goods came and the merchants accepted them in the belief that the firm was reliable. The days of trial expired and drafts were passed on them. Some have paid to avoid trouble, while others have refused. The prices are represented to be excessive.

Western Canada Notes

An Advance in Prices of Potatoes at the Coast on Account of Cold Weather—Bean Jar Contest at Saskatoon.

REGINA.

Jan. 19.—For the first time in our history the large demand for poultry for the Christmas trade was all supplied by the province itself, and this in spite of the fact that the sale of turkeys was nearly double that of last year. The only thing that had to be shipped in from outside the province was geese, of which there were not quite enough forthcoming in the local market. For chickens at the beginning of the season from 12c to 15c per lb. was the ruling price, but later the price dropped to from 10c to 13c, according to quality. Ducks about the same price and quality very good on the whole. Turkeys about 18c, supply plentiful; geese about the same, supply insufficient to meet the demand. The quality in all lines was very good on the whole and compared very favorably with what we have been shipping in from Ontario in past years, but there is still room for improvement. If farmers would keep pure bred poultry of the general utility breeds, it would, without doubt, be greatly to their advantage. At the season of the year when eggs are cheap they would be able, for some years to come, to sell a considerable number at remunerative prices for setting, and the difference in the size and quality of the chickens when they came to market them would well repay them. Great improvement might also be made in the construction of the poultry houses on most farms, and the slight additional cost would be more than repaid by getting eggs early in the winter when fresh eggs command top price. Regina has always been an excellent market for farm produce of all kinds. At the present time a farmer can get 35 cents a dozen and sometimes even forty cents for really fresh laid eggs that can be depended upon.

Butter is another article to the making of which farmers might well devote more careful attention. There is always a good demand here for butter of first-class quality and the supply frequently does not meet the demand. Price for first-class butter at the present time runs from 30 to 35c per pound. The quality of butter offered by farmers is not uniformly as good as it might be, and here again it seems that a great improvement might be made in the class of buildings erected. A first-class milk house is an essential for anyone who intends to make butter for the market and is not too frequently met with on the farm. The cellar is no place to keep milk either in summer or winter, and the cream is too often tainted before the butter is made up. There is a good opening here for a cold storage plant. The establishment of such a plant would facilitate the economical handling of all farm produce and guarantee a far more reliable market.

Cameron & Heap are just about completing stock-taking and report a thoroughly satisfactory season's business.

One or two brokers or commission agents would find it very profitable to establish here, and could look after the business of the province from this point.

W. B. Lanigan, assistant freight traffic manager, C.P.R., and Geo. H. Shaw, traffic manager Canadian Northern Railway, met the Board of Trade this week by appointment to discuss freight rates, more particularly fourth and fifth class. The wholesale houses were represented by H. G. Smith, of Campbell Bros. & Wilson S. C. Burton, of Cameron & Heap, and M. B. Peart, of the Western Hardware Co., while the retailers were represented by J. F. Bole, M.L.A., of the Regina Trading Co.,; E. McCarthy, of the McCarthy Supply Co. and Ald. A. D. Wright, besides several other members of the Council of the Board of Trade. The conference lasted practically all day and the result was an amicable settlement which was very fairly satisfactory to the shippers as a whole.

The wholesale houses here have always been in a position to look after the local L.C.L. business pretty well, but have been handicapped in the matter of carload shipments. Now, however, they will be in a position to extend their business very considerably in this direction and are looking forward to doing a very much larger volume of business this year in consequence.

H. G. Smith, manager for Campbell Bros. & Wilson, spent a week in Winnipeg, combining business with pleasure. He returned Jan. 4th in time to conduct the freight rates case before the railway officials, more especially on behalf of fifth-class shippers. This he did in an able manner, and he had certainly spared no pains to master all the intricate details of his case.

SASKATOON.

Jan. 19.—Now that the holiday business is over merchants are casting around for ways and means to attract customers to their stores. At the departmental stores bargain sales are announced in all departments previous to stocktaking. Goods must go at any price sooner than carry them over until next season. A reduction has been made in canned fruits and goods specially ordered for the Christmas trade and left in stock.

The bean jar contest held at Speers and Paul's store is now over. The winner of the prize horse was Iva Creed. Several other prizes were awarded.

R. G. Clare will rebuild his store at Warman, which was recently destroyed by fire.

R. F. Preston, butcher, announces that after January first he will do a strictly cash business only.

A case for exposing meat for sale which came from a slaughter house which did not comply with the city health by-law was heard in the police court a few days ago. Gordon and Sparling were the defendants. The case was dismissed on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to convict.

VANCOUVER.

January 19.—After a week of cold weather, we are beginning to see where we are at, and as a result the prices of all perishables have gone skyward with a bound. This is not a mere advance in price, but one of those increases that shock one almost as the miniature earthquake last Monday afternoon. Potatoes are principally affected. Ashcrofts were $21 before the cold snap, but have jumped to $35 per ton, while local potatoes are firm at $25, having risen from $15. The price may even go higher when reports come in from the country districts as to the effect of the cold. There they are kept in pits, and it is likely that all have been frozen. With the weather such as it has been, no shipments could be made, and with the six inches of snow that came on Wednesday communication is further hampered. Those who held potatoes thought they would be having surplus on their hands, and one of these, who disposed of a considerable stock just before the cold set in, lamented the fact to The Grocer. Had he only known (the usual refrain after a chance to make money) he could have sold at nearly double. But the cold was so unusual that no one expected it.

Local creamery butter has gone up from 40c to 45c. If it goes over 45c, there is a loud call from the consumer, and anything over that proves the last straw. It is not over plentiful even at the top notch.

The market is bare of eastern eggs, not practically bare, but completely. Some of the stores have absolutely none, and cannot get any. Surrounding cities are being communicated with in the hope that an odd dealer will be found who may have a few cases stocked away. They went up from 30c to 35c, and are now 45c, an unheard of price. Local eggs are as rare as the proverbial hen's teeth, and if a seller can persuade a grocer that he has a few he gets 65c for them.

In regard to eggs, a grocer remarked yesterday that a man came into his store and offered several cases of genuine freshly laid local eggs. The grocer was doubtful, but he was assured that the eggs were just as represented, but when he was told how many the man had, the dealer declared he wanted none, though he had none in the store and had demands. He informed the seller that there were not that many in the city, if all were gathered together. It is probable that some specially Eastern selecteds were secured, and advantage taken of the general scarcity to palm them off.

California celery and cauliflower arrived here this week, and are of good quality. The local celery has just disappeared and the market will be kept well supplied now with the stock from the south. Lettuce is grown locally, but that is about all this time of year.

William Peers, who conducted a grocery business in North Vancouver, has left with his family for Australia. The store has been taken over by T. Hutchison, the former proprietor.

The shipment of herring from Nanaimo is now in full swing. They are exported almost altogether to Japan, and it is estimated that 10,000 tons will be shipped this year. The herring fishery is next to coal mining, the principal industry at Nanaimo, which has the run perhaps exclusively among British Columbia cities.

MONTREAL.

January 19.—The Castle Blend Tea Co., corner of Stanley and St. Catherine St. W., are giving prominence this week to a fine range of earthenware tea and coffee pots, in the form of a window display. These goods are the products of the Langley Mills in England. They are chiefly remarkable for their simple and artistic forms, and deep green and brown coloring.

Nominations for the Board of Trade elections closed Friday, January 15, at 6 p.m. The chief event of interest was the eleventh hour nimination of Edgar Judge, for the second vice-presidency, in opposition to R. M. Ballantyne, who was placed in the field some days ago by W. I. Gear. Mr. Judge was nominated by R. W. Oliver. With this exception all the higher offices of the board will be uncontested. Sixteen members are in the running for the twelve seats on the council, and the contest has the appearance of being a sharp one, there being an active canvass already on behalf of the sixteen candidates. For the twelve seats on the Board of Arbitration, there are thirteen candidates.

Carsley's are making great preparation for their food fair, which begins the first of February.

The present Corn Exchange Committee of management, held its last regular meeting on Saturday afternoon, there being present R. W. Oliver, vice-president, in the chair ; C. B. Esdaile, W. W. Hutchison, J. S. Norris. The chief business of the meeting was the consideration of the committee's annual report, which was drafted for issuance to the members, who will consider same at the annual meeting of the Association, which this year falls on Wednesday, January 27th. R. W. Oliver reported with regard to the Montreal Industrial Exhibition Association meeting on December 10, which he had attened as the Corn Exchange representative. Mr. Plews was admitted to membership. By a unanimous vote, Norman Wight was nominated, as the representative of the Corn Exchange Association on the council of the Board of Trade.

When competition is so keen as it is at the present time, expenses must be keenly watched, otherwise drains soon extinguish profits. A prominent grocer who has a very fine cellar for storing goods, and which he has very brilliantly lighted in order to facilitate the clerk's work there, found that his electric light bills were running very high. The clerks would go down stairs, turning on all the lights as they descended, and in their hurry would not remember to turn them off as they came up. In this a great amount of electricity was wasted. Now he has a small 3-candle power bulb in the centre of the store which burns if a single light is turned on below. Instead of having all the lights turned on at the same time and at one switch, he has lamps with individual switches, and in this way the necessity for all the lights being turned on, when only one is required, is avoided.

J. L. Dore, of Ardmore, Que., has been in town for a few days. Mr. Dore has been placing orders with various wholesale houses for his spring trade.

A demonstration in tea is being made at Dupuis Freres store on St. Catherine St. E., this week.

ST. JOHN.

Jan. 19.—There was little change in the local wholesale markets last week and business in most lines is quiet. Manitoba flours are quoted at $6.60 to $6.70, and Ontarios at $5.45 to $5.70. Middlings is selling at $28 to $30, and bran at $25 to $26. Sugars are firm at $4.40 to $4.50 for Austrian granulated, $4.50 to $4.60 for standard, and $4.00 to $4.40 for yellows. Eggs are selling at 27 to 40 cents a dozen and butter is quoted wholesale at 23 to 28 cents.

A. I. Megarity's grocery store on Brussels street, was broken into on Sunday night, Jan. 10th, and a quantity of goods stolen. The thieves were apparently frightened away while at work as a large quantity of goods was found piled in readiness for removal near a window that had been broken.

A statement of the value of exports from St. John in the winterport steamers up to January 15th, shows that twenty-nine steamers took away goods valued at $5,537,927, of which $3,768,453 was the product of Canadian manufacturers, and $1,769,474 was from the United States. The value of goods shipped in the same number of steamers last season was $4,912,090, showing an increase for the present season of $625,837. The amount of grain shipped in these steamers was 1,535,694 bushels and there were 7,052 head of cattle.

The railway commission will be in St. John this week to hear complaints against excessive express charges on lobsters shipped from Port Mulgrave, N.S., to Boston via St. John.

The Fishermen's Union at Rexton last week elected the following officers : Edgar Atkinson, president ; Chas. Palmer, vice-president ; Capt. Geo. Irving, sec.-treas ; Percy Kinread, sergeant-at-arms, and James Jardine, auditor.

John K. McDonald, of Whycocomagh, C.B., a well know merchant was married on January 12th to Miss Janet Irene McNeill, of Charlottetown, P.E.I.

Robert Emmett Hughes, grocer, of Charlottetown, P.E.I., dropped dead in his home on Tuesday, January 12th. The coroner's jury found death due to paralysis of the heart. He was about 30 years of age.

Henry G. Weeks, manager of the local branch of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, has purchased the residence on Douglas Avenue, owned and occupied by Hon. James Holly. Mr. Weeks will occupy his new home in the summer.

Fred Magee, C. Rufus Aulton, Courtney B. Copp and Thomas J. Allen, of Port Elgin and Brougham F. Wells, of Baie Verte, are applying to the provincial government for incorporation as the Port Elgin Trading Co., with a capital of $20,000. The chief place of business is to be Port Elgin and the company proposes to carry on a general wholesale and retail trading business. The provisional directors are : Fred. Magee, C. Rufus Aulton and Brougham F. Wells.

William Sproul, merchant, of Campbellton, has made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors to James E. Stewart, sheriff, Dalhousie.

A commercial bowling league has been formed here in which there are fourteen teams of five men each, selected from various business establishments in the city. In a game on Wednesday, the 13th, the Grocers and Clerks met and the latter won by a score of 1294 to 1170.

HALIFAX.

January 19.—Dealers report some improvement in business since the holiday season, but as yet it is very slight. Fruit is in good demand and apples are bringing high prices. There has been an advance of fifty cents per barrel in the price of cranberries, which are now quoted at six dollars per barrel. Jamacia oranges are also higher and are now quoted at $5.00 to $6.00, an increase of fifty cents per barrel over the prices of last week. Lemons are quoted at $3.00 for 300 count, and $5.50 for 420 count. The sharp advance in the price of apples is attributed to the scarcity of first class fruit, very little of which is now offered for sale on the local market. There are no No. 1 spies or kings available, and No. 2 fruit of the latter variety is very scarce. All the good fruit is said to be in the hands of the speculators, who are holding it back for fancy prices. The speculators are said to be making big money handling apples this season, which have met a good market and netted good returns. A wholesale dealer states that one lot of five hundred barrels, which were bought on the trees for $1.25 per barrel, sold for $4.00 per barrel. Mrs. P. C. Woodworth, of Elmsdale, Port Williams, has received some handsome prices for good fruit sent to the London market. A barrel of Cox's Orange Pippins sold for 60s. and a box of the same variety sold for 25s, or at the rate of 75s per barrel.

A proposal to establish a fish curing and cold storage plant was before a special meeting of the council of Dartmouth, N.S., this week. Robert Christie, of R. Christie & Son, of Aberdeen, Scotland, appeared before the council and outlined the scheme. A representative of the company had been sent out to Canada to look over conditions, and if they were found favorable, a plant might be established. The firms representative had spent some time in Dartmouth, and while there had secured an option on a waterfront property near the railway station, which would be a desirable site for such an enterprise. If the plant was established Mr. Christie would engage in the fish curing business in all its branches, from the catching of the fish to the packing and shipping.

When the project was started he proposed to bring out experienced hands from Scotland, but in time would engage Dartmouth people. He also proposed to bring out his own steam travelers with which to carry on the fishing operations. The firm would invest about $50,000 in the business for total exemption from taxation for a period of five years, and exemption from all improvements for the next ten years, and free water up to a certain quantity. Mr. Christie stated that if a success of the business is made in Dartmouth, there was a possibility of other firms in Scotland transferring their business to this side of the Atlantic. The matter was referred to a committee for consideration. The Council looks with favor on the proposition.

The report on pepper adulteration which is just issued shows that out of ten samples of white pepper secured from stores in Halifax, every one of the samples was genuine white pepper, while in Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick, several of the samples are reported as "adultered" or "doubtful." In the report of black pepper, the laboratory report shows that nine samples out of ten were genuine, while the other sample was found to be adulterated, it having been forwarded in the original package on which the word "mixture" appeared in small letters over the word "pepper." This sample was obtained in a Halifax store, which obtains its pepper from an upper Canadian firm.

GEORGETOWN, P. E. I.

January 19.—Owing to the poor condition of the roads, there being no snow, trade has been slow this week. Collections are fair for this season of the year, and the wholesale houses report an average amount of business.

James Kelley & Co., Charlottetown, are making a specialty of Island Flour —price 65c per sack of 25 lbs.

Sanderson & Co., Charlottetown, and W. A. Johnstone, Montague, are using considerable space in the local papers at present. The former firm is advertising weekly snaps.

Prosperity has marked the past year in Prince Edward Island, and the farmers can view the results of their labors with complacency, for the prices, although not so good as in 1907, were on the whole satisfactory. Not for many years has the weather in the first three seasons been so favorable for growth and ripening.

Four hundred thousand tons of hay of which 2,000 were exported, an average yield of wheat, about 5,000,000 bushels of oats, 6,500,000 bushels of potatoes, of which 200,000 were exported and a large percentage manufactured into starch; 4,000,000 bushels of turnips, an average crop of fruit, 1,200 tons of cheese, 250 tons of butter; representing the annual dairy output; the former valued at $280,000, and the latter at $135,000; about 45,000 hogs an increase in the poultry production and the number of cattle raised were among the factors tending to make the farmers of 1908 satisfied with their lot and their farms in the garden province of Canada.

The fishing industry was exceptionally remunerative, there being 50,000 cases of lobsters at an average price of $16.00 per case; 100,000 barrels of oysters, bringing from $3.00 to $9.00 per barrel, and a good catch of cod, herring, smelts and eels. Bankers, merchants and traders have pronounced satisfaction on the past year's transactions. Collections have been comparatively easy and there has been a satisfactory amount of money in circulation.

Large quantities of smelts and eels are being exported to New York and Boston. The prices this year are not as high as formerly. A considerable quantity of oats are shipped daily to Halifax, Sydney and other near-by cities.

As expected butter and eggs are both dropping in price. Both commodities are being bought in the country districts for 20c.

Valencia Oranges are plentiful. No. 1 apples are scarce and very high. Almeria grapes are an average price and in splendid demand.

KINGSTON.

January 20.—Kingston has had the misfortune this winter of losing two of its important industries by fire. Fire is a good servant but a bad master. Our fire department has been called to account for bad management for not getting at these fires promptly and putting them out. In defence they claim inefficient equipment and of being unable to attack the flames from the inside owing to the inflammable nature of the stock, viz.: varnishes, dried lumber in the piano factory and broom corn in the broom factory. George Crawford, an old grocer who less than a year ago took over the broom factory, is a heavy loser, having a large stock of broom corn on hand, which has recently gone up in price.

MAYOR DANIEL COOPER,

Of Kingston, Elected to the Chief Magistrate's Chair by the Largest Vote in the City's History.

In all my experience I have only run across one grocer, and that lately, who can collect bad debts. His plan is to go personally and warn his victim that unless he or she pay up he will follow them on the street or around the market and shout at them. The first illustration occurred on the market not long ago. He went up to a lady and said, "Now my good woman, I am going to follow you around and shout at you." Out came a dollar bill and in begging tones, "please don't, I'll pay you up, I'll pay you up."

The petition being handed around for the reduction of licenses is being largely signed. The first class hotels which give good service to the traveling public are not anxious for the class who frequent the saloons.

Weather has been severe here, as low as 16 below zero having been registered. Only a few sleighs appeared on the market on Saturday. Fresh laid eggs sold as low as 30c a doz., but the majority got 40c. People find telephones useful during stormy and cold weather.

Kingston never goes back. It has a forward movement at all times. "There is more curling, skating, ice-boating and winter sports to the square foot here than any city I know of," said a commercial man, and he is right.

Dan Couper, Mayor, is a busy man, and he is ready to put on the gloves if he hears of any knockers who are always ready to run down their own city and country. We will likely have a big grocers' picnic this year as we have a grocer as chief magistrate.

Lake Ontario is frozen over at last and now the Islanders can come over in safety and bring their butter and eggs.

Advertising in the local papers is about the best way of telling the public who you are and what you have in stock, but it is responsible for a lot of cutting in prices. We have meat stores selling four cans of corn for 25c, and candy shops selling our staples at cost in order to attract people to their stores.

Circulars asking prices from merchants, regardless of politics, have been issued from our military institutions here under the Dominion Government. "What's up anyway," Ontario institutions did the same last month but did not give any contracts to us poor Grit grocers.

Apples were a poor purchase this winter as they didn't keep well.

Kingston Dairy School is in full blast, 40 students being in attendance studying the art of making butter and cheese. Mr. Publow is acting superintendent.

PETERBORO.

January 20.—An auction sale of 1,000 boxes of fine grade raisins, which arrived too late for the Christmas trade, will be held on January 25th. They have been held at one of the freight offices since the date of their arrival which was too late for sale to the retailers.

Not a few groceries are now handling oysters, that is, outside the large uptown stores that regularly carry this stock on hand. One reason for the increase is that each store has a newly prepared vessel for containing the oysters. They come in sealed crocks and are then placed in these white enamelled or crockware tubs, which are impressively suggestive of cleanliness and care in handling them. Quite a number of the grocers have recently secured these vessels and they state that they find the sales very encouraging.

The farmers' market has apparently been effected by the cold weather of late. The best eggs sold at 35 cents a dozen although there were others that were offered at 30 and 32 cents.

W. J. Coleman, of the firm of Coleman Bros., caterers and confectioners, left last week for England. He is combining business with pleasure intending to get latest ideas in his line of business in the English cities and also in New York on his return journey.

One of our grocers, Jas. H. Connel, made a good showing in the recent curling games at the Peterboro bonspiel. He is also in one of the rinks that are playing with Bobcaygeon for a new trophy that has been presented by A. E. Bottum of Bobcaygeon and J. E. A. Fitzgerald of this city. Peterboro has secured a lead of four points.

T. H. Hooper, caterer and confectioner, has decided to enlarge his up town store, increasing the accommodation of his grill room and providing a larger banquetting hall.

The Retail Merchants had a quiet little supper last Wednesday night at Hooper's. They intend to have another on a larger scale in the near future.

Peterboro grocers are showing their progressiveness by holding demonstrations of particular articles in their stores, the work being attended to by special demonstrators. Recently White & Gillespie demonstrated Cowan's cocoa. Another shredded wheat banquet has been held, too, under the auspices of the Murray Street Baptist church, the demonstration being attended to by J. Hewitt.

OTTAWA.

Jan. 20.—A good attendance of buyers and sellers were out in a temperature of 21 degrees below zero on the Ottawa market on Saturday. It was one of the coldest mornings of the year. Everything was cold and in fact a frozen beef tongue would have been as valuable a weapon of defence if necessary, as if it had been made of steel. Another anxious phenomenon which is generally accounted for by the farmers as a result of the zero weather was that chicken prices had gone as high as the temperature was low, and reached a record price for the year. It may have been that the farmers think cold mornings should command high prices. Fowl of all kinds were however up. Chickens sold as high as $4.00 pair, but most sales were made around $1.50 a pair. Beef was valued at 4½ to 5c for fronts, and from 6c to 7c for hinds. Pork at from $10 to $10.50 and lamb 10c to 12c. Turkeys were an absent class, while geese—well there were just a few. Prices for butter were 28c to 30c for good quality and it is not likely to drop for the next two or three weeks. Potatoes were sold around $1.00 a bag, and new laid eggs were rapidly picked up at 55c per doz.

Ottawa will be quite gay this week and expects thousands of visitors from all parts, especially those people who love the horse. The chief attraction will be the big ice races which will be held all this week on the Ottawa river. Merchants reap a harvest from these money spending people—the horse men—and look forward to this great yearly event. Two retail grocers are responsible for this big meet, namely P. H. Wall of Wall & Co., who is president, and Ald. Walter Cunningham, who holds the office of vice-president. Both named gentlemen have been connected with the Central Canada racing association for a great number of years.

The fat stock and horse show promise to be attractive features for this week. Grocers and butchers attend the auction sale at the conclusion of the show—when all dressed beef and poultry are auctioned off.

E. M. Trowern, Dominion Secretary of the Retail Merchants Association, was in town last week on behalf of the Retail Coal Dealers' Association, who ask for a series of regulations respecting the receiving of coal from railways, its weighing, monthly statements, and shortages, etc., in fact a code of rules governing many points of frequent dispute. The case was heard by the Railway Commission, who have reserved judgment.

H. H. Livingstone, with the new firm of Mayell & Co., Toronto is in the city, calling on the trade. It seems funny not to connect this gentleman with Pure Gold Goods. The change was effected the 1st of the year.

Arthur Carson, formerly with Lipton, now with Sheriffs Imperial Extract Co., is renewing old acquaintances in this city.

W. G. H. Marcon, representing the N. K. Fairbank Company, Montreal, is at present in the city.

Chas. E. Bucklee, of Park Blackwell Co., Limited, has spent this week in the Capital in the interests of his firm.

FORT WILLIAM.

January 20.—The scarcity of apples is beginning to be felt, some of the best varieties being already out of stock, and the prices ranging from $4.75 to $5.50 to the retail purchaser.

For the protection of the retailer from the "deadbeat," who goes from store to store and stays with each only so long as he can get farther and farther into its books, a new organization has been formed in the city under the name of the Retailers' Information Bureau. It is somewhat of the nature of a local Bradstreet, dealing with the customers, instead of the merchants. The fee to each retailer is $10 per year, in return for which he has the privilege of referring to the Bureau for information regarding any parties who may be seeking to secure a line of credit with him. This will particularly affect the grocery trade and if worked out successfully will result in any man who has once got into the books of a retail store and not met his obligations, being compelled to pay his bills or deal for cash wherever he may go in the city. This Bureau, which is only local, dealing solely with this city, is in connection with the collection office that has already been doing business as the Sovereign Accounting Agency.

CHATHAM.

January 19.—The new City Council held its organization meeting this morning, when the committee slate was adopted. The three grocer members—comprising one-third of the total membership of the Council—are well distributed. John McCorvie is on the Finance and Industrial Committee; Wm. Anderson on Finance and Property, and Harry A. Andrew on Parks and Railways. Two hold chairmanships, Ald. McCorvie that of the Industrial Committee, and Ald. Andrew that of the Railway Committee.

There is every likelihood that, despite the defeat of F. H. Brisco, the chief advocate of excluding the grocers from the market, the question of the 10 o'clock clause in the market by-law will be reopened and again threshed out by this year's Council. Mayor Westman's inaugural address contains a recommendation to the Property Committee to consider "the framing of a new by-law protecting the rights of the citizens on the market, by restricting the wholesalers to certain hours." Just what the outcome of the struggle will be, is uncertain. The general public, if they suffer at all, suffer more, it seems, through buying by wholesalers for shipment than through buying by grocers for retail, and it is probable that an effort will be made to ascertain the true status of the wholesalers on the market. At present the general impression is that they cannot legally be restricted.

The possibilities of Chatham as a location for pork packing, beet sugar and canning industries was also emphasized by Mayor Westman in his address. Chatham's chief advantage in this respect lies in the presence of an abundant supply of the raw material right at the city's doors.

The consensus of opinion among the grocer aldermen is that the new Council will probably grant some measure of restriction on the market, as against buyers for wholesale and retail. A majority of the members of the new Council have committed themselves to a restoration of the ten o'clock clause against grocers and butchers. It is freely admitted that despite the defeat of several strong advocates of the 10 o'clock provision, there is a strong public feeling in favor of closing the market to all but the general public. The matter is likely to be the theme of warm discussion. Much depends on whether or not wholesale buyers can be excluded. If they cannot, it hardly seems fair to exclude local retailers, thus discriminating against local men in favor of outsiders. If the restriction is restored, the grocers with the smaller stores on the side streets will be the men hardest hit. The bigger grocers never need to go near the market, having their regular clientele of country people who bring them produce; but the little fellows, who have little if any country patrons of this sort, will be hurt by the discrimination.

The agitation against the present open market has been much strengthened by recent high prices of produce, and particularly by the scarcity of turkeys and other poultry. It is generally believed that the wholesale buyers raid the market first thing in the morning and carry off the poultry before the general public arrive. The fact is, however, that there have been practically no turkeys, as compared with former years; and the few that were to be had would have lost money to the buyers, as the latter could not have afforded to purchase turkeys at 25c a pound. As a matter of fact, higher prices are due, partly to general scarcity, and partly also to the improved facilities the wholesalers have for buying direct from the farms.

Business is holding up very well, and not a few grocers state that they miss the annual rest due to arrive with the after-holiday lull in business.

Butter and egg prices continue high. Grocers state that deliveries are prety free, though offerings on the general market are small. Prices will depend largely on whether or not the cold weather continues. If there is a protracted spell of warm weather, egg prices are bound to drop.

The long promised free mail delivery system was inaugurated in Chatham on Wednesday of last week. The city has been divided into seven routes, and there are three deliveries daily to the business sections, two to thickly populated, and one to thinly populated residential sections.

P. B. McQueen, manager of Bradley & Son's local store, has inaugurated a system of order taking in connection with the business here, and during the past week or so has been energetically campaigning for new patrons in outlying districts, with the result that he has added a large number of names to the firm's regular order-taking route. Mr. McQueen is an old hand at order taking, having had considerable experience in that line elsewhere, though the system is an innovation in connection with the local business.

Russell Parrott, for the past three years connected with the grocery staff of his brother, Wesley E. Parrott, left last week for New Mexico, where he will spend a three months' holiday.

William A. Dumas, who a quarter of a century ago conducted a grocery at the corner of King and Forsyth Streets, passed away last week, aged 72. He was a veteran of the American Civil War, and was at one time very prominent in Chatham's business life.

High hog prices were a feature of last Saturday's market, live hogs selling at $6.50 and dressed at $8.25 per cwt., with the market strong. Export cattle commanded 5c a pound, store cattle 3c and 4c, with a good demand, and dressed beef from 5c to 7c. Veal, lamb and poultry prices were high. Butter sold from 25c to 28c, and eggs from 28c to 30c, this being the first indication this winter of a decline in egg prices. Bean prices are practically unchanged, ranging from $1.35 to $1.50 a bushel. Potatoes are $1 a bag.

The stock of R. I. Weaver, the St. Clair St. grocer-butcher, who recently assigned to W. G. Burrows, was sold by public auction on Monday last. The grocery stock was sold to Mr. Broderick of London, at 41c, and the butcher stock to Chas. Thomson at 32c. The premises are already leased to W. H. Curran, who intends to open a meat shop; and to the fact that the stock had to be moved, the low prices were largely due. The stock is now being sold off at slaughter prices—a temporary detriment to the grocers of the vicinity, though with the elimination of one competing grocery from St. Clair street, life there will be more worth living to the remaining grocers. Mr. Weaver's future intentions are unknown.

Last Tuesday evening there was a well attended meeting of the Board of Trade, when it was decided to invite Hon. Wm. Pugsley to visit Chatham, with a view to impressing upon him the necessity of the proposed dredging of the river. Insurance rates, and a number of other items of interest were also discussed.

C. E. Lister, proprietor of the Maple City Creamery, was in Brantford last week, attending the Butter and Cheese Makers convention.

The grocery of H. G. Reed, King St., was visited by a slight blaze last Thursday morning, though little damage was done.

J. A. Wilson, the Queen St. grocer, has been reappointed to the board of West Kent License Commissioners. This is Mr. Wilson's fourth year.

In consequence of the discovery of large deposits of almost pure silica near Amhersburg in Essex county, a glass factory will shortly be erected at Leamington, for the manufacture of bottles and jars. The new concern will, it is understood, supply the new Heinz factory in Leamington, and abundance of natural gas at that town proving an added incentive. Whether the new concern will enter into the manufacture of fruit sealers is uncertain as yet.

The Heinz Pickling Company are arranging to send men to Leamington shortly to make contracts for the growth of vegetables and fruits, and in the spring will erect several buildings in addition to the factory purchased for them by the town.

H. H. Shaver and W. W. Jackson, of the Tilbury Canning Company, were in Toronto recently attending the independent canners' convention.

E. J. Buzzard, of Blenheim, has sold his general store at Erieau to Lorne Handy, formerly of J. W. Fleming & Sons. The new proprietor takes possession Feb. 1.

John Curtis has opened a new butcher shop at Wheatley.

J. H. Allen of Wheatley has made final arrangements for building a creamery at Comber. The new concern will be in operation next spring.

The growth of the onion industry in Essex has called into existence the Leamington Onion Growers' and Shippers' Association. John A. Campbell is president, and John C. Ross, secretary. The session was devoted to an interchange of experiences and ideas on onion growing.

Redmond Coleman, the Virginia tobacco expert, who during the past two years has been engaged in preparing tobacco for shipment to the Erie Tobacco Co., is once more back at his old post. Mr. Coleman has several "steaming houses" at Ruthven.

Commencing January 21, all the stores in Ridgetown closed at 6 p.m. every evening, except Saturdays. This is a marked advance for the early closing movement.

Albert Gunning, the Ruthven general merchant, on January 6, joined the ranks of the benedicts, being united in marriage to Miss Marilla Esseltine, of Ruthven.

Jehiel Walker, formerly a grocer at Charlemont, recently lost his only son, Corey, 17 years of age, by drowning at Tupperville.

C. G. Elliott, of Comber, contemplates purchasing the premises, owned by R. O. Y. Ainslie, which he now occupies, and has secured an option.

S. G. Morse, of Leamington, is in receipt of a letter from the Heinz Pickling Company, stating that just as soon as the town completes arrangements for turning over the Ward building to them, they will be prepared to begin work. They intend making Leamington headquarters for the whole of Canada.

The Wallaceburg Sugar Company, following the completion of the beet sugar campaign, will commence work on refining raw sugar about the middle of January, and expect to continue along this line pretty steadily till the opening of next fall's beet campaign.

Wallaceburg's new creamery is under way. The proprietors, Geo. Wooliver and Geo. Wales, have commenced the erection of a new and up-to-date building on Lafontaine Street, and expect to have everything in shape to commence operations in February.

Tobacco growers in Essex County are busily engaged in stripping the 1908 crop and preparing it for shipment. Quite a number have completed shipping and are ready to bale the product. The sample is fine this year, and the growers are looking for correspondingly good prices.

As showing the extent of poultry business in some small country places, Wm. Bird & Son, of Ennett, a small station on the Pere Marquette, bought during the fall season, 31,560 pounds of poultry, for which $3,120 was paid out.

George Mahler, of Chatham, and Harry Mahler, of Dresden, have gone into partnership with John Tolmie, formerly of Tolmie & Graham, in the basket business at Dresden, and have secured the Hicks block for factory purposes. The Mahler family are largely interested in the evaporated business in this county.

LONDON.

January 20.—Wholesalers report business to be on the upward incline, and they regard the prospects to be of the best. Travelers find dealers in this section more free in giving orders than for some time, which is a pretty good sign of returning confidence. Prices of Ceylon and Indian teas are higher, and coffees are also advancing. Raw sugars keep very high and refined is steady and firm. Spices and tapioca are advancing and rice for spring shipment is easy. Seeded raisins are lower, but an advance is looked for. Other staples show little change.

Mrs. Blasshell, grocer, corner of Bathurst and Talbot, has sold out to W. T. McBride.

A meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association was held on the evening of Wednesday of last week, President Shaw, in the chair. The most important matter taken up was the annual banquet, and a committee composed of President Shaw, Secretary Hayes and Treasurer Ryan, was named to get estimates and report back to the Executive who have power to act. R. J. Donaghy, of T. A. Rowat & Co., was elected chairman of the Reception Committee. He did good work last year in the same office. Several committees brought in satisfactory reports.

The grocers' banquet will in all probability be held on some evening during the third week of February, at either the City Hotel or the Grigg House.

STRATFORD.

January 19.—Since the passing of Christmas and New Years business has naturally been quiet and the grocers here are taking advantage of this slow time to re-arrange their stocks so as to sell off the left-overs before stock-taking. Most of the window displays have been changed, making the holiday season a thing of the past.

The municipal elections made a lively time for Stratford this year. We had five aspirants for Mayor and sixteen for aldermen; these with water commissioners, school trustees and four by-laws to vote on made a very full slate. Upon entering most stores previous to the election the first words of greeting were "Whom will we have for Mayor?" Well, we are sorry to say that we got an editor instead of a grocer, although the editor will fill the office with dignity and ability. Mr. McIlhargey made a good fight, and to use the oft repeated expression, we would say, "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

At last something definite in the way of a radial railway for the city has been brought to our notice, under the name of "The People's Railway." The grocers and merchants in general are quite jubilant over the new proposition, as it will bring more business from the surrounding country. It is expected that the line between Guelph, Stratford and Woodstock will be built this year, and that by December the city of Stratford will be enjoying the advantages of a city street car service. The radial line will handle both passengers and freight, the latter being handled almost wholly at night.

I. W. Steinhoff attended the annual meeting of Swift & Co., in Chicago, on Thursday, as the manager of the Canadian branch of the produce department, which has its office in the Beacon building. Mr. Steinhoff reports a drop of ten millions from the volume of trade during 1907, but an increase of the profits.

Geo. McCully has taken a position on the traveling staff of Jas. Lloyd, wholesale fruit merchant. Goderich, Kincardine and the northern district is the ground Mr. McCully is covering at present, and he reports good business for his first trip.

Mr. McLeod, of the McLeod Milling Co., is showing something new in the line of advertising this week. He has a few sample cakes of toilet soap through each of which is printed an advertisement in colored letters, telling the virtues of a special brand of flour. In using this sample of soap the user will read the advertisement as long as the soap lasts.

Max Brisson, who has been for the past year with the E. O'Flaherty, grocer, relinquishes his position with that firm to enter the priesthood. Mr. Kastner, formerly with R. S. Jones, has succeeded him.

Monday must have been travelers' day in the city this week. One grocer reports having been visited by fourteen.

The Stratford Wholesale Grocery have just completed stock-taking this week and report very favorable business for last year.

The Mooney Biscuit and Candy Co. have sent a communication to the Mayor of our city stating that they are prepared to supply the city relief officer or any other body of citizens organized for the purpose of relieving the distress of those in need with two barrels of biscuits per week, from now until the time that the requirements may cease.

BARRIE.

Jan. 20.—Mr. Quigley, for The H. P. Eckhart & Co., made his initial trip last week to Barrie, and he reported business very good for this time of year.

Barrie is to have another commercial traveler residing here. Mr. Taylor, formerly with the Western Canada Milling Company, and now with the Collingwood Packing Company, has decided to locate in this town.

This week shows the first weakness in the egg market and the strictly new laid eggs that have been selling retail for 35c a dozen down to 32c, took a drop to 30c and even as low as 28c a dozen was the price paid this week.

At the inaugural meeting last week of the town's new council, Mayor Vair explained that to get the best results and service from our civic bodies, it was necessary that all should work in harmony. To that end, he had taken the liberty of inviting the Press, the Ministers and all the ex-mayors. The mayor thanked the press for their services in the past and hoped he would have their support in the future criticizing the public questions fearlessly and give their strong opinion. This would greatly assist the Council and at the same time serve to enlighten the people. Another of Barrie's old grocery men in the person of J. J. Brown, past president of the Board of Trade, and chairman of its Transportation Committee, followed. He said there had been a great depression in manufacturing, and this had accounted for the stagnation of trade. We had however got to the bottom, and things were now looking up. He hoped the Council and Board of Trade would have plent to do this year. The Trent Valley Canal matter was still undecided, but whichever way it went the canal would have a tendency to control freight rates, more especially in regards to coal transportation. The Grand Trunk Railway would make great improvements during the coming summer.

Poultry was very scarce on last week's market, as high as fifteen cents a pound being paid for chickens. Turkeys also took a jump and sold at from 18c to 20c a lb. Geese sold at 12 and 12½c a pound and old fowl at 10c. Butter remains the same price, 25c a pound.

BELLEVILLE.

January 20.—Both the wholesale and retail grocers are well satisfied with the volume of business since the rush of the Christmas trade and they are very optimistic for a bright prospect in the future. Owing to the extremely mild weather work has been much more plentiful and as a result money is more plentiful. There has been no call for relief so far this winter beyond a few families who arrived last summer from the Old Country, and these are being looked after by the W.C.A., who get a grant of $1,200 per year from the council.

Much interest was taken in the recent civic elections here, there being no less than four grocers among the seventeen candidates, two of these four being elected, namely Ald. A. G. Vermilvea and Ald. H. E. Fairfield, the latter a new man, but he succeeded in heading the list for aldermanic honors. Mr. Fairfield recently purchased the grocery business of the late Adam Henry, and his well-known ability as a business man will come in handy in his civic duties. J. W. Harker, one of the first subscribers to The Canadian Grocer, was defeated by a narrow majority of eleven votes. W. H. Panter, one of the best known grocers in this city and for the past thirteen years had been a valuable member of the city council, was defeated by L. W. Marsh by 185 majority, after a very exciting contest.

Market prices here have been breaking the record this winter in butter, eggs and poultry. Butter from 25c to 30c; strictly fresh eggs 35c to 40c, and scarce at that; potatoes are plentiful at 75c to 80c per bag.

TRADE

MARK

It is rumored that it is the determination of the Canadian Canners Co., Ltd., to cut off work in the Picton canning shops in connection with the canning factories and in the future all cans will be made at the chief shop in Hamilton. This matter, it is understood, will come up for a "threshing out" at the annual meeting soon to be held in Hamilton. The settling of the matter and the answer at the annual meeting is anxiously being looked for by many workmen in this district whose work during the winter months depends on this employment. There are two canning factories in Picton, one at the Little Chief factory, and the other at the Lion Brand, and these two employ 50 or more men and boys, and if the Canadian Canners Co. decide to make all the cans at Hamilton in the future, these men and boys will be thrown out of work at a very bad season of the year.

The local grocers have been making a big run on canned corn, peas and tomatoes during the last couple of weeks, and are advertising three of any variety for 25c. This does not look as if there was very much of a scarcity in canned goods.

GEO. L. LAMOTHE,
Re-Elected Mayor of Mattawa, Ont.

Local grocers feel the benefit of the re-starting of the Rolling Mills, when last week 100 extra men were put on and these mills are expected to continue in full blast.

"Co-operation" was the theme that brought some 200 farmers to Picton on Saturday last, with the mercury at 10 below zero, and kept them interested in the town hall, whose interior temperature was keeping even with Jack Frost out of doors. Mr. Macdonald, of Glasgow, Scotland, an erstwhile Torontonian, was the speaker, and he told of the workings of co-operative concerns in England and Scotland, where the people are said to benefit by the purchase of needful commodities of life in bulk. It was pointed out that not only could people buy, but that farmers could sell their produce to advantage under this system, and being members they came in for declared dividends. He urged that the movement be taken up locally, and over 180 rose to their feet to signify favor with the scheme. He said a co-operative store would be started in Picton if 150 $5 shares were subscribed. This amount, however, was not reached, for when he stepped down in the audience to get signatures there was the customary rural reluctance to put up the wherewithal.

PAISLEY.

January 18.—R. B. Putman, who has for many years conducted a general store here, was burned out on Tuesday, Dec. 29th. He is at present conducting a fire sale in the adjoining store.

W. Hern is removing his stock of dry goods and general groceries from Lyon's Head, where he has been in business for some time, to Southampton, where he is putting in a large general stock. He is occupying the premises of Mr. Eby at the upper end of the town.

PERTH.

January 18.—The arrival of two carloads of New Brunswick potatoes last week relieved a want in that line. Although about 3,500 bushels of these were brought in last fall the supply for sale was about exhausted, and one firm had commenced to import a few bags by express.

The Perth Creamery Company discontinued operations last week after a fairly successful season. Since starting November 1 they manufactured about 2,500 lbs. of butter weekly. Price to dealers has been 27c.

Local dealers are paying 25c for dairy butter. Eggs, strictly fresh, are being retailed at 30c, but the supply is far from sufficient to meet the demand.

GUELPH.

January 20.—Mr. R. D. Doyle has started a grocery store on Paisley St., with an entire new stock, in the stand formerly occupied by E. Lehman. Mr. Lehman has moved his stock out and has also purchased the stock of Mrs. J. R. Robinson, on Fergus Street. He also bought the house and store from Mrs. Robinson.

The Clerks and Salesmen's Association are sorry to lose their vice president, Mr. Best, who is about to remove from the city. He was one of the greatest workers from the origin of the association. There is some talk of a banquet to be held before he leaves.

I noticed a grocer busy recently shining a lot of apples for his window and asked him what he was using and he said just olive oil. It made quite an improvement in the looks of the apples.

Guelph has her share of peddlers from house to house, and they carry all kinds of lines, tea being the principal. There are about ten different tea peddlers and all seem to do quite a business. It is almost a wonder that the grocery stores ever sell a pound of tea at all. In some houses they have from one to six months' tea and coffee ahead. Long before they run out another supply is left and in some cases the people say "We do not want it," but at the same time it is left and generally used. Baking powder, spices, etc., are also handled by some, but in the majority of cases tea and coffee is what they try to sell. Some housekeepers will tell you some funny stories of the time they have trying to get out of using the tea. Others buy from sympathy. Again some say that the fact of these men giving up all other lines and being direct importers, etc., of their tea, that it is better than what is kept in a grocery store, which is subject to all kinds of abuse, such as being exposed to coal oil, etc., a very bad argument to be used against some of the grocery stores. Grocers very often are quite satisfied to sell a good customer half a pound of tea when it would be just as easy to sell from five to ten pounds and get the money. There are hundreds of pounds of tea sold here every year by men who never had any practical experience, but who are good talkers. Some of the peddlers will offer a hundred pounds of granulated sugar to a good paying customer at regular wholesale price just to get the tea order. Then he buys the sugar from a grocer or wholesaler and hands it over at cost. There are other ideas they work from time to time which helps their sales. In fact they have always something on the go while the grocer keeps on the same old way year in year out and making no special effort to hold his own.

F. O. CREED,
Who Has Left to Represent the F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, in France, Germany and Spain.

The Primeau grocery business, which has for the past few years been run by A. Primeau and L. Primeau, father and son, Lindsay, was sold out last week by the former to Adams Bros., but was again bought back by L. Primeau, who will in the future carry on the grocery business in the old stand.

Every Merchant Can Advertise Without Cost

Customers pleased with their tea will talk favorably of your store. That is the very best kind of advertising. You can please more customers with Red Rose than with any other tea.

You know that the most interesting development in the Canadian tea trade in ten years has been the increased sales of Red Rose Tea.

Advertising has helped, salesmanship has helped, but the real reason has been its remarkable quality.

Recommend Red Rose Tea and your customers will recommend your store.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Jan. 21, 1909.

The export cheese business has increased wonderfully during the week, The English buyers were not able to ignore the Canadian market as long as they anticipated. Some time ago, when they were rather independent of the Canadian market, they intimated that Canadian prices would have to climb down considerably before they would be attractive to them. This, however, does not seem to be the case, and they have displayed decided anxiety, in accepting terms which are higher, rather than lower, contrary to their expectations.

Cables are being received from Bristol, Glasgow and London, as well as from Liverpool, enquiring for Canadian stock, and Canadian prices have proved attractive enough to lead to considerable trade.

The despondent state of the English market has totally disappeared, and instead there is a buoyant feeling in all quarters. Locally there is an increasing conviction that stocks are much smaller than were held last year at this time. Receipts since May 1 up to Jan. 16 were 1956,526 boxes, against 2,053,407 boxes for the corresponding period of last year. Quotations are steady at 12⅜c to 12¾c for Westerns and 11½c to 11⅝c for Easterns.

Supplies of butter arriving are much increased, and there is more enquiry from the local trade. Fall creamery continues to be very much sought after, and prices are a shade easier, in spite of this, owing to much improved supplies of other lines.

Shipments are being made to western points, which with increased local demand has depreciated stocks very much, which were held in the city. The holders of September and October makes who have been waiting for an advance, are somewhat disappointed, at the turn affairs have taken, as they thought the scarcity of really high grade early fall butter should have, by this time, been called for at a higher figure than it is commanding. Receipts since May 1 to Jan. 16, have been 413,700 packages, against 408,552 packages for the same period of last year. These figures made a commendable showing, in view of the adverse conditions which have prevailed. Local quotations are 26½c to 27c for finest creamery and 25½c to 26c for fresh receipts.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

Toronto, January 21, 1909.

The provision situation is active, with prices for hogs too high to suit the packer. The demand for cured meats is normal and business fair. English markets are too low for the price of hogs here, and therefore packers must depend on local demand for their output. Butter is plentiful and on account of its poor quality is accumulating and will be sold for less money than the regular prices. Cheese is very quiet, but firm. New laid eggs are sufficient to meet the demand. The stock of held eggs will likely all be required before we can depend on new laid eggs to meet all demands. Poultry is firm, but very little on the market.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—The undertone of the market for live hogs continues strong, and prices are tending toward a higher level, due to reduced supplies arriving, and good demand. Lard is firmly held at the recent advance in both compound and pure lines.

BUTTER—Fresh rolls are arriving more freely, therefore prices are a shade easier, although demand continues good. Fresh creamery is in good demand at easier prices. Fall creamery continues active, and prices have shaded off slightly, due to larger arrivals of other lines. Altogether the butter market is steady, under a good demand.

EGGS—Receipts of new laid are increasing, but demand continues to increase also, and the market remains steady at a slight advance. Storage stocks are low, and dealers will soon have to look to other sources for their supplies. In spite of larger quantities of fresh stock arriving this approaching end of storage stock keeps the market firm, with an upward tendency.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS—The market this week is somewhat excited. Hogs were considered dangerously high last week, but this week they are almost a dollar a hundred higher. The cause of this is difficult to find. Opinions differ, but the most likely cause is the anxiety of the packers to get stock enough to keep their factories running. As a result, all cured meats are from ½ a cent to 1 cent a lb. higher.

BUTTER—From week to week the fact becomes more apparent that the butter makers are again going backward instead of forward in the art of butter making. The butter this year, for some reason, is considerably below the average quality of last year. Why is this the case, and who is to blame? Invariably it is the case when butter has been in good demand. For some time the buyers seem to have become less particular and the farmers more careless. This is owing to the old custom, still in vogue in some parts of our country, to pay the same price for all qualities of butter, by the merchants who dare not criticize the quality for fear that they might lose a customer. This pernicious system is unfair and always results in loss to the trade and the country. In looking through the market carelessness is evident on every hand—butter badly made, cream allowed to get stale and tainted from odors peculiar to its surroundings. The blame, however, is not all on the farmer. The merchants are perhaps more to blame than the farmers. They should point out to the farmers the defects in their butter and urge them to be more particular. Not only neglecting to do this, they keep it in their stores, where it becomes tainted and spoiled in 12 hours in some cases from odors peculiar to a general store, where coal oil, onions, and thousands of other things are kept. Then to wind up their part in bringing this delicate article of food to the consumer they pack it in soap boxes, fish boxes, and even match boxes, in which it arrives in the city. Such a process can be carried on as long as the supply is not sufficient to meet the demand, but the people will not continue to pay high prices for stuff they cannot eat, and in due time it begins to accumulate and must be sold at a great loss.

The market seems to be loaded up in many cases with this kind of butter, and it is of the utmost importance that the merchants of the country should draw attention of the farmers to this matter. Butter all through is about 3 cents lower this week, and if the quality does not improve it may drop at least 10 cents more.

EGGS—As may be expected at this time of the year, with exceptionally mild weather, new laid eggs are coming in freely and prices are coming down. It is a very peculiar fact that as soon as the high price of eggs begins to drop the demand falls off. The reason for this is, the grocers, as a rule, have some of the high price eggs on hand and they hang on to get their money back and the people are waiting to buy them cheaper. Held eggs are firm.

ADVICE TO BEGINNERS.

The beginning of the new year is often the time for beginning a new business, and it may be expected that many will enter the grocery business within the first two months of the year. Some words of advice, therefore, on starting a store may not be amiss from one who has had the experience and who has seen the stumbling blocks upon which many have tumbled. He writes that the man who contemplates opening a grocery business in a retail way should be sure of certain premises before he makes up his mind fully. There are certain premises which should be satisfactory before he begins.

First, he should be convinced that he is fitted for the work. Nobody decides offhand to become a lawyer without considering whether he has a legal mind or not. Nobody decides to become a physician without weighing in his mind whether or not he has those qualifications which go to make up a physician's mental and physical being. Perhaps there are some who have done even these silly things, but the results have been disastrous if they made mistakes. The making of a merchant is just as important as the making of an attorney or a doctor. There are certain mental attributes which are absolutely essential for a grocer. First, then, be sure you will make a good merchant.

Second, the prospective grocer should be able to decide in an unbiased manner as to the time and place of venturing into business. He must not allow himself to be hoodwinked by desire, by the wishes of others, by seeming opportunity. Because his wife would rather live in Podunk rather than to move away from her folks to Jimtown is not sufficient to alter the wise man's realization that Jimtown offers the best opening. Time, place and location are vital for the new merchant.

Third, he should have enough capital. The camel has numerous stomachs, but a camel is an idiot if he ventures forth upon a long desert journey without first filling his tanks with water. One drink may satisfy his momentary thirst, but he has to have a reserve when he finds himself away out on the sands with no friendly oasis near and the sun extremely torrid. Have a reserve of some kind. Be prepared for the evil days, for they are almost sure to come.

Fourth, make up your mind that merchandising is hard work, and accept it as it comes. It is a great mistake to nourish the thought that selling goods is a "snap." The man who cherishes the idea that with a store he can furnish his own household with goods free and who conceives that that is the chief end and aim of retailers is going to wake up busted.

There are other things that might be said—without number. But these will give the young man with leanings towards retailing as a business a hint as to what is before him.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Not Much Exporting Done in Flour—Nothing New Regarding Rolled Oats.

Nothing new has yet occurred in the rolled oats market, in spite of the fact that some anticipated a change. Jobbers generally report a fair trade for the season. Rolled wheat remains the same as quoted last week.

A rather dull feeling exists in the flour situation locally. Winter wheat is scarce and as Mexico has now become an important importer of Canadian wheat and have taken considerable quantities recently the feeling is decidedly strong.

In Montreal the trade is reported good considering the time of year, with the country trade improving. There is not much export business doing in flour.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—The recent decline of 10c has given the market an added zest, and trade is reported good for this time of the year. The country trade is continuing to improve. Stocks held in the country are on the light side. The offerings of winter wheat flour from the west are light, but there is a fair supply on the spot, and the demand is only limited, as buyers seem to have enough on hand to meet their requirements. Export business is dull.

ROLLED OATS—Some jobbers in rolled oats report a very good trade for this time of the year, and other dealers also state that there is a decided improvement in the demand. There have been rumors of cutting prices in certain quarters, but so far nothing has occurred of this nature. Prices remain as last quoted.

FEED—Firmness prevails in the bran market, owing to an exceedingly good demand. Up to the present moment no advance has been announced and prices are firmly maintained at last quotations. FLOUR—There is not now much export trade going on in flour, although the inquiry is good. Business is generally reported dull, but the feeling is strong, principally on account of the demand being made by Mexico on Canadian wheat. The same prices quoted last week still prevail.

THE REASON WHY.

Customer—"Why doesn't that spinster, Miss Jones, deal at your shop any more?"

Grocer—"One of my assistants insulted her."

Customer—"How?"

Grocer—"She overheard him telling some one else that she was our oldest customer."

HINTS TO BUYERS.

January is the bargain month par excellence and the right month for the retailer to stock up with standard products when these can be bought at reduced prices. Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, offer genuine bargains in wines, liquors, whiskies and imported and domestic canned goods. They ask the retailer to let them know what they are in need of to complete their stock, and they will be pleased to quote prices which will not fail to prove interesting. On another page of this issue will be found their advertisement.—advt.

SHAREHOLDERS COMPLAIN.

Provincial Secretary Hanna Hears Both Sides of Story in Co-operative Association Case.

Provincial Secretary Hon. W. J. Hanna on the morning of Jan. 13th listened to the complaints of a number of the shareholders of the Dominion Co-operative Association regarding the manner in which some of the business of the formation of the company was transacted. On hearing their testimony, as well as the other side of the story from the solicitor of the company, he reserved his decision.

The shareholders, who were present to the number of about fifteen, asked Hon. Mr. Hanna to either cancel the company's charter or to make an investigation into the workings of the company.

The principal objection to the company's course of procedure was the alleged allowance of 15 per cent. commission on all stock to the promoters; the "illegal appointment" of the Board of Directors, and to the neglect of those in charge to present the by-laws and prospectus to the shareholders.

A. W. Holmstead, solicitor for the company, was present in its interests, with the secretary, H. Macdonald.

Mr. Hanna declared he would look into the facts on both sides, and hinted that some legislation regarding company formations might follow. Hearing of the 15 per cent. commission, he remarked: "Well, 15 per cent. on the $1,000,000 of stock would mean $150,000 to the promoters. Had I known there was such a clause in a co-operative charter that charter would not have gone out."

W. C. GADEN WINNING PRIZES.

Walter C. Gaden, widely known among retail grocers, and acquainted with travelers throughout the country, has just won a beautiful silver cabinet service and also a splendid golden locket, set with twelve diamonds, as a result of excellent work done for the Sun Life Assurance Company, of Canada, in closing insurance. It is just about a year ago that Mr. Gaden gave up the traveling business for insurance, and he has certainly made good in his new field. The locket is a special prize awarded to him individually, and was not for competition. The silver cabinet service was competed for by agents of the company in all parts of the civilized world.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Without exception all fruit men this week report no change in prices on all their lines. At the same time business is steady, quite satisfactory and much better than last year, during the same period. The demand is good. All kinds of fruit are picked up, and accounts are well paid.

VEGETABLES—One acquainted with the markets of the city the last 15 or 20 years, as he walks through our vegetable houses, cannot fail to see the wonderful change that has taken place within that time. To see fresh lettuce, cauliflower, radishes, cabbage, potatoes, tomatoes, spinach, beans, etc., in January was never thought of, and yet to-day these articles are here. Although the most of these come from Florida, a considerable quantity of it is grown in hot houses here. With fresh tomatoes at 35c a lb., potatoes at $3.50 a bushel, cucumbers $2.25 a dozen, radishes 45c a dozen, spinach $1 a bushel, the grocer should be even tempted to go into the hot house business.

FISH—The fish market is brisk, prices well maintained and business on the whole very satisfactory. With the exception of the arrival of a car of New Brunswick kippered herring and a car of Newfoundland large sea herring, the stock is all cold storage, which, however, is all in first-class condition. Oysters are now nearly all sold in patent carriers, which is considered a great improvement on the old method, and are sold, solid meat. Standards, $1.60 a gal.; selects, $1.95 a gal.

IMPROVEMENT IN STRATHROY.

Mr. Geo. La Motte, of Strathroy, whose store was gutted by fire three months ago, has got back into his old stand which he has had handsomely refitted throughout. He has installed the Walkerbin system of shelving and silent salesman. The store has double plate-glass windows, one of which is used for groceries and one for china crockery. His trade is splendid. The move to the refitted store was made in time for the Christmas trade, and it was exceptionally good. Mr. La Motte, jr, is in the business and father and son are getting their full share of the revival in trade activity.

TO THE FRONT.

Young & Co., of Alvinston, known to all the traveling men as "Billy" Young, have removed into the centre of the town's business section and now occupy the store vacated by John Walker, who has retired from business and removed to Toronto. Mr. Young formerly kept groceries and crockery, and he has added boots and shoes. The change has already proved a good one for him. He got into the new store in time for the Christmas trade, and it was the largest he had ever had. All the travelers are glad that "Billy" is moving to the front.

THE ORANGE CUCUMBER.

A report from Gardner, Mass., states that a New England man has procured a new fruit which is a cross between a cucumber and a orange. Howard S. Hill, the discoverer, tells that without thought one day he mixed the meat of an orange with that of a cucumber, and the flavor was so delicious that he conceived the idea of blending the two into one growth, with the result that he has produced a fruit which he calls cucumber orange. It is larger than an orange and has little cells similar to that fruit, particularly close to the skin. The centre is similar to a cucumber, but the seeds are not like either the fruit or vegetable.

Make the Goods Talk

BY JOHN WANAMAKER

Advertising is making the goods speak. It is putting a truthful, animate tongue into inanimate merchandise.

Merchandise itself cannot lie. Sooner or later its true character will develop—in its use—in the satisfaction it gives to the owner.

When exaggerated or false statements are made about goods it is a human tongue that talks or a human hand that writes; it is not the merchandise that speaks—therefore it is not advertising.

Advertising is also news—news more vital to the family than nine-tenths of the so-called news that goes into the newspaper.

Whoever makes the goods talk—whoever exhibits the true nature and uses of an article of commerce—whoever correctly and interestingly tells the news about his merchandise—he is the true advertiser.

INGERSOLL'S NEW GROCER REEVE

S. M. Fleet, an Active Merchant, Climbs to the Chief Magistrate's Chair.

S. M. Fleet, who at the recent municipal elections, was promoted from the position of deputy reeve to the important office of reeve by an overwhelming majority, is one of Ingersoll's most progressive and public spirited citizens. That his genial personality and executive ability have won admiration and confidence, was strikingly emphasized by the manner in which citizens rallied in support of his candidature for the reeveship.

Mr. Fleet has been a highly esteemed resident of Ingersoll for the past fourteen years, during which time he has been successfully engaged in the grocery and meat business. He has two stores, one on either side of Thames St. north, and his determination to "get there" by carrying what the people require and honest selling has always been apparent. He enjoys a large and well-merited patronage.

REEVE S. M. FLEET,

Of Ingersoll, a Grocer Who Won Success in the Recent Elections.

In conducting his own business Mr. Fleet is methodical. He knows and appreciates the value of a system in all undertakings and this fact has enhanced his worth as a member of the council. Outspoken and fearless, yet with a determination to deal fairly and conscientiously with all his constituents, he has insisted that municipal affairs be considered with the same degree of economy and thoroughness that the wide-awake business man would exercise in handling his own private affairs.

All told, Mr. Fleet has had five years of municipal experience in Ingersoll. Last year he occupied the position of deputy reeve and was chairman of the Board of Works. Chief among the work which came under his department was the construction of permanent roadwork on a portion of Thames St., the town's main thoroughfare. In connection with this work his services should perpetuate his name.

Under his supervision an excellent piece of road was constructed which has been strongly endorsed not only by grateful townspeople, but also by people from the neighboring districts.

By reason of his position as deputy reeve, Mr. Fleet was and still is, a member of the County Council. At the sessions of this body he was a prominent debater on all matters of moment and he did much to emphasize his worth both in connection with town and county affairs. He was particularly attentive to all matters relative to the town of Ingersoll, and his elevation to the reeveship is a fitting reward for his services.

Mr. Fleet is a native of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. Early in his career he was employed as a book-keeper in a marine insurance office in Yarmouth, where he gained a valuable business training. He also spent several years filling an important position as book-keeper in Boston, Mass. Later he became a "Knight of the Grip," representing the Minards Liniment Co., covering the territory from Cape Breton to the western limits of Ontario. Since throwing in his lot with Ingersoll, Mr. Fleet has demonstrated that he is a citizen of the right stamp. He is loyal to his town and public spirited enough to join heartily in all movements calculated to advance the interests of all. While he will have plenty of work on his hands this year in discharging the duties of his new office, it is needless to mention that he will not overlook his own business interests.

John Tritt, Neepawa, general merchant, has sold to a Winnipeg company, with Jno. Kerr as manager.

"Make the Goods Talk"

That's good advice, and that's why Canadian Canners' products hold their supreme position.

It has always been the policy of the Management of the Canadian Canners', Limited, to work for Quality.

The buyer of a can of goods with the Canadian Canners' Label knows that he is running no risks. The quality is guaranteed by a responsible, reliable company.

Why buy inferior goods even if at lower prices only to perhaps incur the ill-will of your customers?

If you secure a name for handling nothing but reliable goods you are on the high road to success.

REMEMBER THE BRANDS :—

"Auto," Aylmer; "Canada First," "Log Cabin," "Little Chief," Bowlby's; "Horseshoe," Lalor's; "Grand River," "Kent," Delhi; "Maple Leaf," Boulter's; "Lion," "Thistle," "White Rose."

You can absolutely rely on its uniform high quality. When stock has been bought it is packed in a factory that is a model of scientific sanitation and up-to-date processing equipment and methods. From tne garden to the can Old Homestead Brand is transferred in the manner that preserves the full, delicious flavor and nutriment of the highest grade fruit and vegetables.

An Unforgetable Link

A man said to us the other day, "I don't see anything wonderful about the enormous sale of "SALADA." Why shouldn't it sell? See how it is advertised." But as we explained to him—No matter how extensive advertising may be the future of any article depends entirely upon the truthfulness or falsity of the claims advertised.

During the seventeen years "SALADA" has been before the public dozens of tea firms and wholesale houses have used every conceivable scheme to get their goods before the public—premiums, bonuses, discounts, long datings, limericks, sampling, demonstrating, newspaper advertising—everything in fact. But of what avail? Everyone of these firms have spent enormous sums in advertising but little or no money was spent on the tea itself.

The fact that "SALADA" has continued to grow in popular favor, year in and year out is because an unforgetable link has been established between "SALADA" advertising and "SALADA" quality.

As we have often stated we first put out a good tea then told the people of its goodness and the people bought it and have continued to buy it because "SALADA" has always been kept good.

Does it not show how willingly the consumer pays a fair price for a good article and how he hates a poor one.

Talks To Business Men

NO. 1—GETTING YOUR NAME UP.

Advertisers have a favorite way of thinking that the advertisement that doesn't bring in immediately and directly more than it cost is a failure. Yet they know perfectly well, says the New York Journal of Commerce, that "getting your name up" is a far more valuable asset than the mere sale of a bill of goods; that the big houses of the country have reputations quite as much because they advertise like big houses as because their ads. bring direct sales of goods. There is no more certain way to remain small than by letting the world know that you regard yourself as small—too small and poor to be able to advertise.

It is not the purpose of this article to in any way dispute the fact that advertising to the consumer is profitable. There is too much evidence at hand to prove the contrary. But the manufacturer who "compels" the trade to handle his goods, just because they have been advertised to the consumer —and too frequently neglects to make them profitable—is really bulldozing the trade rather than cooperating. One of the great fruits of organization has been a recognition by manufacturers that the policy which selects the jobber as a channel for distribution is the best one. He has learned to respect the trade. In precisely the same way, it is about time that he carried that recognition to the trade press and realized its power with the trade. The successful advertising campaign of the future will work with both the consumer and the trade, preaching arguments best adapted for each in that medium which reaches it and influences it.

He Always Lived Within His Income

How a Penniless and Almost Barefooted Boy Made Money in the Grocery Business—His First Work Brought Him $2 Per Week—Almost 70 Years of Age Now—Still Working But Doesn't Have to—Never Speculated and Was Always Industrious—Believer in Short Hours for Clerks.

"I attribute my success in the grocery business to the fact that I was careful and industrious, that I never speculated and that I always lived within my income."

Such in brief are the reasons for the splendid commercial career of E. K. Scoley, 63 Jarvis Street, Toronto, who prides himself among other things on being one of the two oldest grocers in the Queen City, as well as one of the oldest in the Province of Ontario.

His life, too, has been one of more than ordinary interest to grocers in general. He is a self-made man and he made his money entirely in the grocery business. The story of progress from a boy in his teens doing odd jobs around the city of Toronto for twenty five cents and sometimes less, to a grocery clerk and finally to the proprietor of a store, deserves the attention of clerks as well as of the grocers themselves.

His Boyhood Memories.

Born in Lincolnshire. England, in 1841, he spent a dozen years in the land of his forefathers. Times in the old country were not of the best during the period that followed and twelve years later he sailed for Canada to seek his fortune in the new country of which he had heard so much in his early boyhood.

Therefore in 1853 he became a Canadian and Montreal was his first location. For two years he was engaged as an office boy in that city, during which time he had the privilege of seeing the laying of the corner stone of the famous Victoria Bridge. That was in 1855 and he believes that he is probably the only person living to-day who witnessed the event. No other boys were there and it was only by virtue of his position as office boy with the contractor, that he was allowed to see it. Although this occurred fifty-four years ago, it still remains fresh in his memory.

It Was Westward Ho.

In 1857 Mr. Scoley penetrated deeper into the big Dominion and landed at Toronto. It was just after the closing of the Russian war. He was then sixteen years of age and it is here that the interesting side of his career begins.

On arriving in Toronto he was absolutely penniless. This was nothing, however, to a stout heart and willing hand and this condition was soon overcome. For three months he walked around the city, until the soles of his boots were plainly showing signs of better days, while only occasionally was he getting a twenty-five cent job to do.

Partly disgusted at his ill-fortune, he determined to enlist with the 100th Regiment under Capt. Clark and find food and shelter there. Here again he met disappointment. He was too young and physically he was too small.

Finally he secured work as clerk with a grocer, Wm. Sutherland, corner of Queen St. and Dennistown Avenue at a salary of $2 per week and his board. For two years he worked there from shortly after daylight to eleven and twelve o'clock at night and in that time learned the rudiments of the operation of a grocery store.

Into Business For Himself.

His next employer was Wm. Ramsay, who carried on both a retail and wholesale grocery trade in a store that was situated where now one corner of the new St. Lawrence market is. His duties there as clerk lasted for six years, so that from the year 1859 until the present time—fifty-four years—he has been engaged in the grocery work around the market. This he claims to be the record. His old friend Henry Swan, however, who is still in business near the market, was in the trade one year before Mr. Scoley entered the grocery arena for himself. The highest money he ever received as a clerk was $8 per week."Wages were not so high in those days," he remarked.

E. K. SCOLEY,

One of Toronto's Pioneer Grocers Who Tells How He made a Success.

When the six years had expired Mr. Ramsay decided to do an exclusive wholesale trade. This gave Mr. Scoley an apportunity. As grocery clerk he had not spent all the money he earned and was in a position to buy—partly for cash and partly on credit—the retail end of the business. That was about 43 years ago and until 7 years ago he occupied the same store which was on a portion of the present market site and an illustration of which appears on this page.

When it was decided to build the new market where it now stands, the old store was pulled down and Mr. Scoley moved to where he now is located—63 Jarvis Street.

The methods which he has followed in making a success of his business are worthy of particular consideration on account of their educative qualities and their benefit to clerks and grocers.

"I make it a point to do a cash business as much as possible," he remarked, "and therefore I have suffered very little from poor pay customers. I find it not difficult to secure cash in these modern times. People don't look for credit now like they used to years ago."

"I have always been an advocate of short hours and I find that the practice of early closing pays."

He explained that his store is closed sharp at six o'clock every night with the exception of Saturday night, when seven o'clock is the limit.

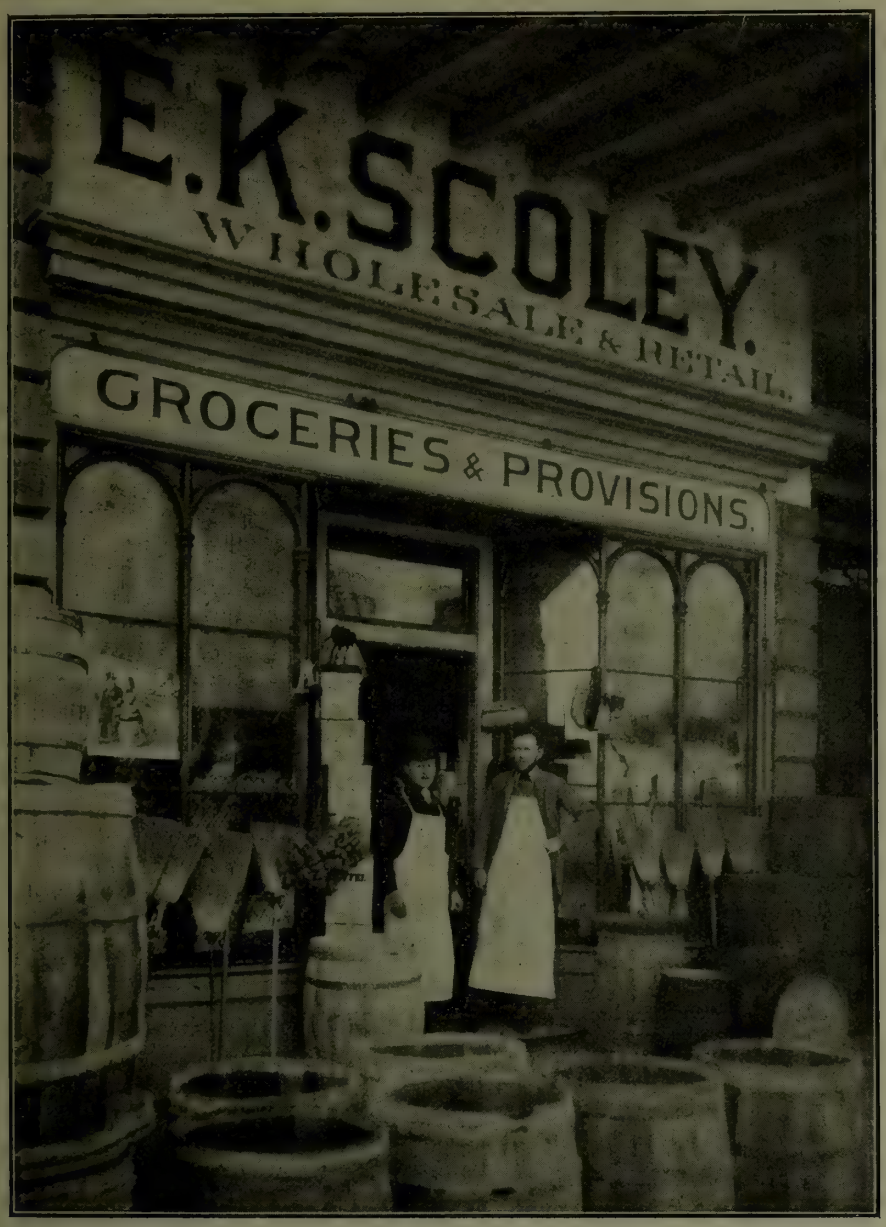
Two Clerks in 36 Years.

"I find that my clerks have appreciated it," he said. "They were always willing to work hard during the day because they knew they had their evenings to themselves. Why, in 36 years I have had only two head clerks," he added.

The present chief clerk is C. Fry, who has been with him for 19 years. He thinks that clerks' hours, generally, are too long.

In buying Mr. Scoley has always made it a point to pay cash and secure the cash discount. In this way he has saved a good deal of the money he now possesses, and has avoided a good deal of unnecessary trouble.

Within His Income.



Any person who does not live within his income would find little favor in the eyes of Mr. Scoley. He attributes a great deal of the failures in business to the fact that so many young men spend all the money they earn from their youths up and when they do enter business for themselves, the habit still sticks with them. No matter how small his wages, he has always spent less than he earned.

He has been ever careful in his work, taking every trouble to do it correctly. Added to this he has been a hard worker which, he believes, is the best qualification a man can have in order to succeed in any business or profession. He never lost or won money by speculation, but was content throughout his lengthy business career with his gradual savings.

Mr. Scoley joined the Queen's Own many years ago and was a member of the guard of Honor to the Prince of Wales—now King Edward VII.—when he visited Toronto in the sixties.

He has been several times across the Atlantic to visit the fatherland, but has always returned to Canadian soil.

PATENT MEDICINE ACT.

This Comes Into Force on April 1st—What it Means and the Penalties That May be Incurred.

On April 1st, 1909, the new "Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act" goes into force in the Dominion, and the Grocer desires to call the attention of its readers to its significance and the penalties that may be incurred if a violation of the provisions is proven against any party.

This will be of particular interest to grocers in rural communities where there are few or no drug stores, and to those who have places of business far from business centers of towns or cities.

The Act stipulates that all proprietary or patent medicines shall be put up in packages or bottles and every one of these intended for sale or distribution in Canada shall have placed upon it, in conspicuous characters forming an inseparable part of the general label or wrapper, the name and member under which the medicine is registered with the words "The Proprietary or Patent Medicine Act," and also the manufacturer's name and address which name and number shall be sufficient identification as to the manufacturer.

Must Secure Certificate.

The Act requires that every manufacturer or importer of Proprietary or Patent medicines shall before offering them for sale procure from the Department of Inland Revenue a certificate of registration. The application must be accompanied by a list of medicines to be covered by the certificate and also by the fee of one dollar.

The actual certificate of registration cannot, however, be issued until the Act comes into force, but, in order that persons may prepare their labels they will as soon as their application is passed upon, be advised of the number alloted them.

The Governor in Council may make such regulations for giving effect to any provisions of the act or in respect of the sale of any patent or proprietary medicine in stock at the time of the passing of this Act, and declaring the true intent of them in any case of doubt, as to him seems advisable and may also add to or remove from the schedule of drugs mentioned in the Act, any poisons or potent drugs, as from time to time he deems expedient, notice of this to be given in The Canada Gazette.

No Cocaine Whatever.

Prohibited medicines in the patent or proprietary line which particularly cannot be sold, are those which contain cocaine, or alcohol when it is in excess of the amount required as a solvent or preservative.

Every person who is convicted of violating the provisions of the Act shall for the first offence incur in each case a penalty not exceeding $50 and costs, and for every subsequent offence a penalty not exceeding $100 and costs, and his certificate of registration may be cancelled.

If the party purchasing the medicine from a company or firm proves that he did not know that the provisions of the act were violated he may be discharged, but he shall be liable to pay the costs incurred by the prosecutor, and the medicine may be declared forfeited to the Crown.

Every penalty or forfeiture incurred for any offence against the Act may be recovered in a summary manner with costs.

THE BURGLAR'S PLANS.

The schemes worked by the light fingered fraternity to secure the coin of the realm are probably innumerable. Merchants are frequently the victims of unique schemes. Here is one from Cincinnati that may well be reproduced to prevent its occurrence to Grocery readers :

Two men went into Henry Schneider's grocery, 997 Martin street, Saturday afternoon and told Mrs. Schneider that her husband had sent them to fix the cash register. They were tampering with the register when Schneider himself loomed up large in their vision, so they made a get away, but not with any of the coin.

W. C. Christmas, Montreal, made a friendly call at the office of The Grocer on Tuesday of this week.

F. W. Thompson, vice-president and managing director of the Ogilvie Flour Mills Company, Montreal, has left for an extended holiday at Nassau.

The rumor that the Tilbury Canning Company was to be absorbed by the Canadian Canners is officially denied. It is stated, however, that some changes are in contemplation.

Produce Pickled Tea in Burma Province

It is Called Lape in the Language of the Burmese People—An Article of Commerce Used Extensively Within That Province—Native of That Land Tells of its Manufacture and How it is Served—Something New for Many Canadian Grocers.

"Pickled tea," perhaps, is a phrase that sounds peculiar to a great many people, including a great many grocers who are supposed to know all about this common commodity, so much of which passes over their counters from year to year. Strange as it may seem, yet there is a certain province in a well-known eastern tea productive country in which the inhabitants pickle the majority of the tea grown and eat it as a condiment—in a somewhat similar manner as we would use horseradish or tomato catsup.

That province is Burma. Any grocer familiar with the geography he studied when a boy will recollect that Burma occupies a prominent position in the eastern section of India. It, of course, is now under British rule.

Well, over in Burma, the Burmese people pickle the tea. Up to the present, foreigners in Burma have not sufficiently cared for this new condiment to have it or its manufacture introduced into other countries and therefore the art of pickling tea is, so far as is known, confined to the Burmese alone.

Used Extensively.

But the extent to which it is used in that province is worthy of more than a passing consideration. The Grocer has been able to secure some authentic information on the matter from a native of Burma, Mr. Solomon, who has come to Canada to be educated in a Canadian college.

Speaking to The Grocer representative, Mr. Solomon, who, by the way, understands and talks English exceedingly well, remarked: "When you come to mention the matter, we do use tea in that way, but it is so common over there that I never thought of its singular nature before. I suppose it was chiefly because no person asked me about it."

Augmented to Mr. Solomon's recollections were some interesting things told The Grocer also by Mr. Armstrong, a graduate of McMaster University, who has traveled rather extensively in India and Burma for the mission cause.

Name and Manufacture.

Tea that has been pickled is known in the language of the Burmese people as "lape," but as yet it has received no English name. Its manufacture is probably the most important part of it, for as yet it has not been used as an article of commerce—except in the province where it is produced. The manufacture is very simple.

The tea leaf is first picked and then put through a boiling process. This is done in peculiar shaped earthen pots known as "chatties" and all that then remains is the flavoring of the tea-pickles. This, however, needs an experienced hand in view of the fact that so many different spices and flavoring condiments are used. Among these are cinnamon and other spices, fried onion, garlic and ginger oil. Sometimes almost all of these are used and at other times only a few, according to the likes and dislikes of those for whom it is made.

How it is Served.

The Burmese are very hospitable people. They do a great deal of visiting among themselves and when these "calls" are made something to drink, smoke and eat is invariably provided by the host.

To drink, a cup of tea is given, a long cheroot for smoking, and to eat, a dish of lape containing probably a couple of handfuls. This is eaten with the fingers, a little at a time, just the same as we would eat horseradish or use mustard with meat, only, of course, we do not use our fingers. Mr. Solomon explained that a cheroot resembled in shape a cigar. It is made from four to six inches in length from the leaf of the teak tree—the most important timber tree in Burma.

Have Street Restaurants.

Lape is principally a household article, very little of it being manufactured for sale. Each house provides itself with its own. There are, nevertheless, several restaurants on the streets of a Burma village or town and at these one can purchase a saucerful for a coin equal to our one cent piece. In this way a considerable quantity is sold to transients. In these restaurants the proprietor flavors the lape as desired, by simply taking a pinch of the spice or flavoring material in his fingers and spreading it on the pickled tea. In the houses themselves it is one of the most common things that appear on the tables.

Confined to the Burmese.

Burma is a province made up of many different classes of people. The population is estimated at 10,500,000, whereas, about 8,000,000 of these are Burmans. The latter represent almost entirely those who make and consume lape. They are a thrifty race and do an immense amount of small trading among themselves. They, as a rule, are plenteously supplied with money, they own their own property and spend freely; they do not believe much in caste and their women are entirely free, unlike some of the other eastern countries. The Eurasians are the mixed population—the English and others who marry Burmese wives and to a large extent have Burmese likes. It is probable that in this way lape may become more widely recognized as an article of commerce when once it becomes palatable to others besides the natives of the province. A like for it has to be cultivated.

Statistics Given.

As intimated above, very little tea is produced in Burma which is not eaten as a condiment. The great tea-raising province is Assam, the one to the northeast and lying next to China. Statistics for 1907, furnished by Consul-General William H. Michael, of Calcutta, show that the total tea production in India that year was 247,514,355 pounds. Of this amount Assam provided 167,545,751 pounds and the remainder of India the rest.

His report goes on to say that "While Burma is a province of India, the tea produced there is not included in the above figures for the reason that most of the Burma tea is pickled and eaten as a condiment. Only 4,175 pounds of black tea was made while the pickled tea amounted to 501,868 pounds."

107 Varieties of Rice.

Grocers will also be interested in the rice production in Burma. The people there make rice their principal food, and a great amount is sent out of the country annually. Mr. Solomon states that it is estimated there are 107 varieties grown in his native country. The Burmese are now interested in modern improvements and in some places use irrigation for the advancement of the crops.

Rice grows dry on the hills and also under water in the lower lands. When the crop is cut it is placed on wickerwork platforms and threshed by oxen tramping on it. The grains fall through the platform. Often the Burmese use lape as a condiment in eating rice.

Rangoon is the great shipping port in Burma.

TAPPED THE TILL.

Alex. Manley, grocer, St. Patrick St. and Denison Avenue, Toronto, had his till tapped one night last week for $25. A man entered the store and asked for some coal oil, and while Mr. Manley was getting it the customer emptied his till and disappeared.

GOVERNMENT OWNED ELEVATORS

A Live Question Among the Grain Growers of Western Canada—Building Advance Predicted for Winnipeg—Plenty of Land Left for Homesteaders Around the Western Metropolis—The Situation in the West.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Jan. 27.—The annual meeting of the Grain Growers' Association, to which reference has already been made, was held during the past week and very ardently re-endorsed its previously expressed desire of Provincial Government Ownership of Interior Elevators. The promoters of the scheme seemed very confident of success, but while they were in session Premier Rutherford, of Alberta, spoke on the matter in the Alberta Legislature, in reply to a question, and stated that whereas it had been claimed that it would only require $4,000,000 to duplicate the present elevator system of Alberta, from evidence in his possession it looked as if it would be more like $15,000,000, and there were many other grave considerations to be taken into account before embarking upon such a scheme. He was not sure that under the British North America Act provinces had the power to engage in such business. His little speech was cautious but it did not take any great reading between the lines to see that the present Alberta Government is decidedly shy of the scheme. The Saskatchewan Government has already stated that only as an entire monopoly could the scheme be made practical and at this very convention the farmers themselves refused to give the Government a monopoly even if they erected the elevators, clinging to all the loading platform privileges they now have, but still maintaining that the governments should erect and maintain a costly system of elevators without any guarantee that the farmers would use them when they were erected.

The only province that has not yet been heard from is that of Manitoba and some decision in the matter was to have been handed out on the 22nd but did not materialize.

A Monster Problem.

The scheme is a gigantic one, and the Grain Growers' Associations, while they are clamoring for government owned interior elevators and publishing most misleading figures about costs, maintenance, profits, etc., have really no well formulated plan on which the thing could be operated—indeed they seem as if they expected the various governments to do that for them. There seems to be a general impression among grain men that the proposition will be turned down by all the provincial governments at the present time, and it is to be sincerely hoped they are correct.

The export trade of Canada is now on a very satisfactory basis, Old Country buyers are satisfied with the present inspection law and its operation and about the only effect of such a radical change would be a very general upset of the export trade.

Last year the fact that this question was pending had a great effect in deterring line elevators from erecting new houses, but this year up to date contracts are already under way for the erection and equipment of no less than 85 new houses, many of them on the line of the new G.T.P.

Dominion Charters Preferable.

The companies planning the erection of these houses are very reticent at present, but there is every reason to believe that the difficulty of provincially owned interior elevators will be gotten over by the companies securing Dominion charters and building their houses under those charters. Many men in the grain trade are coming to realize the absolute need of having Dominion charters for the carrying on of their business. In the first place, every grain dealer operates in at least four provinces and many of them in five provinces of the Dominion. Experience has taught them that while it is not very difficult for some body of agitators to secure the passage of drastic and often foolish legislation in a province, it is much more difficult for anything of the kind to be done by Dominion enactment and therefore the advantage of Dominion charters.

Business men in the east may think this interior elevator question a purely western one and confined to the grain trade, but once let the government start on the erection and operation of interior elevators and every business man in Canada will find the effect on trade generally. Instead of being a remedy for the present ills of the farmer it will bring about a condition of affairs that will make present troubles look rosy indeed.

Erecting New Elevator.

Fort William is to have another terminal elevator. This will be erected by the Western Elevator Company, of Winnipeg, who have a large line of houses throughout the West. The new house will be located 350 feet north of the present Consolidated Elevator on the banks of the Kamanistikwia River. It will have a capacity of 900,000 bushels and will be of the most modern construction. Work on this elevator will be started immediately.

Winnipeg is starting well in the building line for 1909, which promises to be a very active season. There is much to lend impetus to building this year. Prices of material are fairly reasonable, there is an abundance of lumber on hand, and a heavy cut this winter. The labor situation, although always a doubtful proposition until after May 1, looks rather healthier than it has done for some years. Lastly, the money market is encouraging, for not only can loans be negotiated on good propositions without trouble, but there is apparently a fair prospect of even cheaper money before the building season actually sets in. The architects of Winnipeg already have plans in hand for buildings that will aggregate $2,000,000, all to be erected in 1909. The Canada Permanent Mortgage Company are getting out plans for their splendid office building on Garry St. Several eastern factories are negotiating for sites and the coming of the Great Northern Railway into the city will necessitate the erection of their terminals on the property which they bought up two years ago on Ross Street and in that vicinity. It is quite probable that the station will be erected between the site of the old Princess Opera House, that was dear to the heart of old timers and was destroyed by fire some years ago, and the present city hall. This will bring it right into the business centre of Winnipeg on the west side of Main St. All the present railway terminals are on the east side of that street.

The Winnipeg Stock Yards.

Progress has been made in the matter of the Union Stock Yards to be located in St. Boniface. A trunk sewer was one of the first essentials in laying out the yards and the representatives of the three railway companies interested have filed with the council of the town of St. Boniface assurances of their intention to spend from $300,000 to $400,000 in the laying out and equipping of these yards. F. W. Peters, assistant to the second vice-president of the C.P.R., the chief engineer of the company, and the general superintendent are leaving for the south to make personal and detailed inspection of the stock yards at Chicago, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha and South St. Paul.

The Live Stock Shippers' Association have received the assurance of Mr. Peters that the railway companies concerned are prepared to give to the city of Winnipeg every facility in connection with the construction of a public abbatoir that they would give to any private corporation. The city of Winnipeg will be given land upon the same terms, and will receive the same trackage and operating facilities that will be given to any private corporations.

The subject of a city owned abbatoir and market is quite a live one in Winnipeg at all times.

Land for Homesteading.

The number of homestead entries in the Canadian West in 1908 was 49,154, and of these only 1,754 were in the Winnipeg district. But the year 1909 is likely to have a very different record, for many thousands of acres of the finest land in the province is now being rapidly surveyed and will be ready for entry about February 23. Many people have the idea that all the land in the Winnipeg district has been homesteaded, but as a matter of fact, there is more land still open for settlement in the Winnipeg district than has yet been settled upon. This land now being thrown open for homesteading is largely in the northern part of the province. There are blocks of open prairie with patches of light scrub in some places, an abundance of water in the form of small clear lakes and good well water to be obtained by boring, on every quarter section.

The fact that these lands are so near the large market of Winnipeg, increases their value ten fold from the standpoint of the homesteader and it is expected there will be a great rush for them.—H.

EFFECT OF TEA ROOMS.

The Grocer has, from time to time, mentioned the possibilities of the tea room in connection with tea and coffee stores, and in fact departmental and grocery stores. Many tea rooms have been started and failed, but few if any fail when run in connection with some other business of a suitable character. Ladies frequently enjoy a cup of superior tea or coffee in one of these places and on their way out of the store order some of the blend which has pleased them, for their own tables. In this way a new customer is made, and as an advertising feature it is difficult to excel. A point which should be borne in mind as a very important feature, and one which will materially affect the future of the business, is that of interior appointment. Women perhaps more than men, are susceptible to their environment. Simple, but good taste, in the matter of interior decoration, is what is required. Appearances count for much in business. If a woman enjoys a cup of tea amidst harmonious surroundings and is comfortable, the chances are good that she will return, and business from her will ensue.

The illustration on this page showing the interior of "Ye old English Tea Room," of the Castle Blend Tea Co., Montreal, will help those who contemplate establishing a tea room in the matter of decoration and furnishing. This interior is simple and in good taste, and many things might be said about it which are all summed up in the fact that is highly successful. The tea room habit is on the increase, owing perhaps to the influx of English people, who have long been accustomed to them, and to the spread of Continental ideas in America.

THE MANUFACTURE OF VINEGAR

Is the Variety Made From Acetic Acid as Wholesome as Vinegar Made From Grapes and Sour Beer?—Where the Sale of the Former is Prohibited—Argument in its Defence.

Vinegar is a substance made in various ways, and there are probably some grocers who understand little of any method. It seems that in Sydney, New South Wales, there have been a number of prosecutions recently by the government, against traders selling vinegar made from Acetic acid. The Storekeeper of Sydney, commenting on the subject, has the following to say:

The N.S.W. health authorities declare that vinegar must be made from malt, and any other is necessarily adulterated and unfit for human consumption. Now it so happens that malt vinegar is a spurious imitation of true vinegar, which, as the name indicates, is sour wine. Wine vinegar is the only true vinegar, and as such England was supplied from the French makers for many years. But when France and England were at war, French vinegar was at a discount. It was hardly procurable, and also patriotic Englishmen hated anything French. So it came about that vinegar in England was made from sour beer instead of from sour wine.

Then there came a time when the brown vinegar of commerce did not please everybody, and so certain manufacturers began to distil the vinegar to purify it from extractive matter, and produce a finer article. This was practically a somewhat impure form of acetic acid, as it contained certain esters, which were not destroyed, or removed by distillation, but the percentage of these was very low, and they played no important part in the preparation.

The next step was the manufacture of acetic acid by the destructive distillation of wood, yielding in the first place a crude, dark liquor called pyroligneous acid, or essence of smoke. This is converted into acetate of lime, which is again decomposed by sulphuric acid and converted into sulphate of lime and acetate of soda—acetic acid. The acetic is distilled from the liquid. Again, this acid is neutralized with soda, and thus concerted into acetate of soda, which substance is re-crystallized until pure. Again it is mixed with sulphuric acid, which converts it into sulphate of soda and acetic acid. The sulphate of soda is left in the retort, and the pure acetic acid is distilled over, and diluted with water, until it is of the same acidity as vinegar.

Acetic Acid Vinegar Wholesome.

Now the value of vinegar depends upon the percentage of acetic acid which it contains. If a man sold as vinegar a 2 per cent. solution of acetic acid, he would be guilty of a fraud; but if a man sells vinegar of full strength, made with acetic acid, he sells a better article than a man who sells vinegar of the same strength made with beer. In the former, all the impurities have been removed by distillation, while in the latter they are all retained. To say that vinegar made with acetic acid is unwholesome is false. It is just as wholesome as the beer vinegar, if not more wholesome. To say that it is not vinegar is also false. It is as much vinegar as distilled vinegar from grapes or from beer.

No man has a right to say, "Vinegar made from acetic acid is not vinegar, because I say it is not." The Board of Health has no right to stop the sale of acetic acid vinegar if it is sold openly as such. If acetic acid vinegar is sold with a label "Genuine Malt Vinegar," then there is obvious deception. But a certain firm puts up and sells large quantities of vinegar labelled "white vinegar," and analysis show that it is a solution of acetic acid of great purity. Shall anyone dare to say that they are wrong in doing so? Their preparations have a world-wide reputation. But if it is right for one firm to sell a white distilled vinegar, surely it is no worse for others to sell a vinegar of the same composition, only colored with burnt sugar, to suit the popular fancy.

The Recent Prosecutions.

The fact is that the recent vinegar prosecutions inflicted a great injustice upon many shopkeepers. They offered for sale a perfectly wholesome article. They did not pretend that it was malt vinegar. In some instances they distinctly stated that this was not the case. And it is an injustice and a hardship that such should not be allowed. There was no fraud intended or practised. The article offered was perfectly wholesome. And if people are content to use such in place of malt vinegar, they should be allowed to do so.

It is to be sincerely hoped that those who have the matter in hand will not let it drop until they have vindicated their claim to sell a wholesome solution of acetic acid of full strength as vinegar, to all who may be willing to buy the same. There is no question of inferiority, as the acetic vinegar is every whit as good as that made from beer. The temperance people should prefer the acetic vinegar to the beer or the wine vinegar.

An Appeal for Common Sense.

If the law prohibits the sale of acetic acid vinegar, then the sooner the law is altered the better. If this matter is only a question of a regulation of the Board of Health, then as reasonable men the members of this Board will see the force of the arguments used by those who claim their right in this matter.

Let it be distinctly understood that acetic acid vinegar is not sold as malt vinegar; it is not unwholesome in any way; it is of full strength so far as acidity is concerned, and it contains no trace of foreign acids, such as sulphurous or sulphuric acid. It is sold as acetic vinegar, or acetic acid vinegar, and on its merits it will find its way. But to say that it is wrong to sell this article is absurd. If the law prohibits the sale it is only an example of the old proverb, "The law is an ass." At the same time, a gross injustice has been done to many honest traders.

HOW GROCERS CAN BE BENEFITED

Changes Suggested in the Division Court Act—Under Present System Expense is Too Great—Plea for Unity of Retail Merchants to Present Question to the Government.

To the Editor of The Grocer :—

For several years the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada have been endeavoring to secure a change in the Division Court Act, but have not succeeded, on account of the opposition from bailiffs and other officials. Last year the desired amendment was regarded as fair, and met with the general approval of the legislators, but just before the House was dissolved, an army of these officials met at the Parliament House and through their opposition the bill was again laid over.

The thousands of merchants all over this country should ask themselves the question, whether our laws are made for the officials or for the people ? Every retailer knows the complicated and costly machinery of the Division Court, and often the very unsatisfactory results obtained through it.

How Collector Loses.

It has been proven that it costs on an average over $2 to collect $1 throughout our whole country, to say nothing of the annoyance and time wasted. Besides, to do up with this, it appears that the sympathy of the judges, in the majority of cases, runs with the defendants. This seems to be based on the judge's idea that the merchants should not give credit, and for doing so deserves little or no pity. If he understood trade conditions as they exist, especially in our large cities, he might look at it from a different standpoint.

The retail grocers constitute the largest charitable institution in our country, and giving credit is absolutely unavoidable and even necessary. A few days ago about a thousand unemployed men met at the city hall, Toronto, for work. While all these may not be deserving, it is not exaggerating to suppose that at least 200 of them had nothing with which to buy their next meal, and perhaps have wives and children suffering for want of food. The city cannot give them immediate relief, and the only thing for them to do is to get credit from the grocer or starve. With many years of experience, and having met many such cases, I am pleased to say that at least four out of five of these poor unfortunate people will pay such accounts.

Censure Follows Charity.

What would be the result if the retailers would not have compassion on them and do this ? They would either have to beg or steal and run chances of bringing shame and disgrace upon their families, but through the kindness of the retail merchants any number of families are carried over such a crisis and enabled to protect their respectability and the honor of themselves and families. For doing this, should the retailers be subjected to censure, as well as be put to unreasonable expense and annoyance when he has to resort to the aid of the court for collecting ? From the small number who abuse the kindness of the merchant, under such circumstances, why should the retailer not be placed on the same level with the laboring people ? If a man works for another and for some reason the employer does not pay him, he goes to the police court, and without costing him one cent, secures the services of the court. The policeman serves the summons and the matter is attended to.

Many of the workingmen are making more net profit per day than the grocer, and are not tempted once to give credit, when the grocer is a hundred times, and why should they have this simple cheap and effective system for collecting, and the same denied to the merchant ? It seems to me it is simply unfair and unjust. But it shows that the laboring people demand and get what is right to protect their own interests, while the merchants neglect to obtain what they should have.

Some Suggestions Made.

An amendment to the present act, in my opinion, is absolutely necessary, and the merchants should rise in their might and demand it. If it is not possible to secure the same privileges the laboring people have, I would suggest that the court costs for $20 and under should not exceed $2, and when the court finds that the defendant owes the account sued, the court should arrange with him to pay at once or on time, by making him bring it to the court on certain dates. If he appears, and was unable to secure the amount, the clerk or judge should have the power to extend the time, but if he does not appear, he will be liable to be arrested for contempt of court. By this system the one who caused the trouble, and not the innocent grocer, would have to do the walking.

This bill will again be brought up during the next session, and I should like to see it thoroughly discussed through The Canadian Grocer, and delegates appointed from every town to meet at the proper time.

Yours faithfully,
A RETAIL GROCER.

CLERKING AT $4 PER WEEK

Nearly Fifty Years of Age and is Learning the Grocery Business—Pays His Own Board and Buys His Own Clothes—Agreement Lasts Until March.

How many grocery clerks are there who can live in a city like Toronto on $4 a week, pay their own board, and buy their own clothes ?

This is exactly what Chas. McMullen, until recently a citizen of Woodstock, is doing. It might be explained here, however, that Mr. McMullen has just begun to learn the grocery business, although he is more than 45 years of age.

He began his duties on Thursday morning, January 14th, in a King St. East grocery store. On that same day a Grocer representative met the new clerk, who was in the midst of dusting and cleaning the shelves—a job given him by his employer to allow him to find out what kind of goods were there and exactly where they were.

"I was out of work in Woodstock," he remarked, "and came to Toronto on a visit, thinking, too, that I might run across something to do. I have made a contract with my employer to work for him till March at $4 per week."

Work and He Agree.

Mr. McMullen has seen a good deal of life, but he is still active and healthy. He wants to work, and although he has passed the turning post in life, is anxious to learn the grocery trade and is willing to spend his time, ten or eleven hours a day, in a grocery store at $4 a week and pay his own board into the bargain.

This is not the first occasion that he has worked practically for his board. Rather than remain idle he has gone out on the farm to spend the winter choring for simply what he got to eat.

"Some of my friends," he told The Grocer, "are walking around the streets in Woodstock with nothing to do. They wanted me to do the same, but I struck out to get my board, anyway."

One of the best traits of Mr. McMullen's character seems to be that he is willing to learn. In addition to this he is amiable and neat and although late in starting should make a success at the grocery business. His first day in his new position gave him plenty to do. He had washed the plate glass window, and had done it well, although there is, possibly, a thing or two to learn in this connection.

His First Window Dressing.

The art of making attractive a window is not learned in a minute, as all window dressers know. The new clerk was doing his first work and although the display was not a brilliant one, yet to him at least it appeared much above the average. His idea was to get rid of a surplus stock of canned goods and syrup and these were displayed to the best of his ability on the floor of the window.

The manner in which he spoke of his first attempt showed that he was deeply absorbed in the task and that he was anxious to please his employer and do as much for him as possible. Among the canned goods in the window and on the shelves was a considerable quantity of sardines. The proprietor had asked him to mark the price down to 5 cents each and a roughly-printed show card pointed out the reduction.

"If I had my way," he remarked, "I would sell them six for a quarter—might as well keep the money in circulation and get in a supply of fresher goods."

Keeps His Customers.

Mr. McMullen has confidence that once he secures a customer he can hold him. The nearest position he has held to being a grocery clerk was assistant in a restaurant which he made a paying proposition when it was under a mortgage. He attributes his success to his ability to please his patrons—something very essential in the life of a grocery clerk who makes good.

"When March comes and my contract expires, I hope to be able to earn a little more money than four dollars a week," he told The Grocer representative, "as I shall then have nine or ten weeks' experience. I'm going to stick to it until then if I'm allowed to stay, even if I don't get very much pay."

Strictly Temperate.

Mr. McMullen takes a smoke occasionally, but he says he has yet to learn the taste of liquor. He does not believe a clerk in a grocery store should drink on duty. His contact with so many people, principally ladies, in his opinion, made it almost necessary that he should be temperate or lose custom.

Had Mr. McMullen started in the grocery busintss 25 years ago, with his industry and qualifications he would undoubtedly have made a success.

TRAVELER MAKES A CHANGE.

H. H. Livingstone Joins Staff of Mayell & Co., Toronto—Sixteen Years on the Road.

A traveller who has been on the road for some years is H. H. Livingstone, of Montreal, now with Mayell & Co. Limited, Toronto.

For sixteen years he travelled for the Pure Gold Co. of Toronto, paying especial attention to the trade in Ottawa and Quebec, but also doing an extensive business in other parts. During that time he gained the reputation of being a "hustler" and was a valuable travelling member of the company he represented. In joining the staff of Mayell & Co. he still retains his connection with his old customers on the road as manager of all the Quebec agencies for that firm. He is a man who has always been represented as dealing with his customers on business principles.

THE FORCES BACK OF BUSINESS

What Prompts Men to Launch Out Into the Mercantile Sea for Themselves—Mistakes That Are Often Met With—A Man's Present Condition Should be Carefully Studied Before He Makes a Change—Experiences of Grocers.

G. B. Van Blaricom

The world is a peculiar place when taken all in all. The ceaseless restlessness and agitated spirit of man is deplored by many, and the quality of stick-to-itiveness is loudly proclaimed as one of the chief elements of success, and so it is. On the other hand, everything has its limitations, and too much of a stated quality may mar the most promising career. The eccentricities all around us manifest themselves in many ways. Here is a young man anxious to get married and on the adjoining street is another resident mentally cursing his foolhardiness for ever undertaking such a step. Another resident in a town abhors the thought of paying rent and is almost beside himself with eagerness until he buys a house in which to reside. Another lives in his own dwelling and is advertising it for sale in the papers. He wonders if a purchaser will come along soon, and is willing to sacrifice his property in order to get rid of the responsibilities of ownership and taxes.

Merchants Make Mistakes.

The field of human activity and endeavor might further be surveyed. Many a young man, who has clerked for years, perhaps, in a grocery store, thinks all his troubles will come to an end as soon as he can find a suitable opportunity to go into business and invest what capital he has saved up. Across the way is a grocer who embarked in the trade himself a few years ago and he is to-day heartily sick of his venture. He wishes he could sell out and avows that he would never again be so unwise as to enter upon the troublesome path of "Going into business for himself." One man breaking his neck, so to speak, to start business, and the next one madly desiring to get out of it, thus demonstrating that it takes all kinds of people to make a world.

It Makes the World Go Round.

And yet, if it were not for this constant wish for change—the expectation of something better in another sphere of activity—the uneasiness of an energetic spirit and the buoyancy of hope—this would be a rather slow going world. It is this impatient disposition implanted within us, and the incessant desire to gratify it, that drives the world of business. It would never do for everybody to lay on his oars. The whole industrial and mercantile arena would stagnate. There would be no opportunities created, no new fields cultivated, no dreams of happiness looming up, and no wealth produced. The spirit of ambition would die, and responsibility would be shunned. Appalling would be the condition of things in general if competition never held sway, if all capital was locked up and every man was content with his lot. Stagnation would become rife and the progressive disposition of the age, the desire to accomplish, to overcome, to master difficulties, expire. Be thankful, then, for an active mind, the gift of imagination, and a happy outlook, even if your hopes are never reached.

Into Business for Himself.

Does it pay a young man to go into business for himself? is a query almost as old as the moral law. It is a problem which will never be satisfactorily solved except on its own individual merits. It depends to a large extent on the man himself, his experiences, his qualifications, his capabilities and his executive ability. The question is one too abstruse and perplexing to answer off-hand. A merchant remarked the other day, "I have gone into business for myself three times now, vowing if I ever got out I would never be so rash as to re-enter upon such a career, with its attendant cares and responsibilities, but will seek the quieter and less troublesome path of a salesman; but you see I am in the game again. I simply cannot keep out of it. When I am in I burn with a desire to get out, and when I am out I am consumed with a passion to get back. The cause is, I suppose, looking at it from different viewpoints."

Another young man who had also had similar experience, when asked if it paid to conduct a business for himself, replied, "Yes, if you invest your own capital and do not take in a partner."

Still another said, "I would not think of going into business on my own capital and would have a partner by all means as two heads are better than one."

Talking to one of many years' experience in the grocery line, he remarked, "I waited ten years until I accumulated enough money of my own to buy out a stock, and now, after these ten years of insight, if I had to start over again, I would go in on somebody else's capital and not wait to secure money of my own. Think of all the time I have lost."

Present Condition Important.

Another man, who had been in business for himself and had held good positions as a salesman, asserted, "Whether it is profitable to go into business and whether there is more money in working for yourself than for another depends entirely upon the kind of job which you hold. My own conclusion is, that if you have a position offering a fair field for advancement and if you are reasonably well situated in your present relations, by all means you should remain in the service of the house or firm with which you are engaged. At the end of ten or twenty years, in all reasonable probability, you will be farther ahead, not only financially, but in contentment, peace of mind and bodily health."

Where British Columbia Stands Alone

Companies Doing Business There Must First Secure a Provincial Charter—Otherwise Accounts Cannot Legally be Collected or Contracts Enforced—What Fees Have to be Paid—Manufacturers Think Dominion Government Should Take Action—How Some Have Suffered Financially.

A matter of importance to incorporated companies doing business in British Columbia, especially where contracts are entered into or orders taken, is that, unless an extra provincial organization has registered upon the commencement of operations in the Pacific Coast Province, it cannot legally collect accounts or enforce agreements. It is, therefore, not safe as one manufacturer expressed it, to do business there unless you have first registered and paid your interprovincial tax.

A case recently tried goes to prove that a company transacting business was non-suited by the Supreme Court of British Columbia, when action was entered to collect, on the ground that the outside company had not previously registered. Extra provincial companies, even if they have a federal charter and are licensed to do business in all parts of Canada, cannot, it seems, live up to the full privileges and powers accorded them, when it comes to securing orders in the far western province; and the regulation now in force would appear contrary to the spirit and intent of Confederation itself.

If outside corporations do not register and take out a license in British Columbia, the provincial courts declare that any contract, even if made through correspondence, is not enforcable. Why should the law apply to mail order business is the query? Surely it is exacting enough in its application to foreign companies selling goods by travelers, resident agent or branch office.

Fees to be Paid.

Here are the fees: Where the nominal capital does not exceed $10,000 there is a fee of $25; for every $5,000 of nominal capital, or part of $5,000 after the first $10,000 and up to $25,000, $5; for every $5,000 of nominal capital, or part of $5,000, after the first $25,000 up to $500,000, $2.50; for every $5,000 of nominal capital, or part of $5,000, after the first $500,000, $1.25. It can easily be seen what it costs to obtain a license. The smallest capital of the average incorporated organization doing business in the West would probably be $40,000, and the highest from $100,000 to $250,000, and in a few instances the capital stock might reach half a million or a million dollars. It would cost a firm with $40,000 capital $47.50 to secure the collection of even a five or ten-dollar account, or in other words, they would have to pay this to register and take out a license, otherwise they could not legally proceed to make clients or customers live up to the letter or spirit of any contract entered into. A business concern capitalized at $100,000 would have to pay $77.50 for a license, and one of $250,000 to hand over $152.50.

The Travelers' Toll.

This tax, it may be explained, has nothing to do with a traveler's tax, the two sometimes being confounded. The only travelers required to take out a license are non-resident representatives, selling or taking orders for liquor or tobacco to be imported. The license fee is $100 for six months and $200 for one year. Practically the same fees are levied in Saskatchewan, Alberta and Manitoba, and it may be added that no license is required in the West for the mere sale of goods with the exception of liquors and tobacco.

Existing Restrictions.

The regulation affecting outside or extra provincial corporations is the one to which serious objection is taken, and to which the attention of many manufacturers has of late been drawn by a number who have had unfortunate experiences with respect to collections. In plain language, the act means that while foreign corporations may do business in British Columbia without registering and securing a license, they are doing so at a risk—the danger of not being able to uphold their rights, make collections, or enforce the conditions of any order if any dispute or quibble arises, unless the courts are shown that a license had been taken out before any business was done.

It may be asked why did British Columbia pass such an act? Probably because the legislative body of that province was aware that eastern firms were all anxious to secure trade and build up a connection in the flourishing West. Realizing that comparatively few houses had branch establishments the provincial authorities evidently thought they might as well augment the revenue and have a generous slice of what was going.

Manufacturers' Opinions.

A prominent manufacturer stated that he believed if an incorporated company, seeking to make a collection of moneys due for delivered goods, was non-suited by the Supreme Court of British Columbia on the ground of non-registration, the company could, on appeal to a higher court, have the law declared ultra vires and the regulation repealed. So far no firm has fought the matter to a finish. Wholesalers and manufacturers want to know exactly where they stand, and if all contracts are void through neglect of registration, will the Dominion government disallow such an act which, to say the least, is evidently selfish, discriminating and contrary to a national spirit of unity and expansion.

The Kemp Mfg. Co., Toronto, when interviewed, said they had a branch office in Vancouver but had not registered in that province. A representative of the company remarked that it did not seem good law that an account or agreement could be annulled on such a flimsy pretext. It was not safe for any company to do business there and exact payment for goods sold, without first registering and taking out a license which involved considerable outlay.

The Macdonald Mfg. Co., Toronto, said that certain terms in a contract which they had with a customer in British Columbia were disputed. As the sum involved was small, the company decided that they would not go on with the suit as they had not taken out a provincial license. To do so would cost considerably more than the contested amount. It was strange that an account could not be legally collected unless an outside firm had secured a provincial license.

One Who Has Suffered.

Alfred Jephcott, president of the Dominion Paper Box Co., is one who has personally suffered, through another company in which he is interested being unable to enter action to enforce what they considered their rights. They were told by their solicitor that, as the organization had failed to register in British Columbia when beginning business there, they would be nonsuited. The legal gentleman cited previous cases of a like character which had been tried and the judgment delivered had stood and would likely stand as a precedent until carried by litigants to the Privy Council and set aside.

"We therefore decided," said Mr. Jephcott, "not to proceed with the case." It is not the duty of any one incorporated firm," he added, "to act as pioneer in this matter and bear all the expense of conducting a campaign on behalf of all the others interested, in order to test the constitutionality of the act. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association is the body to take this matter up, and present the injustice and narrowness of the regulation to the federal authorities, who I believe, would declare such an enactment ultra vires. Personally, I do not see how it can stand if put to the test, that a provincial legislature can frame such a law, and a provincial court put such a construction upon it. In my judgment, and in that of may others, the measure is in contravention of trade and commerce. The whole matter should be pressed home at Ottawa without delay."

To Take Definite Action.

G. M. Murray, secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said that he had received a number of complaints as to the British Columbia extra provincial corporation law, more especially with respect to the validity of contracts and terms of agreements. The matter was now being considered by the association and some definite action would likely be taken.

WORTH CONSIDERATION.

The attention of the Dominion Government should be forcibly called to the law existing in British Columbia which restricts manufacturers outside of that province from doing business within its borders without first registering there. It seems that even those who have been granted charters by the Federal Government and thereby given permission to do business in any part of the Dominion are not allowed the full privileges one would think they should possess when it comes to British Columbia. On the face of it this condition of affairs does not appear to be just but it does appear to be contrary to the principles of Confederation.

For a provincial government to claim that its laws and regulations are not to be ruled by those of the federal government certainly does not seem to be one of the fundamental principles of the unity of the provinces.

The entire nature of the law in British Columbia governing this question with some of its results is given in another column of this issue.

COMPLAINTS FROM ENGLAND.

Complaints have been received from the Department of Trade and Commerce at Ottawa, against the duty that English dealers have to pay on butter which they send back to Canada. They regard the law as unfair and inequitable.

Upon investigating the conditions which lead to the imposition of this duty, it was found that it was levied to protect the farmer, and has proved a great benefit to him. The first time the question was brought to the fore was in 1906, when a very large consignment of Canadian butter was returned from England, and local merchants were notified that they were expected to pay the duty on it. As the exporters here had not been officially notified that this duty would be levied, the department returned the cheques paid to cover the payments. Representations were made in regard to having the duty removed, but the department could not see it in that light, and the duty stood.

The elimination of this duty would tend to demoralize the local market, for the reason that there is practically no butter sent to England on consignment, the sales being made outright, and the only object the English buyers would have in sending it back would be to get higher prices than they could get at home, as would be the case when the English market would sell at considerably lower levels than in Canada. This would have the effect of bringing the Canadian prices down, and the farmer would be the sufferer, as well as the exporter. With the duty of three per cent. this is not possible now, and when once the butter is sold out of the country it is not likely to come back and bother the sellers.

DREAMING BUSINESS MEN.

Dreamers are often the butt of scoffers. But there is one thing to be said in favor of the dreamer. He is a thinker.

The trouble with too many men is that they do not think, and the books, the magazines and the newspapers they read are of a kind to entertain and kill time, not to improve their mind or stimulate their ambition and energy. Their associates are of the same class. There would be no heaven for them in the company of thinking people.

Much of the dreamer's thinking may be in the clouds; but it is better to think away up in the "blue" than not to think at all. The great thing is to think right.

Every business man who has ideas is a dreamer. Dream on, Mr. Business Man, and put your dreams into practical form as soon as possible ere a more energetic man than you who has been having similar dreams steals a march on you.

By all means dream, but at sun rise get busy to make your dreams come true.

SETTLING SMALL ACCOUNTS.

The first of the year is the great settling-up time in the business world, and in the process of squaring accounts and meeting obligations our relationship are so interwoven that in order to secure the best and most satisfactory results it is necessary for all to join in the move. If it is the duty of the retailer to wipe out his account with the wholesaler and the wholesaler with the manufacturer, it is surely the bounden obligation of the customer to clear his indebtedness with the local merchant. This is a matter to which not enough serious attention is given, with the result that persons are often careless and think that the merchant can wait. This is a grave mistake, and, if only those who have been accommodated, would stop to think, they would not ask a local tradesman to tarry longer for his money. If a merchant is kind and considerate enough to extend credit to a customer, surely the least that the latter can do, in return for this favor, is to make an honest effort to settle at the first of the year, in full, or, if that is impossible, then in part. How much happier things would be all around if a united, consistent effort was put forth to carry this out. These accounts are in many instances small, but in the aggregate they amount to a good deal and their payment means that the merchant is able to satisfy the financial demands made upon him.

This is so important and far reaching a question that clergymen have felt impelled to speak out on it in the interest of the community and the good of their people. For several years Rev. Canon Davidson, rector of Peterboro, and one of the leading members of the Anglican body in Canada, has on the first Sunday of each new year delivered an impressive sermon on this subject. At the services in his church on Jan. 3 he again took occasion to refer to this subject by urging prompt attention to all financial obligations, particularly small ones. He dwelt upon our inter-dependence in this particular, and how each could contribute his share in making 1909 bright and prosperous if this system was only followed out. He said that the discharge of this duty was a most important and far-reaching one. It should be done for itself and also because it had the effect of enabling others to meet their obligations. It is noticeable that the words of the reverend gentleman have had a good effect upon the people in general, and a grocery dealer in Peterboro informed a representative of The Canadian Grocer, that after the delivery of this sound, practical advice from the pulpit each year, several customers, well able to pay, but naturally careless or thoughtless, have awakened up and discharged their indebtedness.

The example of the rector of Peterboro might be worthily emulated by the clergy in other towns.

CATALOGUES FOR REVIEW.

The Grocer will be glad to receive catalogues or booklets issued by manufacturers, jobbers, etc., for distribution among the retailers for the purpose of reviewing them. Retailers sending for these catalogues are requested to mention having seen the announcement of their appearance in the Grocer, to show that they are in the trade. It should be a benefit to all parties to have it mentioned in the Canadian Grocer that booklets and catalogues have been issued and therefore this fact should be made public through the best medium.

DANGEROUS COAL OIL IN THE WEST.

It is now some three months since the people of Western Canada were first startled by a series of accidents resulting from the use of dangerous coal oil. The worst disaster was that in Swan Lake, Man. As a result of which several lives were lost but about the same time there was a series of mishaps all, or nearly all of which, were traced to the purchase of oil from one wholesale oil firm in Winnipeg about the same date. The authorities have conducted an examination into the circumstances without definitely locating the responsibility. It is, of course, the height of absurdity to suppose that a score or more of retailers deliberately adulterated their oil, and no one who knows anything whatever of the character of the men in charge of the wholesale firm in question believes for one moment that they have been guilty of any wrong conduct in connection with the matter. At the same time the fact remains that much loss of life and property resulted from the sale in Manitoba of dangerous coal oil—oil that does not come up to the standard required by law. A thorough investigation which will determine the responsibility for the sale of this oil to the retail trade is urgently required in the interests of the general public and the country dealers.

At the present time proceedings have been instituted against a hardware man in Alexander, Man., for the sale of kerosene which was responsible for a death, and it is said that other prosecutions of the kind are to follow. These prosecutions will probably lead to a judicial investigation which will determine the responsibility, but in the interests of the retail trade we would suggest that the proper course is not to prosecute individual dealers, but to conduct a thorough investigation into all the facts of the case. The retailer who has sold coal oil without any reason to doubt that it is of the standard required by law will suffer particular hardship if he is to be prosecuted for accidents for which he is not responsible. For the protection of the retail trade a searching investigation is urgently required.

VALUE FOR THE MONEY.

In discussing the essential principles of success with those in the trade, some novel ideas are sometimes enunciated.

A merchant in a small Ontario town who certainly has been successful in the grocery business, maintains that his success is due to giving his customers honest values. Now, we all know that honesty is an essential to success, but when this engenders a monetary loss it is difficult to make ourselves believe it, although every man who is honest with himself knows that it brings ultimate gain. Knowing this to be the case, it looks like a good investment, according to this grocer, so, for practical reasons if not from the ethical aspect of the question, it should be practiced. This grocer is honest with his customers in more ways than one. He not only gives his customers full weight and correct change, but he sells the goods which he knows will give the customer the best value for his or her money. If a customer goes to a store and purchases a cheap article, the chances are he will forget the price and only remember that he got mighty small value for what he did spend, and as an adage has it, "the memory of quality will remain long after the price is forgotten." To determine real value is not a difficult matter, and this grocer maintains that when he gives value for the money he receives he wins out in the long run.

SIBERIA AND ITS BUTTER.

On one or two occasions during the past year The Grocer has called the attention of its readers to the rising competitor which Canada has in the British butter and cheese markets, namely, Siberia. It was pointed out that the Siberian products were excluded from the British markets owing to the difficulties in transportation, which precluded the possibility of competing with the Canadian products. It is interesting to contemplate this country for a moment, and dispel from our minds certain delusions which have found root there.

The popular connection which associates Siberia with our thoughts is that of the penal servitude system of Russia. Prose writer and poet have illumined the pages of current literature with its devious workings, and chiefly have featured its terrors as associated with a cruel, cold, and inhospitable climate. In this way people have come to think of Siberia only as a frozen waste, or a wide flung expanse of white, stained with red. While this fact cannot be disputed it can be limited and in its stead a picture more alluring and reposeful presented. We think of our own country with its luxuriant vegetation in the summer and the real beauties of a rigorous winter, without discomfort, without the thought of economic, religious or climatic disorders which leave a trail of blood and wretchedness in their wake. In the same way we may with all truth, think of the largest part of Siberia, which is a wonderful country, lying as it does within the tropic and within the Arctic zones. As a dairying country its resources are superb, and the only difficulties, and those which are being rapidly overcome, are the introduction of modern machinery, and establishment of adequate transportation facilities. When these come, coupled with magnificent natural advantages, and the economic advantage of cheap labor, the world will think, perhaps ironically, that this country has been suddenly transformed into a powerful competitor, and its influence will be world wide in this respect.

POOR PAY CUSTOMERS.

One of the most important reasons why the grocers of a town or city should unite is to protect themselves against what is termed the professional deadbeat. He is the person who goes about from store to store getting himself as far as possible into the debt of those who befriend him.

In Fort William, as will be observed from the correspondence from there in last week's issue, the merchants are raising a barrier against the deadbeat. They have formed a Retailers' Information Bureau. The annual fee of ten dollars is paid by each member and this entitles him to the privilege of determining from the bureau whether a man can be relied upon or not. Where a merchant has lost by giving credit to someone who will not pay, the name of the party goes to the bureau. In this way Fort William merchants expect to rid themselves of a long-existing evil and to save money.

Japan Makes More Demands for British Columbia Apples—Decline in Potato Prices—Saskatoon Grocery Window Never Coated With Frost.

VANCOUVER.

January 26.—Retailers have received notice that there will shortly be an increase in the price of canned goods, and the opinion has been expressed that this is an arrangement to enable the wholesalers and the packers to clean out their stocks in preparation of the coming season's trade. If business in these lines has been a little slow, or even if it has not, the announcement that the prices are going to go up will stimulate the retailers to put goods on their shelves. This will relieve the large stocks held by the jobbers and manufacturers. The conclusion is a plausible one, but it is doubtful if either the wholesalers or manufacturers ever had such an intention in view. The matter is quoted just to show what some of the retailers think.

Since the cold snap, which departed last week, potatoes have been a strong feature on the market. The price until Wednesday last was $35 a ton, quoted without exception by the commission and wholesale men, but two days ago the price dropped to $28. Even that figure is $7 above what it was two or three weeks ago. A visitor from New Westminster stated yesterday that he did not think the high price would continue very long, as everybody's potatoes could not have been frozen. He thought that as potatoes were rather plentiful before the cold snap that it would give opportunity for those who had stocks to get rid of them. That may be, but last week there were few stocks in the city. The quantity of potatoes used in Vancouver is large, and the price advanced because potatoes were scarce here, and it was impossible to get more in.

On the Monteagle, which left on Sunday for the Orient, was another shipment of apples to Japan, consisting of fifty boxes of first-class fruit. Some time ago H. Duncan, a commission merchant of this city, went to Japan with the intention of introducing British Columbia fruit in that country, and it looks as if he has been successful, since he has ordered more. No particulars have arrived as yet, simply the cablegram asking that another shipment be forwarded. Rates of freight have been made fairly reasonable and negotiations to have them further reduced are now pending.

Considerable progress has been made toward the readjustment of the affairs of the Kootenay Fruit Growers' Association at Nelson, B.C. At a meeting recently held, when W. H. Ford was elected chairman, a new board of directors was appointed, and they were recommended to endeavor to arrange for the disposal of the season's fruit through a commission agent in Nelson. The Dominion Express Company was waited upon by a deputation and agreed to do all in their power to facilitate the shipping of fruit, and agreed that their agents in the various towns on the prairie should arrange sales, collect money from purchasers and act as settlers of any disputes which might arise as to damaged fruit, etc.

Since the coming seasin is expected to see the big quadrennial run of salmon, some citizens of New Westminster have secured the Industrial Cannery. The purchase price was $25,000, the principals being Martin Monk and Mrs. McDonald, and with them are T. S. Annandale, L. B. Lusby and J. Poingdestre.

Martin Fredenhagen, the new proprietor of the milk condensing factory in New Westminster, started operations on Wednesday of this week. He is operating under the name of the B.C. Milk Company. He formerly conducted a similar factory in Washington state.

Sol. Oppenheimer, who is in the commission business here, has taken over a large warehouse, which will be used for storage purposes.

Harry W. Swain, formerly a bookkeeper in the co-operative store in Chilliwack, has left Haney, B.C., and has gone to Grand Forks.

Harry A. Edgett, of the H. A. Edgett Company, grocers, of this city, was returned at the head of the poll for license commissioner. Mr. Edgett is now serving his second term.

D. A. Simpson, of Glencoe, Ont., has purchased a controlling interest in the Coleman Mercantile Company, from Smith Bros., of Lethbridge. Five years ago Smith Bros. took over this business and under the management of O. W. Benedict, the principal director, steady growth has been made.

SASKATOON.

January 26.—To prevent the goods on display being obscured by frost during the winter, J. F. Cairns has had the windows of his store ventilated by means of small air holes, which keeps the atmosphere on both sides of the glass about the same temperature.

The butchers have asked the city council to raise the license on butchers peddling meat within the city. The reason for the request, they say, is that not only farmers, but others having no place of business, are underselling them and sometimes disposing of meat not fit for food. The matter will be looked into by the city authorities.

A fire at Vonda this week destroyed the store and stock of Boese and Schmidt, and also that of Webb and Beems.

January 26.—Business is very much improved this week. A few inches of snow has made light sleighing and as a result people are able to move about.

One essential that Prince Edward Island is lacking is an up-to-date cold storage plant. At present anything in the shape of fresh cod, herring or mackerel has to be imported from Nova Scotia, while in the summer there is no place to keep eggs, fowl or any commodities of this nature. There is no doubt that there is a good thing in it for any one with some capital and enterprise.

A. Maclean & Co. made a good display of cigarettes by using an ordinary hoop for pinning the cartons on, thus making a striking cigarette circle. A good thing also in an arrangement of package tobaccoes is a long, narrow strip of board with the packages pinned on.

ST. JOHN.

January 26.—In the produce market last week butter and eggs were both reported easier. Tub butter dropped two cents a pound, and hennery eggs are now selling for from 27 to 30 cents a dozen, and case eggs from 27 to 28 cents. Lard advanced another quarter cent and is held for from 13½ to 13¾ cents a pound by the tub. Manitoba flours dropped and are now selling at $6.35 to $6.45 a barrel.

A provision dealer, in discussing the high prices being received by the farmers for their produce, referred to the increase in the prices in late years. Ten to fifteen years ago the average price of pork was 4½ to 5½ cents a pound, to-day 9c; beef, 4¼ to 6, now 7½ to 9c; butter 17, now 27; eggs 17 now 30c; chickens 40 to 70c a pair, now 70c to $1.50; turkeys 15c, a pound, now 23c; geese 60 to 80c each, now $1.00 to $1.50 each. These are the average prices for the year, although eggs have at times reached 50c per dozen, butter 38c per pound, chickens $2.00 a pair, turkeys 30c a pound, geese $2.00 each.

A correspondent in Sussex, King's County, writes:—"Butter is off in price as compared with the corresponding period last year. Wholesale rates are several cents below the quotation of January of 1908. The trouble is with the markets. The demand for butter this season is not nearly as great as was the case twelve months ago. A large amount of Ontario butter has also found its way into this territory."

Mr. Bustin for a number of years conducted a grocery and provision store with a butcher shop on what used to be known as Bustin's corner, at the junction of Charlotte and Princess Streets. He served as alderman for one term, from 1865 to 1866. He is survived by seven daughters. The funeral was held on Jan. 19.

The Railway Commission met here last week and listened to complaints from a number of merchants against charges made by the express companies. Barbour Co. —Goal, Seely; point, Barbour; cover-point, Leonard; centre, Howard; rover, McKendrick; wings, Stewart and McCavour.

H. E. C. Sturdee was referee.

The Barbour team challenged Baird & Peters to a return match on Saturday, Jan. 30, and the challenge was accepted.—W.E.H.

MONTREAL.

Jan. 27.—The Grocer is pleased to record this week the well deserved promotion of Alf. Foreman, manager of the Carsley Grocery, to the greater sphere of general manager of the entire downtown store of this firm. Mr. Foreman assumes his new duties May 1, when the present management of Carsley Co. take over the store now occupied by the W. H. Scroggie Company. "Alf." has for many years been the manager of the grocery department, under whose management it has met with good success. A celebrated merchant prince once said, that if a man could successfully manage a grocery store, he could manage most any kind of a business. Owing to the immense amount of detail, small profits and in some cases, the perishable nature of the goods handled, no small amount of executive ability is required to make the business a success. In view of this training, Mr. Foreman seems to be qualified to fill his larger and more responsible office.

The officers of the Corn Exchange Association were elected by acclamation, the nominations closing Friday, Jan. 22 at 6 p.m. The following is the result of the election: President, Joseph Quintal; Treasurer, Alfred Haplin; Committee of management, Messrs. R. W. Oliver, P. B. Earle, W. W. Hutchinson, J. S. Norris, E. S. Jaques, James Carruthers, W. I. Gear; Board of Review, Chairman, Edgar Judge, C. Esdaile, J. E. Hunsicker and Alex. McFee.

M. Mercier, late with A. R. Robitaille & Co., and M. Barbeau, have opened a large grocery store at the corner of Villeneune St. and Cadieuso St., Ville St. Louis, under the firm name of Barbeau & Mercier. They are conducting a cash business and so far have met with gratifying results.

The proposed action of the City Council, in taking away the privilege of selling milk from the grocers, and increasing the price of licenses, continue to be the chief items of interest among the trade. The milk question, however, is not of any grave importance to the grocers, but the imposition of a greater license fee to sell liquors is considered extremely unjust, in view of the reasons why it should be imposed as advanced by the City Hall people. It means that the great majority of grocers who use their license as a legitimate adjunct to their grocery lines will have to suffer for the sins of a few. It is felt that if some grocers are selling by the glass, and otherwise acting in contravention to the agreement whereby they received their licenses, they should be punished individually and failure to discover them, and mete out adequate junishment, is a confession of weakness by the detective and police force or whoever is to blame in the non-enforcement in the law.

The Lake-of-the-Woods Flour Mills Co. dropped their prices 30c per barrel and 15c per bag on Jan. 19.

Wild rumors are in the air about further extravagant cuts but at present there is not sufficient evidence to make the statement authoritative.

Tuesday evening, Jan. 26, the first euchre and dance of the Montreal Retail Grocers' Association was held in the Auditorium Hall, Berthelet St. During the first part of the evening cards were played, and after supper, which was served at midnight, dancing became general. The large number in attendance, testified to the popularity of the grocers' latest social venture. Representatives of the other branches of the association were there, and "there was a sound of revelry" until the early hours of the morning. The orchestra was good, likewise the supper, and the floor was in excellent condition and everyone enjoyed themselves.

Sir William Van Horne, who has just returned from Cuba, reports a flourishing condition on the island. Sir William said, in discussing the condition of affairs, "Business in Cuba has taken a decided upward turn since the elections and particularly since the harvesting of the new sugar crop commenced, all crops are good and the usual credits have been resumed.

HALIFAX.

Jan. 26.—Business is fairly good for this season of the year, though not quite as brisk as was expected. The absence of snow and the poor condition of the roads has had a rather depressing effect on trade, and the supplies going out to the lumber camps are smaller than usual. Some lines of canned goods are in fair demand. Prices are steady throughout the list, and collections are about on an average. High prices are still asked for apples. Some excellent No 1 Bishop Pippins were marketed this week and they sold for $3.00 per barrel. Considering the lateness of the season for this class of apples they were in excellent condition. The jobbers who bought this stock however, stated that the demand for pippins is very light at the present time. There is a good demand for spies and Baldwins, but these varieties are held by the speculators. So far this season 356,000 barrels of apples have been shipped through this port; 101,656 barrels were sent to Liverpool; 208,996 to London; 39,995 to Glasgow, and the balance to other ports. This is about 75,000 barrels more than was shipped for the same period last season. There are more apples in the warehouses in the Annapolis Valley to go forward this season.

The people of Yarmouth County, N.S., made money last season shipping blueberries to Boston. From Yarmouth 24,- 210 crates were shipped, for which $53,806 was paid by Boston dealers. All these shipments were in small lots, under $100 each.

Poultry is now very scarce on the local market. All the native raised stock has been cleared up and the dealers are now bringing poultry here from Ontario.

There is only a limited supply of fresh eggs coming in at the present time, and they are quoted at 35 cents per dozen. Case eggs are in good supply and vary in price from 25 to 30 cents.

The butter situation is practically unchanged. There is only a moderate quantity being marketed, and all the creamery stock offered finds a ready sale. Fresh dairy butter is very scarce and there are no small tubs on the market.

J. C. Smith, of Ontario, an extensive shipper of apples, now operating in Nova Scotia, referring to the condition of the apple market says: "Prices were low until about the middle of December, when they suddenly took a big jump and returns coming in now are fully one dollar per barrel better than those of a year ago, and, judging from all known conditions, are likely to continue so, owing to the shortage of the crop, outside of Nova Scotia. Halifax is practically the only exporting part for the balance of the season.

"The great bulk of the apple crop is now sold and owned outside of this Province, largely by English operators. Last year the growers got all the money for the crop, and the dealers lost heavily, but this year, with the December jump in prices, the dealers stand to recover a large portion of the losses of last season.

"Nova Scotia is now taking better care of the apple crop and devoting more attention to it than any other district, except New York State and the Pacific Coast, but there is still room for improvement in this respect. If Nova Scotia aimed more at producing quality instead of quantity it would pay the fruit growers better. If the farmers strove for quality rather than quantity they would double or treble their crop production and always be certain of a good paying market. There is much complaint at home and abroad as to fraudulent packing. When the packers see that the fruit is selected and properly packed and marked the apples shipped to the British market will bring much better prices."

LINDSAY.

January 27.—For a time the country roads could not have suited the grocers of Lindsay better, and trade was brisk, but there has been a setback of small dimensions. The weather has changed considerably and at present the roads are getting poor. However, on the whole there was a good attendance of farmers in town Saturday, the day that the farmer likes to come to town, and a good deal of trade buying was done.

Several confectionery stores were raided in Montreal last week and brandy chocolates seized, with the result that the proprietors of the same were fined. There are few grocery dealers in Lindsay in favor of selling this kind of confectionery. At one time one or two of the merchants sold this kind of chocolate and as they were refused to the children in the confectionery stores, these grocers sold a goodly quantity, but it is understood that there is not a grocery in town selling brandy chocolates at the present time.

Thos. Blackwell, who oftentimes visits Lindsay, is always welcomed by citizens generally. He at one time conducted a well established business in the premises now occupied by Adams Bros.

Adams Bros. secured the complete stock of groceries in the A. Primeau stand, except the fixtures, at a reasonable rate on the dollar. The stock was moved into Adams' store and is neatly arranged all by itself, so that it is easy to get at. L. A. Primeau is conducting business in the stand formerly occupied by his father. He is selling a much smaller stock than was formerly carried.

Considerable business is done here in the pressed hay line, although the demand at the present is not very brisk. Two grocery firms, Adams Brothers and Spratt & Killen, handle the pressed hay, and they ship it to all parts of Ontario.

Regarding the general grocery trade, apples are scarce and dear, spies selling at $5 per barrel. There is a fair supply of butter and the prices are fairly well maintained. Fresh eggs are coming in fairly well and there is a prospect for lower prices.

Ald. Calvert, who conducts a butcher business, is advertising eggs to be sold by the pound instead of the dozen.

Collections on accounts for January have been good so far.

LONDON.

Jan. 27.—Business, both wholesale and retail, is pretty fair here. The feature of the wholesale trade the past week was the advance of 10c per cwt. in refined sugar. Raws keep very high, and will likely continue so for a time. Teas are also still very high. Coffees continue to fluctuate, but the tendency is upward. Other staples are unchanged.

The Canadian Packing Company is said to have purchased a site for an abattoir. It has also taken over the Flavelle property on William St., and is now turning it into a packing factory.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the London Retail Grocers' Association held last week, it was decided to hold the annual banquet on Thursday evening, Feb. 18. It will be the second that the grocers have held, and President Thomas Shaw, Treasurer Ed. J. Ryan, and the Secretary, Cyril Hayes, are busy preparing a toast list. R. J. Donaghy was appointed chairman of the reception committee and William T. Mullins chairman of the committee to look after the music. The programme arranged will be a most enjoyable one, and invitations will be sent to all the members of the association and to the city travelers. The invitation committee will meet this week to complete its list.

Jos. O'Brien, London West, has sold his grocery business to Ernest Charlton, of Ilderton, who also bought the real estate.

KINGSTON.

January 27.—Many grocers are putting in silent salesmen and intend carrying a line of candies, chocolates, bonbons, etc. Confectioners are selling teas, coffees and canned goods; meat stores are doing the same, and many grocers sell fresh meats. This seems to complicate matters, making it difficult to define what a grocer really is.

The poultry show is on this week and promises to be the best the association has yet held.

The week past has been a notable one. The curlers' bonspiel was held and was a great success. Many grocers were in the contest.

Tenders are out for the reconstruction of the broom factory recently burned out.

A sudden change has come in weather conditions and as a result the markets are small.

Raffles came to town, and many a traveler is collared and taken to the Whig office for identification—no use resisting.

A peddler from Toronto, named Goodman Glassman, was captured by Policeman Arneil and brought before the magistrate. He broke down and cried and was allowed off. He was escorted to the train and sent back again.

PETERBORO.

January 27.—One of the ordinary commodities that grocers now report scarce are apples. One of the leading merchants stated that he did not have an apple in the store, but expected a quantity of snows on the morrow. The best quality of apples, however, he stated, could scarcely be secured and then the people would in most cases be averse to paying the high price that would have to be demanded. The farmers also report a scarcity of the winter varieties and but few bags are offered each Saturday.

The general line of groceries is reported holding its own and doing nothing out of the ordinary. Individual grocers are making their own fortes. For instance, one is advertising Bovril strongly, another is making canned goods his specialty, and thus the business altogether is progressing favorably.

It may be said that canned goods are generally strong at present and the sales are above the average. Winter goods of a special nature are also moving rapidly. This includes cocoa, chocolate, Bovril and other liquids which are sought after by the young people in particular. Oranges are inclined towards a rather low price, although the drop is not very noticeable. Thirty and forty cents a dozen is reported the best prices for navel oranges, and the Mexican variety sells considerably cheaper.

E. F. Mason's south store has a striking ad. of Bovril, representing the ghost of the Bovine. It has attracted the attention of a large number of pedestrians, especially at night, as it is then more prominent.

On Monday afternoon the auction sale of 1,000 boxes of Christmas raisins was begun and was attended by a large number of men and women, and a very representative number of the leading grocers. The first price offered was $1.40 a box and several hours later it was down to $1.05 and $1.00. It is expected that some of the grocers will purchase large lots of them, as they are said to be in fine condition.

There is no trouble being experienced from the potato supply, and the price continues at 20 cents a peck generally or 90c a bag.

A farmer was recently fined $15.25 for not delivering meat to a man who had paid him $2 as a deposit that it would be delivered. The man made no effort to deliver it and the police watched the market until he reappeared the next week with a new load. In the meantime he had sold the citizen's quarter.

There are an unusually large number of banquets being held at present—a fact that pleases the grocers, as they are indirectly affected, the goods being all purchased in the city.

It remained for several Peterboro people to open the first store in Gowganda, according to a letter sent home by one of them. David Conroy, of East City, accompanied by Frank O'Connor, Michael Conroy, John Heffernan and John O'Brien composed the party. They drove their own cattle ahead of them, breaking the way, and afterwards slaughtered them and sold them as fresh meat. They also have a small line of general provisions which they have arranged to keep stocked, and it is understood that they will carry on the business for a time at least. Some of the men carry on prospecting work while the others look after the store.

STRATFORD.

Jan. 27.—With such balmy weather as we have been having these last few days and the many farmers coming into the stores telling "how fast the spring plowing is progressing," it begins to make the grocer and butcher alike wonder where the ice for his refrigerator next summer is coming from.

The numerous January sales now in full swing among the dry goods men seem to be helping the grocery trade too. When a lady comes up town to get her bargains she usually drops into her grocery and buys something extra that she sees displayed.

Butter and eggs were in good demand Saturday. The market not being very large therefor a greater demand was created at the stores.

Most grocers report a good day's business on Saturday, two or three firms having their deliveries going till midnight.

Jas. Lloyd, wholesale fruit dealer, received his first car of lemons this week, since the great earthquake. These lemons were shipped from Palermo.

The Whyte Packing Co. have been enlarging their grocery department during the past week, which will help them handle their increasing trade.

W. J. McCully of the McCully and Haugh Grocery, made a business trip to St. Thomas last week.

Albert Lloyd, the Nile street grocer, who has been laid up for a time through illness is able to be around again.

CHATHAM.

Jan. 27.—Following Mayor Westman's suggestion, the civic property committee have held a couple of meetings for the purpose of hearing suggestions from citizens with reference to the closing of the market to retailers and wholesale buyers. The evidence so far submitted does not indicate any very lively resentment on the part of the public at large against the present "open market," only a few individuals being on hand to voice complaints. Nevertheless, some measure of restriction is likely to be enacted, much depending on the city's ability to exclude wholesale buyers.

The Retail Merchants' Association—which is Chatham's nearest approach to a grocers' organization, practically 50 per cent. of the active members being grocers—is having hard luck in the selection of a meeting night. The association deferred the meeting scheduled to take place on Jan. 12, to accommodate the Board of Trade, last Tuesday a concert attraction kept most of the members away. The meeting night has been an old grievance ever since the association started and uncertainty on this point has played its part in keeping down the membership.

A good catchy notion is shown in Harry Andrew's grocery, in the shape of a series of advertising cards tacked along the top ledge of the shelving, a few feet apart. The cards are home-made, of white cardboard, with red and black lettering, each containing half a dozen words calling attention to some particular line of goods, with prices prominently displayed. "The best 25c Japan tea in the city" is a sample. The cards by their very simplicity, attract attention in an age of flaming, bright-hued advertising posters.

Several grocers narrowly escaped being victimized during the past few days by a wily short-change artist. The man was an Abyssinian, John Griffon by name. Ex-Ald. Wm. Potter was one of the victims, the man deftly nailing $2 when Mr. Potter "changed" some bills for him. A similar game was played on Darwin Pelett, though that gentleman nailed the man before he left the store and compelled him to "cough up." Zakoor Bros., fruit merchants, whom he attempted to victimize, were wise, and instructed him to "get out and get." Griffon wound up in the police court this morning, when he was found guilty on two counts and remanded a week for sentence.

At the inaugural meeting of the West Kent License Commission, held this morning, Joseph A. Wilson, the Queen St. grocer, and the only remaining member of last year's board, was unanimously re-elected chairman.

An early closing agreement went into effect in Amherstberg last week, 22 merchants signing an agreement to close their places of business at 6 o'clock every evening, Saturdays excepted, from Jan. 18 to March 31. After that early-closing is to hold good only on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

P. C. Little, a Blenheim grocer, has branched out into a new line. In addition to a well-stocked china hall, he is now handling wall paper. Announcement to this effect has just been made through the Blenheim press.

GALT.

Jan. 27.—The grocery business, in fact all businesses, are brisk in Galt at the present time. The factories are resuming the ten-hour day, and the workers are spending their money more freely.

The price of brooms has been advanced at all the grocery stores, but as yet no public kick has been registered by the users, and it is not anticipated that there will be.

It is rumored that one of the foreign fruit dealers is in a bad way financially and that he will shortly retire from business. He is the largest fruit dealer in Galt and supplies all the other foreigners.

Concentrated Soups are being demonstrated at Sloan's this week. This novelty in the soup line is attracting a great deal of attention, and the quality of the finished article is highly commended by the ladies.

New evaporated apples are finding a large demand among those who cannot afford the genuine article.

John Sloan paid business visits to Hamilton and Toronto this week.

It was definitely decided to-day that a branch of the Potato Machinery Co., of Hammond, Ind., would be established in Galt. The company have purchased four acres of land on the Stone Road and building operations will be commenced immediately. The company is not securing any concessions from the town.

The Retail Merchants' Association is making preparations for its annual banquet. It is understood that the affair this year will be most pretentious. The association had had a very successful year, and has accomplished much in the interests of local merchants.

The Galt market is constantly growing. The attendance on Saturday was most satisfactory. Butter was 30c per pound and eggs 30c per dozen.

GUELPH.

Jan. 27.—"That was a great editorial that The Grocer had last week," said a grocer to-day. "That is getting right home to a few grocers in Guelph." On inquiry as to which one he referred to he said, "Oh, there was only one that caught me as being 'just right,' and that was the one 'Knifing the Other Fellow.'"

Ald. J. A. McCrea, of J. A. McCrea & Son, accompanied by Mrs. McCrea, left this morning on a business trip to New York. He will be away about ten days and we will be glad to hear his opinion on business on his return.

Most of the grocers have finished stock-taking and report that they have done better in most cases than they had anticipated during the past year.

Our attention was called recently to a rubber stamp that is being used by a United States firm which could be used quite successfully in Canada also. It was stamped quite plainly on the invoice and read:

"Our records show that you have in the past allowed us to make drafts for your account and then you send a check to reach us after the draft has gone forward. Kindly correct this by sending settlement far enough ahead to prevent draft being made, thereby saving much labor and expense. Our drafts positively go forward on date advised."

Bell Bros., butchers in A. W. Tyson's old stand, have sold to Warren Bros., of Aberfoyle.

Scott & Manning, a new firm, have opened a new fish store on Quebec St. This firm claim to have had 12 years' experience in Scotland and San Francisco.

The very bad weather on Saturday was the cause of a small market. Very few farmers came in as there was neither good sleighing or wheeling. There was not much change in prices, hay at $9 per ton being the most noticeable.

"I have been 30 years paddling up and down behind a grocery counter," said a grocer on Saturday, "and I want to tell you right here, it costs too much to do business nowadays," and to my mind I think he is right. For instance, and this is one question I would like to see discussed in The Grocer, the cost of delivery. We have anywhere from 30 to 40 grocery stores in Guelph and each has from one to three horses and vehicles on the road all the time. Why could we not have a general delivery system—something after the style of our large dry goods stores, only on a larger and broader scale, and have a delivery system entirely controled by one firm? This might be a good thing for the grocers to get together about and discuss.

BRANTFORD.

Jan. 27.—During the month of February the Grand Valley Radial Company will give cheap rates from Galt and other points to Brantford. Single fare rates during the week and on Saturdays a 50c rate from Galt will be given. The company and the local merchants propose working together in the bringing of people here on market days.

The Hampel Box Co., recently destroyed by fire, started work again this week with a full staff. The adjustment of the insurance involved some $6,000 on contents, building and equipment.

Fred Corey, east ward grocer, who has for the past seven or eight years conducted a large credit business, has announced that as a result of years of experience, he has decided that commencing Feb. 1st he will conduct his business on a strictly cash basis. This is being generously advertised in the daily papers and by circular letters.

There was a small market last week. The poor market accommodation the Saturday previous, which was very cold, seemed to have a tendency of holding the attendance down. The supply of meat was heavy and failed to find buyers on account of the mild weather. Butter sold at 28c to 30c; eggs, 30c to 35c dozen; chickens, 90c and $1 per pair.

FORT WILLIAM.

Jan. 26.—John King, the new wholesale grocer of this city, has gone east to arrange with manufacturers for the shipment of goods as soon as navigation opens. The house has been somewhat handicapped during this winter by not having had its building ready early enough to order supplies before navigation closed in 1908.

Such of the bankrupt stock of the Marine Grocery not yet purchased by other local merchants is now being sold retail through Mr. Mills, of Port Arthur.

Produce is reaching its top notch winter prices. Eggs, in the case, cost wholesale, 28c per dozen, while there is a ready market for local new-laid eggs at 60c per dozen. Very few of these are offering. The prices will probably remain about the same until Easter. New-laid eggs shipped in by express are retailing at 50c.

Potatoes are the same price as has prevailed through the winter—$1.25 per bag of 90 pounds—but the stocks are getting low and it is expected that some potatoes will have to be shipped in before the opening of navigation and these will retail for higher prices. Apples will also be shipped in by heated cars and will cost from $4.75 to $5 wholesale, which is the price for which they now retail.

Express charges seem to be almost as good as 100 per cent. duty on any produce shipped in this way. One merchant says he paid more in express rates than the actual cost of the fresh vegetables that he had ordered, and the same, he states, applied to a shipment of finnan haddie sent by express to the same firm.

Canned goods have remained constant here for some time, being lower than last winter. There is a growing sentiment among buyers in favor of goods put up in the hygiene cans, which are lacquered in the inside and are supposed to be acid proof. There is considerable difference in the prices, tomatoes in the ordinary can retailing for 3 for 25c, and in the hygiene cans at 10c per can straight. Fort William buyers, however, are usually prepared to purchase the best, either in groceries or clothing, and merchants find that it pays to supply the very finest quality in this city regardless of the fact that the cost may be somewhat higher than that of inferior brands. This applies especially to teas, there being not a great demand for any of the cheaper grades, which retail below forty or even fifty cents.

The grocery firm of McLaurin & Dow has just installed the Huber system of accounting, and Mr. Dow expresses himself as well pleased with this method of grocery book-keeping. He stated that he considered the Huber system was ahead of all others. The point on which he laid especial stress when showing your correspondent the methods used in this plan, is that after every sale, that is to say, credit sale, the customer has a complete statement of his account to date. This is done on the counter check itself, on which a space is reserved for the statement of the balance previously due and this amount is filled in by the clerk, making the sale from the readily accessible record in the filing cabinet supplied with the system. The only doubt concerning the working of the system seems to be the possibility of too much extra work and delay being occasioned to the clerks at a time when there is a rush of customers in the store. Mr. Dow, however, considers that there is not enough time lost in making the entries on the counter checks to cause any appreciable inconvenience. The work of getting a statement of outstanding accounts can be got from the cabinet records with very little trouble, and the whole of the interior of the cabinet, with the statements can be lifted out and laid away at night in the fireproof vaults.

TORONTO.

Jan. 27.—Fire broke out in the grocery store of Maxwell Armstrong, 176 Terauley street, on Sunday morning, resulting in a loss of $750. The cause of the blaze is attributed to the appetites for matches by rats or mice. The building is owned by Mrs. E. Teasdall, Shaw street, and was damaged to the extent of about $250. The loss to the contents was about $500 and is covered by insurance.

A. E. Proctor, 239 Wellesley St., made alterations in his store which makes a decided improvement. His large front windows with the upper parts for displaying goods is unique and original.

"It is not now who can sell the cheapest, but who can give the best service," says an up-to-date Toronto grocer.

The clerk who is afraid he earns more than he gets, never earns what he does get.

"If a grocer does not like his business it is proof positive that he knows very little about it," is the opinion of another grocer.

HAMILTON.

January 28.—Our new council has got into line and with such a mayor it looks as if Hamilton will be well governed. On Monday night they put themselves on record as temperance people. Legally the city is entitled to 75 hotel licenses, while there have been only 68 issued by the commissioners. The council, by a vote of 13 to 8, reduced the legal number from 75 to 68, which is sort of "as you were." The trade was highly pleased at the election of John Forth as the president of the Retail Grocers' Association.

It is hoped that through his persistence a number of grievances may be straightened out. Among these are the peddler nuisance, regulation of the produce market, good roads by-law, the prohibiting of dogs on the streets during business hours, the question of transient traders, etc. Mr. Forth is a forcible speaker and being a member of one of the leading committes much is expected of him.

The very sudden death of Daniel Henry came as a great surprise to his friends. He was a grocer of many years' standing, a man of honor and integrity and he was esteemed by all who came in contact with him.

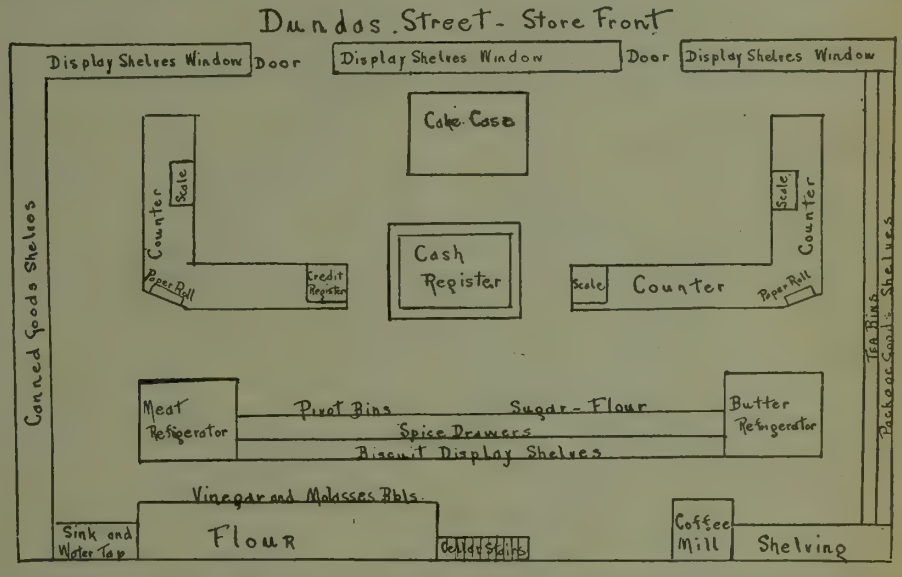
HOME FROM THE EAST.

After a two weeks' business trip through the Maritime Provinces, J. Ernest Clarke, Canadian manager for Thos. J. Lipton, returned to Toronto on Monday. Speaking of trade conditions in that portion of the Dominion, Mr. Clarke had found them particularly bright. This, it is claimed, is due to the immense tourist trade through the Eastern Provinces last year on account of the Quebec tercentenary. Mr. Clarke states that in connection with the tea trade consumers are getting more and more accustomed to buying better tea than in the past. This was noticeable in the Maritime Provinces.

PERSONAL.

H. C. Hawkins, secretary-treasurer for the Canadian Fish and Transportation Co., Limited, Blind River, Ont., called at The Grocer office this week. He visited the fish dealers both in Toronto and Hamilton and the pleasant smile he wore would indicate he was satisfied with his jaunt in this direction.

A MONEY-MAKER.



H. E. Fairfield, grocer, of Belleville, who is a close reader of The Grocer, recently noticed our forecast of the bean market. A few days later a farmer drove into Belleville with a load of beans containing 40 bushels. Acting directly upon the article from The Grocer, Mr. Fairfield bought the whole load at from 55c to 60c, selling them at $1, and making a profit of $16.

CASH REGISTER TOO LARGE

And London Grocer Builds His Store Around It—How the Various Departments Are Made Up—A Novel Experience in Merchandise.

Everyone who knows him will admit that John Diprose, the London grocer, is an enterprising man, but for once his enterprise got the better of him—at least for a while. That once was when he decided to instal a cash register in his Ridout Street store.

Mr. Diprose has three grocery stores in London, and some time ago he became imbued with the fact that to conduct a business successfully a merchant must be up-to-date himself and have store equipment in keeping with the times. Hard thinking along these lines made him decide to purchase cash registers for his stores. The registers selected fitted the stores all right—all but the Ridout Street establishment. For that store, which is a large one, John bought a large register; but when the instrument was delivered it would not fit—not fit comfortably. This was a difficulty that was not expected, and for a moment Mr. Diprose was non-plussed. But not for long. A quick survey of the store and a plan to build around the cash register soon evolved itself in his mind and the present arrangement of shelves and counters is the result.

Interior Lay-out of the Diprose Store, London, that was Built Around the Cash Register.

A Convenient Arrangement.

The cash register is the central figure and stands on a cabinet of drawers, each of which is for the use of the various clerks. There is a space all round. To the right and left are the counters which continue their way up the sides of the store. On each end of the counter is a set of scales to one side and a credit register to the other; while just at the corners where the counters turn to the sides are sets of wrapping-paper rolls. The side counters have scales set in the middle. Behind the side counters gre display shelves, those on the right being used for canned goods, and those on the left for bottled goods. The right side of the store is devoted to meats and the left to groceries.

It is at the back, however, where the radical change exists. A partition has been erected behind the cross-counter, either end terminating in a refrigerator—one for meats and the other for butter and cheese. Between these two refrigerators are placed a row of pivot bins for sugar and the heavier lines of groceries; above them is a row of drawers for spices, etc., and still higher a shelf on which are a row of biscuit boxes containing samples of all kinds of biscuits. Canned goods display shelves top off the whole.

Behind the partition and completely out of sight from the floor of the store is the store-room. Here is placed the vinegar and molasses barrels; the flour bins and the coffee mill; and the large and bulky packages of stock goods.

The whole arrangement is a neat, practical and effective one; every counter, shelf and piece of store equipment on one side of the store finding its counterpart on the other side; and yet every class of goods has a distinct place for itself. The front of the store shows three windows with two doorways. One window is devoted to showing meats and vegetables; the middle window to fruits; and the third window to groceries. Behind the centre window is a glass cabinet for confectionery. John Cummings, the brightest-faced man in London, who is in charge of the store, is an effective window-dresser, and the passerby is sure to give more than a mere glance at John's window pictures.

Altogether the re-arrangement is as near perfect as possible. There is plenty of floor space, the clerks have lots of elbow-room, and the stock is conveniently placed for handling and selling. It is as good a layout as can be seen in stores built specially for the grocery trade, and is better than a great many.

THE ORIGIN OF SMOKED FISH

Fire in a Fisherman's Hut in Scotland Said to Have Been Foundation of Present Industry.

An accident was the cause of the present smoked fish industry. It was a fire in a fisherman's hut that first revealed the possibilities of the great finnan haddie trade. The story is an interesting one to grocers and fish dealers, and is told by a Boston writer in an interesting manner.

Boston is represented as the centre of the finnan haddie trade of the United States. About 200,000,000 pounds of fresh fish are brought to T wharf every year by the three hundred or more vessels of the fishing fleet that land their finny treasures of the sea there. Some years, when the catch of haddock is unusually large, the amount cured here exceeds 5,000,000 pounds. The supply depends on the size of the catch of the fresh fish.

To people dwelling away from the seacoast finnan haddie is a mystery. Finnan haddie is the Scotch name for smoked haddock, as that is what the fish is. It is a Scotch creation, and it gets its front name from Findon, Scotland, where it originated, by accident, too, just as did roast pig as told of so succulently by the gentle Elia in his essay on that delicacy. Haddie, of course, is the diminutive of haddock.

Once upon a time, according to tradition, 200 or 300 years ago, as the story of finnan haddie has it, a fish house in the town of Findon, in which a lot of haddock had been hung up to dry, caught fire and was partly burned. When the flames were extinguished the haddock that remained were found to be thoroughly smoked. Some of them were cooked as an experiment, and they turned out to be such very nice eating that the business of smoking haddock was established there and then. Thus came into being F ndon haddock, as the smoked fish were at first called, the name later undergoing the corrupting change to finnan haddie.

Is Low in Price.

Boston is not only a great producer of finnan haddie, but a big consumer of them as well. The fish is low in price and very substantial eating as to quality, two things that no doubt account for its great popularity. It sells as low as seven cents a pound, and for the small outlay of twenty-five cents a fish can be procured large enough to furnish a good meal for a family of four, as a finnan haddie weighing three and a half pounds is considered a good sized fish.

East Boston, the chief seat of the finnan haddie industry of New England, has ten establishments devoted to the business of smoking haddock and other fish. A couple of others are located in South Boston. Oak sawdust is burned to produce the smoke by means of which the haddock are cured. This particular smoke is said to give the very finest flavor to finnan haddie. The fish are hung up to be cured while perfectly fresh no salt or pickle being used on them. Thousands of haddock go through the smoking process in a single batch.

Making Kippered Herring.

Abuot 2,000,000 kippered herring is what Boston's yearly output amounts to. A large share of these are consumed in New England, but big shipments of them, as well as finnan haddie, are made to all parts of the country.

A kippered herring is a combination of a smoked and pickled fish. To produce it the fresh herring is first put through a light pickling process, and is then smoked the same as is any other fish.

This double curing operation is what gives to the kippered herring its own peculiar flavor. The herring used for the Boston product are for the most part those caught in Newfoundland waters, these being considered the finest.

A pair of kippered herring—they are generally sold by the pair in Boston—cost but seven cents here, if you go to the right place for them, or eight cents if you are reckless. As one fish makes a very good meal for one person, kippered herring is pretty cheap eating, and it is wholesome, too.

Smoked salt herring is still an article of very large consumption, as it has always been from the day of its invention. It is eaten by everybody, everywhere. It plays a leading role on the free lunch end of most bars, and as a thirst arouser it is second only to salt cod.

Smoked herring is the cheapest in price of all smoked fish. Smoked bloaters, which sell three for ten cents, are nothing more than large fat herring.

The bloater is a favorite breakfast dish with many people, broiled and served piping hot, and in that form it is largely eaten here.

Other Smoked Fish.

The demand for smoked salmon and smoked halibut, the two most expensive varieties of smoked fish, is fully as heavy as it ever was, so fish dealers says. It costs from twenty-five cents to thirty cents a pound to indulge in smoked salmon, and from twenty cents to twenty-five cents in smoked halibut, but a pound of either kind of fish will go quite a long way in providing a meal for two or three people.

The smoked salmon used in New England comes mostly from the Pacific coast, where the fresh salmon are caught to the extent of 250,000,000 pounds a year.

The bulk of the smoked halibut comes from the smoked fish houses of Gloucester, where about 5.000,000 pounds of it are turned out yearly.

TO PREVENT DUST.

A new article about to be introduced to Canadian grocers is "Dustbane," manufactured at 269 Chesley street, St. John, N.B. It is a powdered compound used on floors and carpets for the purpose of preventing dust from rising, while sweeping. It is also claimed to be a disinfectant thus purifying the air where it is used. Its manner of use is simple. A handful or two is distributed at the starting point and is swept along before the broom, keeping the dirt and powder together in a line. Dustbane too is represented as having sufficient strength to be used over again with good results. Grocers who handle it will be given the privilege by the manufacturers to give out a can to customers who want to try it and if it is not found satisfactory it is taken back and no charge will be made for the quantity used.

The agents for Ontario and Western Canada are Messrs. Espey and Driesbach, 600 Crown Life Building, Toronto, Ont.

DAIRYING IN P.E.I.

On his way from Prince Edward Island, on the Atlantic, to Vancouver, on the Pacific, F. Skinner, traveling representative of the Charlottetown Condensed Milk Co., of P.E.I., is in the city calling on the local agents, Rose & Laflamme. Speaking to The Grocer on dairying conditions in the island in the east, Mr. Skinner states that Prince Edward Island is rapidly becoming prominent for the cleanliness of its farmers engaged in dairying. The water there is almost entirely obtained from springs and is therefore clear as crystal. This spring water is used not only for cattle, but everything else, it is so common. Great pride is being taken, too, by the farmers there in the condition of their cattle stables. They use lime in them and other disinfectants, taking special care to keep them clear of all bacteria. The pastures, too, are splendid, and thus a high grade of milk produced.

The company Mr. Skinner represents has Premier Hazsard for its president. The manager is Harry Winchester.

TRAVELERS' MEETINGS.

The first regular meeting of the board of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada will be held on Saturday afternoon, January 30th, in Toronto.

On Saturday also of this week the annual meeting of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society of Toronto will be held.

LIPTON'S NEW YORK FIRE.

The establishment of Thomas J. Lipton in New York was almost completely destroyed by fire on Jan. 8th. The block in which the business was carried on was left in an unrecognizable condition, due to the fact that three large fires occurred simultaneously, so that the forces of the firefighters became distributed. The cause was unknown. The firm immediately secured temporary offices at 113 Hudson St. and were able to meet their deliveries in tea a few days later. New York coffee roasting firms offered their facilities and orders for coffee were also almost immediately filled.

FAT STOCK SHOW.

The Fat Stock Show in West Toronto will be held next week on February 2, 3 and 4.

RECIPROCITY DISCUSSED.

The results of the Board of Trade Council elections in Montreal were announced in the Exchange Hall at noon, January 27th, at a special general meeting of the Board of Trade. The following are the results of the elections to the council: — President, F. Robertson; first vice-president, George L. Cains; second vice-president, R. M. Ballantyne; treasurer, J. R. Binning; W. Agnew, John Baillie, G. F. Benson, J. H. Burland, H. R. Drummond, J. Ethier, W. P. Hunt, Robert Ironside, J. R. Kinghorn, R. Wilson Reford, J. A. Vaillancourt and Norman Wight.

The following were elected to the board of arbitration:—A. A. Ayer, James Carruthers, George Caverhill, W. W. Craig, T. J. Drummond, C. B. Esdaile, W. I. Gear, E. B. Greenshields, A. J. Hodgson, Alex. McFee, John McKergow and Robert Reford.

After the results were announced the new president was asked to assume the chair. Mr. Robertson briefly expressed his thanks for having been elected, and assured those present that the new council would give the Board of Trade good service.

Alex. McFee then made a few remarks relative to what T. J. Drummond said the previous day in his valedictory address on reciprocity. "I think that we cannot but feel that Mr. Drummond in his address gave us somethink that we cannot but feel that Mr. procity. Mr. Drummond will have the hearty support of every member of the Montreal Board of Trade on this matter. I think we should support in the strongest way possible the opinions expressed by Mr. Drummond. There is no favor in the majority of men of business in this city with the proposal of reciprocity with the United States, but there is a feeling here strongly in favor of the establishment of closer trade relations with the Mother Country. In the Mother Country at the present time there is a strong movement along the lines of national union—national union means the establishment of closer trade relations between the various members of the British Empire.

Mr. McFee concluded by stating that much thanks was due to Mr. Drummond for what he said relative to the matter. "If reciprocity is to take any definite and tangible form it must be between Canada and Great Britain." The meeting then closed.

In the elections 850 votes were cast, and two were spoiled.

THE MANUFACTURE OF EDAM CHEESE.

When Month Old it is Washed in Water and Rubbed With Linseed Oil.

So many varieties of cheese are now on the market that it is sometimes difficult for the grocer to keep track of them all and more difficult to understand their manufacture. Grocers who deal in the Edam cheese will be interested in knowing something of how it is made.

Edam, in the red circular tins, well known to the critics, is a hard rennet cheese produced in Holland; it is also known as Katzenkopf, Tete de Maure and Manbollen. The best of the product is made of unskimmed cow's milk, but much of it at the present time is made from milk which has had at least one-half of the fat removed. The cheeses are round and are colored deep red on the surface or wrapped in tinfoil.

The perfectly fresh milk is set at 90 deg. to 95 deg. F. Color is added, and sufficient rennet is used to coagulate the milk in fifteen minutes. The curd is cut, and after a very short stirring is allowed to settle to the bottom, when the whey is dipped off. The curd is gathered in a pile, and pressure is applied for a short time to expel the whey. Care is taken in the meanwhile that the curd does not get below 82 degrees or above 90 degrees. The curd is then ready for the press. Sometimes wooden molds are used, but the best are made of iron. An attempt is made to put just sufficient curd into the mold to make a perfect sphere when pressed. When the mold is half full a little salt is added. When the mold is full, it is pressed lightly until the cheese will hold its form, when it is taken out and immersed in water for two minutes at 125 deg. The cheese is then put in the press, where it remains for twelve hours. It is then removed from the mold and placed in another form resembling the mold but without a cover, and having a hole leading from the bottom. The cheese is salted by rubbing salt on the surface. Sometimes it is kept in a salt bath for a day before putting salt on the surface. Following the salting, the cheese is washed in hot whey, and the surface is scraped smooth. It is then taken to the ripening cellar, which should have a temperature of between 50 deg. and 70 deg. Here it is turned daily for a time, and finally twice a week. In the meantime it is occasionally moistened with cold water or fresh beer.

When the cheese is one month old it is washed in water at 70 deg. for twenty minutes, and then placed in the sun to dry, after which it is rubbed with linseed oil. Before shipping the cheese is colored, usually red, but for some markets it is colored yellow with annatto. This coloring is done with a watery solution of litmus and Berlin red, or with carmine.

OF INTEREST TO TRAVELERS.

White Swan Spices & Cereals Limited, Toronto, have again secured the services of Frank Clarkson, who until a few months ago pushed White Swan Spices, etc., in the Northwest Territories. This company has now divided the territory and Mr. Clarkson will, in future, work south of the main line of the C.P.R., west of Winnipeg to Calgary, while T. Fournier will represent White Swan goods north of this line. We are also advised that the company now has British Columbia well in hand.

POISON IN SOME FOOD.

On Thursday night of last week Mrs. Samuel Grier, her son Reginald, aged 16 years, and her housekeeper, Mrs. Horner, living at 457 Jones Ave., Toronto, suffered from the effects of poison in some food they ate for their tea. They had meat pies and canned tomatoes and it is yet a speculation as to which was the cause. Mr. Grier himself was not in for tea. He is an old grocer. None of the three died from the effects as medical aid was quickly summoned.

COMMISSIONER AT BELFAST.

An Ottawa despatch states that Frank Bickerdike, son of Robert Bickerdike, M.P., has been appointed Canadian Trade Commissioner in Belfast, Ireland. This is the first trade commissioner of the Dominion Government to be established in Ireland.

THEY WILL GET ON.

Boyle & Cragg have purchased the general store business of the late G. W. Burrows, of Conn. They are enterprising men who will make the most of their opportunities and unearth a few that may not lie bare on the surface.

CONDENSED MILK WAR.

At present there is a merry war in progress among some condensed milk companies and they are offering special inducements to the trade. The growth of this business has been wonderful within the last few years, and is yet making rapid strides. The same may be said of evaporated cream.

EARLY CLOSING ADVANCING.

In his letter to The Grocer, one of the correspondents conveys the news that early-closing has been adopted by the merchants of Ridgetown, Ont. They have decided to close their stores at six o'clock every evening with the exception of Saturday. This is a step in the right direction and should be an example to the grocers of any village, town or city to do likewise. What pleasure does a grocer, not absolutely overruled by his business, receive who begins his duties every morning of the year at seven o'clock and sticks to his store until the hour of midnight approaches? Where possible the grocers should endeavor to get together, work out a system of early closing and be bound by the rules and regulations of the agreement made.

If all grocery stores close at a certain hour there is no well-founded reason why any of them should lose money.

TRADE NOTES.

V. Tremblay & Co., general merchant, St. Simeon, has assigned.

All the officers of the Chambre de Commerce were re-elected in Montreal this week. They are: Isaac Prefontaine, president; A. V. Roy, first vice-president; F. C. Lariviere, second vice-president; Joseph Fortier, treasurer, and F. Bourbonniere, secretary.

A new business firm, that of Bishop Sons & Co., Ltd., has come into existence at St. John, N.B., replacing the house of Bishop and Monroe, of which the principal was Hon. R. K. Bishop. The firm expects to do an extensive fish and supplying business as well as dealing in wholesale dry goods, hardware and groceries.

Montreal, Jan. 28, 1909.

From the information available, indications point to a good spring's business. This is probable, on account of the somewhat greater latitude banks are allowing their customers. In the country conditions are of the very best. The recent thaws have provided sufficient water for stock, and the roads are good. Travellers speak most optimistically of the prospects there. Collections are on the whole very good. Trade although not excessively large, is steady in volume. The chief items of interest during the week, have been the advance in sugar, and the decline of flour. Two of the largest milling companies in Canada dropped their prices, and were soon followed by the others. There has been a stronger tone displayed in the sugar market for some time, and this has finally culminated, in a rise of ten cents by the refiners. Lard continues strong owing to the scarcity of hogs. Sal soda has advanced 5 cents. Owing to a good crop, Rangoon rice is weaker, having declined 10 cents. Vegetables are generally speaking easier, and fruits have shown slightly stronger tendencies. Fish has remained in the aggregate, about the same, some lines declining slightly, while others have gone forward somewhat.

Butter is firm for creamery lines, and rolls are a shade easier, owing to increased receipts. Cheese remains firm with fairly good export demand. Eggs continue in good demand, and prices are firm. New laids are coming forward more freely now, and a decline may take place in the near future. Other lines remain in practically the same position as when last reported.

SUGAR—The sugar market advanced 10 cents on Saturday, owing to a more speculative view of affairs in Cuba. This movement should not cause any apprehension as it is thought the market will remain steady now for some time. Locally the demand is very good for this time of the year.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Advance of 10 cents.

Spices—Ginger crop short.

Evaporated Apples—Fair demand.

Prunes—Good movement.

Tea—Quiet.

Toronto, Jan. 28, 1909.

An advance of 10 cents in sugar is the feature of the market here this week. This occurred on Saturday of last week. There has been a good demand in sugars, the advance here following that of refined sugar in New York.

Generally the wholesalers report a gradual but slow advance in trade.

There has not been very much movement in teas during the week, this market being somewhat quiet but with a better future.

Some fair sales have been made in canned goods and this market is firmer.

SUGARS—On Saturday there was an advance of 10 cents in almost all kinds of sugar. The demand has been good but at present it is not anticipated another advance will be made in the near future. This raise was unexpected.

TEA—There has been an easing off in lower grade teas and the market this week is reported as quiet.

COFFEE—Nothing outside of the usual regular demand is noticeable in the coffee market.

DRIED FRUITS—Now is the proper season for prunes and this week the movement is noted as good. There has been added since last week the 30-40's 25 lb. boxes. From now on apricots should sell well as this is the season also for them. The season for peels is over and little stir in them is noticeable. Figs are pretty well cleaned out and if anything, there is a scarcity in them. There is the regular movement in currants and raisins while dates are quiet.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, January 28, 1909.)

The volume of business is large for the month of January and all indications point to a record year's business. Collections are improving, but they are not yet so satisfactory as might be desired. There is still a large portion of last year's wheat crop to be realized on and the spring months should see a further improvement in business conditions. Another good crop will mean real prosperity.

While the volume of wholesale business is large there is a great deal of local competition, which is forcing prices in some lines below the level of legitimate profit. Competition of this kind is of little real service to the retailer and it is the one really unsatisfactory feature of the business situation.

BORROWING TO MEET DISCOUNTS

"If a merchant is unable to discount his bills for merchandize and yet can get credit at the bank, does it pay to borrow and take his discounts?"

This question was put to a leading credit man for a wholesale grocery house this week by the Los Angeles Commercial Bulletin.

"Figure it out for yourself," he replied. "On sugar the cash discount is 25 cents a sack, or an average of about 4 per cent. Cigars pay 3 per cent. and on some brands as much as 5 per cent. Tobaccos pay 3 per cent. Woodenware pays 2 per cent. The ordinary run of groceries pays 1½ per cent. Some goods are billed net, but these will not average much more than 15 to 20 per cent. of the total volume of business. Average up the whole line carried by the retail grocer including sugar and the cash discount will reach fully 2 per cent., if every discount is taken. This average of 2 per cent. can be taken if payment is made within 30 days. Now suppose the merchant does not take his discount but pays at the end of sixty days. He is losing two per cent. for the use of the wholesalers' money for an extra thirty days. Two per cent. for thirty days on a basis of 2 per cent. per annum. He can borrow money at the bank for 7 per cent.—before the financial flurry it was 6 per cent. and will be back there again soon. Thus a thousand dollars borrowed and used in discounting bills would cost $70 for one year and if kept turning would produce $240 in cash discounts. Even if a merchant could get ninety days' time on his goods he would be paying the wholesaler 12 per cent. for the use of the money as against 7 per cent. at the bank. In these modern times the man who can't discount his bills one way or another has a poor chance."

"The man who discounts his bills usually buys cheaper than the 'long timer,' doesn't he?" was asked.

"Well, we are supposed to treat everyone alike, but the natural tendency among most houses is to give the cash man a little bit the edge on the slow pay man. It's natural in any business."

SMALL PROFITS OF THE CONFECTIONER.

"Yes," remarked an Ottawa confectioner recently to The Canadian Grocer, "some persons think there is big profit in our business. They see our shop crowded, especially on Saturday nights and think we take in a lot of money and make big profits. They are mistaken, for the sales of a confectioner are not large and, if he does make a fair margin on what he sells, look at what he loses on the goods that he cannot dispose of. When a cake is two days old it is no longer fresh and there are few things harder to dispose of than a stale cake. We may offer it at a greatly reduced rate and then we frequently cannot sell it. The result is that we have to throw away or give away many cakes and the profit, which we have made on the ones we have disposed, vanishes. Of course, there are a few cakes which we can use in making smaller ones but believe me when I say that we make use of very few of them in the manufacture of other kinds. The majority of our layer cakes, if not sold when they are fresh and nice, are either thrown away or given to the poor. Fruit, confectionery and grocery stores have to suffer in this respect in a way of which the public knows little and probably cares less. These businesses have to shoulder many losses arising from the whim of the public, the condition of the weather and delays in shipment or transit."

CHINESE TEA INDUSTRY.

The Manner of Preparation for the Market, and for Shipment.

(By Charles Denby, Shanghai.)

Tea is not placed on plates for drying and withering,, but on protected bamboo mats, from which it is impossible for the wind to blow it. Green tea and black tea are prepared quite differently. The leaf of the green tea, immediately after picking, is partially dried in the sun or by artificial heat, and subsequently, at the pleasure of the tea man, is dried, rolled, and colored in iron pans over a slow charcoal fire. Then the leaf is sifted according to its size and shape, making such grades as Gunpowder, Young Hyson, and Hyson, as known in the foreign markets. After this process is finished it is put into packages or chests, weighing between 60 and 70 lbs., ready for export.

The color of black tea is due in no way to coloring matter, as is commonly supposed, but is caused by the withering or fermentation. Immediately after picking it is slightly withered or fermented by being placed in the sun, and the expertness of the tea men is shown in his being able to know just when to stop the withering or fermentation. After this leaf is rolled in bamboo trays and fired in pans until thoroughly dry and ready for packing. These teas are packed in chests and half-chests for export, and in case it comes from the tea man in smaller packages, it is repacked to suit the wishes of the purchaser. Tea chests are practically all made in the same manner—of wood, lead lined, and when ready for export are wrapped with coarse Canton mats.

Both tea dust and common grades of black tea are made in the shape of bricks, weighing usually between 1½ and 2 pounds. All teas in this shape are exported to Siberia and Mongolia and in a less degree to Russia.

BENZOATE NOT INJURIOUS.

So Decide Referee Board of Chemists Appointed by President Roosevelt—Dr. Wiley Contradicted.

That sodium benzoate is not injurious to the health when used as a food preservative and that it does not affect or impair the quality or value of the food, was, in short, the decision reached by the referee board of chemists at Washington, D.C., U.S.A., which was appointed to consider the conclusions arrived at by the Bureau of Chemistry, of which Dr. H. W. Wiley is the head. This decision is exactly the reverse to that of Dr. Wiley's, and is of great importance to canners principally.

The report unqualifiedly endorses the use of benzoate from the physiological standpoint and does not leave the slightest ground for retreat for the Bureau of Chemistry in the Department of Agriculture in the United States. The referee board pronounces the use of the material in foods not harmful or deleterious to health.

The same general plan of procedure was followed in all three experiments made. A certain number of healthy young men were selected as subjects, and during a period of four months these men under definite conditions of diet, etc., with and without sodium benzoate were subjected to thorough clinical and medical observation, while the daily food and the excretions were carefully analyzed, and otherwise studied and comparisons made. The conclusions arrived at were :

Sodium benzoate in small doses, mixed with the food, is without poisonous action, and is not injurious to health ;

Sodium benzoate in large doses mixed with the food has not been found to exert any deleterious effect on the general health, not to act as a poison in the general acceptation of the term. In some directions there were slight modifications in certain physiological processes, the exact significance of which is not known ;

The admixture of sodium benzoate with food in small or large doses has not been found to injuriously affect or impair the quality or nutritive value of such food.

Had Nothing to Say.

Dr. Wiley, on being asked what he had to say regarding this finding, was very reticent. He had not seen the report when interviewed and had nothing to say.

When the substance of it was made known to him he declined to discuss it until he had read it in full.

It is stated in Washington that there will be severe pressure upon the Administration, in view of the complexion of the report, to call for Dr. Wiley's retirement, and that in the event he does not voluntarily resign he will be obliged to do so by the President or by the incoming Administration. There has been no announcement of any sort on the topic thus far and it is expected in many quarters that instead of taking action now, President Roosevelt will prefer to leave the situation to be dealt with by the incoming Administration.

WHAT TO DO IN FEBRUARY

Ged Rid of the Remnants From the Old Year—A Time for Making Plans for the Future—A Lesson Taught by a Clerk's Carefulness—Some Simple Window Displays That May be Used.

Some business men acquire a habit early in their career of looking upon the winter months, succeeding Christmas, as unproductive, and consequently are too apt to lay back on their oars, and take matters as they are. It has been proven, however, that by proper preparation, and a little judicious advertising, these months need not be as dull as they otherwise might be. The chief function of February should be to clear up as far as possible what is left of the winter stock, and prepare to make an early bid for the spring trade.

This can be done by carrying the usual January sales into February, and in this way, any surplus stock can be completely cleaned up. The general dullness of the month will afford ample time for the grocer to give some additional attention to interior arrangement, and the decoration of windows. This is particularly important, as people are generally more or less apathetic, and require all kinds of stimulants to make them buy. In view of this fact then, the grocer should make his window particularly attractive. At this season of the year, it is rather difficult to have much novelty, so far as products are concerned, consequently considerable ingenuity, and originality should, if possible, be displayed, in the arrangement of the window.

A Butter Window.

It is possible to make pretty windows with comparatively commonplace and unattractive materials. Take for instance butter, the writer remembers an exceedingly effective window display of this product, which was arranged as follows: The floor of the window was covered with a spotlessly clean white cloth, and in the centre, there was a plain white platter, with a large piece of tub butter irregularly shaped, on it, and on either side, the pound blocks of high-grade creamery butter were arranged, in the form of geometrical figures. A round placard bearing these words, was placed on the central mass of butter, "Every one wants good butter, whether they have other things or not, and here is where you can get it."

They Want Good Butter.

This touched a vulnerable point in every one alike, because it is a fact, that people who will buy second-grade goods, in most lines, demand the best quality in butter. Many designs can be worked out with butter blocks. One grocer has built a diminutive castle in his window with its traditional watch tower, moat and drawbridge. Canned goods on which people largely depend at this season of the year can be worked into many attractive forms. A Montreal grocer has arranged a very pretty window display of canned soups, in the form of a large wheel, and in between the spokes, he has various varieties of beans, peas and other products. On a large can in the centre, forming the hub of this, he has a nice display card, stating, "These are the things of which good soups are made."

For Smaller Stores.

February is generally a month of coughs and colds, and in small country grocery stores where a stock of patent medicines is kept, a specialty can be made of cough mixtures. The following arrangement will be found effective and pleasing. Many mixtures which are prepared for coughs and colds, are named from various woods, either pine, spruce or balsam, because the chief ingredient in these remedies is derived from some one of these woods. Clean out a window and make mounds of clean sawdust in it, using whatever wood is appropriate, and then scatter a few bottles over it. At the back and sides the effect is further enhanced by putting in a few short trees of the same kind of wood as the sawdust. It is surprising what a delightful and healthy perfume this display will diffuse throughout the store.

In view of the fact that February generally permits a little time for investigation, it is well to observe the work of clerks, and see if they can be improved by a little advice and instruction, and time can also be spent very profitably by visiting other stores where new ideas may be obtained.

Make Parcels Neat.

,With reference to clerks, a very good story is told of one clerk, who took very much pride in his neatness in tying up parcels. One day, however, a rural looking individual came into the store, and he thought to himself, that it would hardly be worth while to take much pains with his parcel, but on second thought he determined not to depart from his usual custom. He was much surprised, when his customer said that he always came to his store, as he liked the neat manner in which goods were done up, adding, that the goods were in all probability as well taken care of as they were prepared to go out. From this, then, it will be seen that appearances are deceptive and it is always dangerous to jump at conclusions. Because a person is not smartly dressed himself, it is no sign that he does not like to receive a proper amount of attention, and he is also quick to resent slovenly treatment.

Whatever new ideas may be incorporated in the business, there is one idea which should remain uppermost in the grocer's mind, and that is, that all appeals should be made with the idea of interesting the women folk firstly and children secondly, perhaps, because it is a cast iron and immutable law, that the men will go where the women and children are well treated, if they happen to want anything in a grocery. It must be remembered, that the woman of the house, does most of the buying and consequently it is she, whose friendship should be specially sought.

To recapitulate then, February is a kind of between-seasons' period, when the remnants of the winter stock should be disposed of, as far as possible, to make room for the incoming spring goods. Owing to a normal dullness, it is a good month to make alterations, in the interior arrangements of the store. New window decorations can be thought out, and tried, and a general plan of campaign for the year's business should be evolved during this time. It is the month in which it is possible to correct the faults of the past, and plan better things for the future.

AN AMICABLE ARRANGEMENT.

No Licenses Will be Issued to Toronto Peddlers After Feb. 1st—Case Before the Council.

So far as Toronto is concerned, the retail grocers' recent agitation against the system of licensing peddlers is over and both grocers and peddlers have arrived at an understanding agreeable to them both.

Last week representatives of the Grocers' and Butchers' Section of the Retail Merchants' Association, together with a deputation to look after the interests of the peddlers, waited on the Board of Control, and recommended that the by-law referring to peddlers within the city limits be amended as follows:

That no license shall hereafter be issued after the first day of February in any year.

That no peddler shall be allowed more than one helper to one wagon, and that the annual fee for a helper shall be one dollar.

That only those who are residents of the city and who are entered on its assessment roll can secure peddlers' licenses.

That the police department will look after and see that this by-law is properly enforced.

The members of the council considered the amendment as recommended by the Board of Control as fair and it went through without discussion.

The chief item to the merchants is that no license can be issued after Feb. 1st, thereby preventing peddlers from purchasing a half-yearly license in July and selling over the best six months of the year.

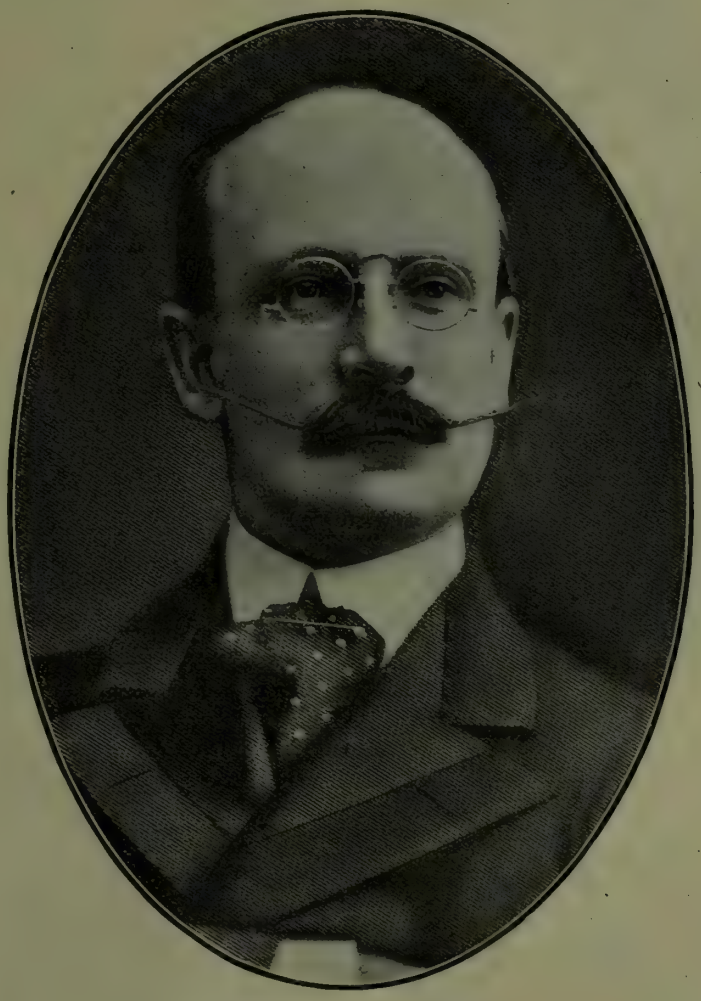
This is certainly a benefit to the grocers, and much of the credit due to the passing of the amendment must be given to the Retail Grocers' and Retail Merchants' Associations of Toronto.

Canadian Transportation Development

By G. W. Stephens, Chairman Montreal Harbor Board, in the Busy Man's Magazine—Reproduced by Request.

Transportation has been defined as the "keys with which wise statesmen open the doors of national prosperity." There can be no subject, therefore, which should engage the attention of the Canadian people equal in importance to that of lessening the cost of transporting the products of the Western plains to tide water and the Eastern manufactured products to the homes of the Western consumer. It is equally true that upon the efficiency of our country's transportation facilities depends the future integrity of our Dominion, the comfort, wealth and power of our people.

Canadian transportation began when Jacques Cartier turned the prow of his little bark into the St. Lawrence and christened it after the saint of that name upon whose birthday he entered its waters, and the pages of its early history are filled with the heroic struggle of brave men who had the courage of their convictions and carried the visions of their imagination to a practical conclusion. The names of Cunard, Howe, Young and Allan are mile-stones along the pathway of its early development, in the same big way as Mount Stephen, Van Horne, Shaughnessy, Hays, Mackenzie and Mann are to-day in its later expansion. By the imaginative genius of such men and their pertinacity the outermost corners of our Dominion are made accessible, and the farthest off inhabitant of the plains becomes the neighbor of him who lives within the sound of the ocean.



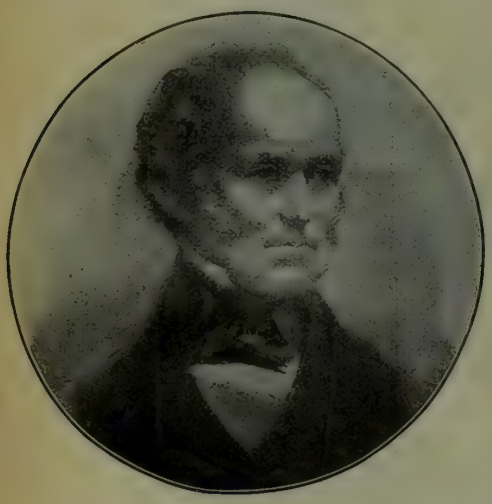
Before considering the actual conditions surrounding this problem to-day let me ask you to look at the primitive starting point from which these same conditions have been evolved. For that purpose let us compare for a moment the position occupied by Canada at the opening of the 20th century with that of our great neighbor at the opening of the 19th.

In the year 1800 the population of the United States amounted to 5,300,000 people, grouped together as a fringe along the shores of the Atlantic Ocean; behind them to the westward an undiscovered waste of wilderness and plain, not a single mile of railroad, not a single mile of canal development, no roads to speak of, no wealth, but the indomitable courage, perseverance and faith of her people; and upon this courage and confidence has been built up in 100 years a nation numbering 90,000,000 people possessing 217,000 miles of railroad, and a country extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The cause of such wonderful progress must be sought in the early, wise and persistent development of her means of communication and transport. And while the 19th century yielded to the United States a marvelous growth in her interior transportation facilities, it is interesting to note that in 1860 she carried 66 per cent. of her export and import trade in her own ships, in 1906 she only carried 12 per cent.

Canada, on the other hand, starts the 20th century with 6,000,000 people, not huddled together on her Atlantic Seaboard, but stretching a continuous line of prosperous provinces from sea to sea; her continent spanned by the steel ribbons of three great railway systems; her natural waterways linked together by a canal system which has no rival; an annual trade development of $645,000,000; $680,000,000 of the people's savings in the bank, and is doing a business with 6 000,000 people at the beginning of the 20th century that was not equaled by our great neighbor to the south of us until her population had reached the figure of 26,000,000.

Added to all this, Canada, as the occupant of the northern half of this continent, possesses the shortest water route between the continents of Europe and America and America and Asia, thereby inheriting a natural strategic position which, if supplemented by energetic measures of transportation development within, will place her in an unassailable position for the command of a large portion of the international trade between the Mother Country and the East.



GEORGE W. STEPHENS.
Chairman of the Montreal Harbor Board.

This means a business connection with a market containing 450,000,000 people in China alone, 300,000,000 in India and 40,000,000 more in Japan. If we can become the carriers for a portion of this great international trade, if we can offer transportation inducements for the capture of our share of this business, then every ton of through freight handled over Canadian rails and by Canadian waterways will reduce the cost of transporting the grain products of the West and the manufactured products of the East, and will bring into closer touch the growing population of this country in all its parts.

In this connection one must not forget that from the little sea-girt islands in the North Sea, which we call the Motherland, over 3,000 miles of the Atlantic, across this Canada of ours, over 3,000 miles more, and again for 6,000 miles over the peaceful waters of the Pacific, the thin red line of transportation ploughing the waters of two oceans, traversing the fertile plains of a continent, over this continuous and shortest trade route float the folds of our country's flag. The greatness of our Motherland is founded on her command of the water-borne trade of the world. If Canada is to become likewise great she, too, must not neglect the development of her transportation.

Taking a map of the North American continent, one finds three natural outlet channels for the trade of the great Northwest, the Mississippi River, the St.

SAMUEL CUNARD,

One of the Founders of the Cunard Steamship Line in 1840. He was a Resident of Halifax.

Lawrence River and the Hudson Bay. The Mississippi is navigable from the Falls of St. Anthony to the Gulf of Mexico for more than 2,000 miles. The great chain of lakes connecting the Gulf and River of St. Lawrence give a continuous navigation of 2,500 miles to the heart of a great continent. Hudson Bay will be one day tapped, and for a portion of the year at least afford auxiliary means of transport for grain cargoes out of the West. Of these three natural means of exit, the Dominion of Canada controls two, and by supplementing her natural inheritance by the building of the Georgian Bay canal she will place herself in the proud possession of a water route that will not only induce the trade of her own great West to follow its course, but will attract to it a very large portion of the trade of the Western States.

The question of Canadian transportation has been divided as follows by the Transportation Commission, whose valuable report ought to be made known to every Canadian interested in the country's progress:

1. From place of production to Canadian sea ports.
2. From place of production to Western ports of Lake Superior.
3. From Western ports of Lake Superior to Canadian sea ports.
4. From Canadian sea ports to Europe, and the reverse in each case.

All this of necessity involves the consideration of storage requirements of lake, river and ocean ports.

The harbor facilities of inland lakes, rivers and ocean terminals.

The conditions with regard to the navigation of the St. Lawrence route and the provision of a well-equipped terminal for use during the winter months when Montreal has no direct water access to the sea.

This question further involves the consideration of the forces operating against an all-Canadian transportation plan:

1. Competition by U.S. railways.
2. Competition by U.S. vessels from Lake Superior ports.
3. Diversion of Canadian product through the Eastern outlets of Boston, Portland, etc.

The subject is too vast to here consider in its entirety. An idea of its importance may, however, be realized if we study briefly transportation as it affects grain.

Of what, therefore, does this grain trade consist?

What are its possibilities of growth?

What equipment do we Canadians possess to handle it?

When we speak of the grain areas of Western Canada we mean—

	Acres.
Manitoba, containing	27,000,000
Saskatchewan, containing ..	52,000 000
Assiniboia, containing	50,000,000
Alberta, containing	42,000,000 or a total area suitable for cultivation of wheat of 171,000,000 acres.

Should only one quarter of this area be put under cultivation at the average yield of the past three years, this would give 800,000,000 bushels.

Out of the 171,000,000 acres, in the year 1900 only two and a half million acres were under cultivation.

In 1906 this had grown to six millions.

In the year 1900 the yield was thirty-three and a half millions.

In 1906 the yield was one hundred millions.

This grain was taken care of in 1900 in 533 elevators distributed at convenient points west of Lake Superior, with a combined capacity of 18,000,000 bushels.

In 1906 the number had increased to 1,200 elevators with a capacity of 50,000,000 bushels.

The railway mileage from the base of the Rocky Mountains to the Red River, covering this wheat area, was.

In 1901	3,369
In 1905	5,620

The wheat acreage increased in five years from two and a half to six million acres.

The wheat grown from thirty-three and a half to one hundred million bushels and the mileage from 3,300 to 5,600 miles.

Now as the whole of this grain, which is shipped eastward, is tributary to the Canadian Pacific, the Canadian Northern, Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways, carried to Port Arthur and Fort William, from thence to the sea, it is of the most vital import that a continuity of efficient transportation facilities shall prevail from the West to the sea on Canadian soil.

From Winnipeg to the commencement of water transportation at Port Arthur and Fort William is 427 miles. The two existing railways will be double-tracked and the Grand Trunk Pacific will add another available route, and yet with a continuous growth of population and a continuous building of railways, it seems hardly possible to build fast enough. It is a race between the ingenuity of man and the fertility of the soil.

On arrival at Port Arthur and Fort William the grain is stored in huge elevators which now have a capacity of twenty millions.

The corresponding lake ports on the United States side are Duluth, Superior and Chicago, upon whose harbors the United States Government have spent already ten millions.

As an example of the colossal growth of Lake Superior tonnage, the value of craft in this trade in 1887 amounted to two millions, while in 1904 it amounted to seventy millions.

When the grain is elevated at the western end of Lake Superior it awaits shipment by boat from there to the Georgian Bay ports of Depot Harbor, Victoria, Midland, Port Colborne, Buffalo or Oswego, where it is again discharged into huge elevators and then

From the Georgian Bay ports westward three railways run to the sea. and already 160 out of the 190 miles of the Trent Valley Canal system are completed, joining the Georgian Bay with Lake Ontario.

This gives to Canada the following choice of routes from Fort William to the sea, within her own territory.

L. E. GEOFFRION,
A Member of the Mon treal Harbor Board.

Canadian transhipping points east of the Great Lakes are:

1. The all-water route, via the Great Lakes, Welland Canal and the St. Lawrence River to Montreal.

C. C. BALLANTYNE,
A Member of the Montreal Harbor Board.

2. All-water route, via Georgian Bay, Trent Valley and the St. Lawrence River to the sea.

3. Water and rail, via the Georgian Bay ports, Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railways to Montreal.

A comparison between the chief water route from the Great Lakes to New York with the Canadian water route from the Great Lakes to Montreal furnishes interesting matter for consideration.

The advantages of the Canadian water route over the American water route may be stated to be as follows:

1. That the St. Lawrence water route from the Great Lakes to Montreal is shorter than the American water route from the Great Lakes to New York by 110 miles.

2. That the number of miles of slow speed canal navigation by way of the Canadian route as compared with the American route is less by 242 miles.

3. That the Canadian water route furnishes more draft than the American by 8 feet.

4. That a boat using the Canadian water route can carry in cargo more than a boat using the American water route. each trip, 72,000 bushels.

5. That the time consumed each trip by the Canadian route is less than that by the American route by 40 hours.

6. That the length of open navigation is identical in both cases.

7. That it takes a tow of ten boats on the American route to carry what may be carried by the Canadian route in one.

8. That one boat by the Canadian water route can carry more bushels of grain per season than can be carried by one on the American route by 3,544,000 bushels.

Yet notwithstanding these overwhelming advantages in favor of the Canadian route, the American railways carry through Buffalo the business that ought to go through the Canadian canals, and they are able to do this only because no adequate terminal facilities have been supplied in Canada to take care of this business. When these facilities are provided Canada will control the grain export business of North America.

The railways, however, from Buffalo to New York and Boston have so developed their carrying capacity and so reduced periodically their freight rates as to practically kill the Erie Canal as the carrying medium of export grain. It therefore becomes a question at the present moment for the Canadian water route to join hands with Canadian railways to bring this business into its natural channel.

Taxpayers of the State of New York have decided to spend $110,000,000 to enlarge the Erie Canal to a depth of 12 feet. By so doing they propose to reduce the cost of carrying a bushel of wheat from Buffalo to New York to three-fourths of a cent. This would require the railways to reduce their price for the rail haul from Buffalo to New York from four cents to three-fourths of a cent, which is not thought a possibility by transportation authorities.

But the point I desire to make in connection with these figures is this: If our American competitors deem it worth while to spend $110,000,000 to get a waterway of 12 feet deep from Buffalo to the Hudson River, is it not about time that Canadians awakened to the fact that without the expenditure of another dollar on canals they are the owners to-day of a through water route of 14 feet draught, and could, if they supply the terminals and the carrying power, be in an even better competitive position than the United States will be after it has spent the proposed $110,000,000 on its Erie Canal.

Investigation into the comparative cost of carrying a ton of freight a mile by rail and by water by the highest authorities gives the following result:

A 6,500 gross ton freighter, costing $280,000 on a 1,000-mile trip, will carry her maximum cargo at a cost not exceeding 0.6 of a cent per ton per mile. This is less than 1-10 of the average freight rate per ton per mile that is earned by the railways on this continent. The cheapness of the carrying power of water as compared with rail will be made more clear by the fact that in large freight vessels the consumption of coal is five pounds per 100 ton miles of freight carried, whereas the consumption of coal on railways is 19 pounds per 100 ton miles.

The problem of cheapening the cost of handling the nation's business leads the student of transportation into figures the magnitude of which becomes almost staggering. The Canadian railways at the present moment are handling annually 58,000,000 tons of freight and 28,000,000 passengers. If you can reduce the cost two cents per ton you make a saving of $1,160,000 in the transportation charges on your business.

It is a curious fact, vouched for by a high railway authority, that the average daily work of a freight car in Canada to-day ranges between 29 and 33 miles, just a little over a mile an hour.

A View of the Completed King Edward Pier, Montreal.

A View of the Completed Alexandra Pier, Montreal.

This presents a very interesting phase of the transportation question, and shows that the railways obtain a very small proportion of the efficiency out of the cars at their disposal. What is the use of perfecting roadbeds, reducing grades, laying 80-pound rails, building huge Mogul engines, and strengthening bridges in order to increase the length of trains, if inadequate facilities are provided at the terminals for the quick despatch of cars differently routed to their proper destination?

And here is where the problem of cheapening transportation is to be solved by the development on broad and comprehensive lines of our sea ports at which our rail and water ways converge. In this connection I may be pardoned for referring to a national development with which I have been personally associated for the past year, during which time it has been my privilege to stand at the gateway of Canada's commerce and watch the ebb and flow of that great volume of trade which leaves our shores in the shape of exports and the immense cargoes for distribution throughout this country. There is at the present moment going on in the Port of Montreal a development to take care of the import and the export trade of Canada, into which is being put $4,500,000, and she is getting for that expenditure 14 ocean berths and 14 double-deck steel concrete freight sheds, with a storage area of 1,500,000 square feet, and a working capacity of 150,000 tons of freight per week. It becomes a question therefore of considerable moment whether this expenditure is a wise one, and whether when completed the Canadian people will possess in their national port facilities an accommodation that will enable them to hold their own with the rival ports of this continent. Looking around for a comparison, we find that New York is paying $29,000,000 in the year of 1907 for an improvement scheme almost identical with our own. For that $29,000,000 New York builds eight piers and places upon them eight double-deck steel concrete sheds, having an area of 120,000 square feet less than those now being erected in Montreal. Montreal's development will place alongside of every shed two railway tracks, whereas the New York development is inaccessible to railways, and cars have to be lightered on barges into the ship and vice versa. This means that Canada is getting a port development for four and a half millions that New York has got to spend twenty-nine millions to obtain, and by having the additional advantage of direct inter-communication between the railways, sheds and ships it has been possible during the past season to effect a very considerable saving in the handling charges of freight through the Port of Montreal.

There have been handled by the Traffic Department of the Harbor Commission during the last season 1,500,000 tons of freight, carried in 75,000 cars, 400,000 tons of this freight were handled direct between the car, shed and ships, or vice versa. On this 400,000 tons of freight there has been an estimated saving of 50 per cent. or $80,000 in the handling charges alone. In other words, this means that the Port of Montreal has been able during the past season to handle 400,000 tons of freight for what it used to cost to handle 200,000 tons; and as almost the whole of this saving has been effected on through freight destined to all parts of Canada and all parts of the world, it is a matter of gratification that in the near future Canadians may possess the cheapest, shortest and safest trade avenue on this continent. The true national significance of the Port of Montreal, and the interest that every Canadian citizen should have in its expansion and development is evidenced by the following phase of the annual business.

Canadians possess the only clear water route from the Great Lakes to the sea on this continent which permits vessels drawing 14 feet to carry their cargoes to and from the Port of Montreal. Every railroad has direct communication with the water front of this port, which is owned and controlled by the people, not a foot of the fore shore of the Harbor of Montreal in its entire extent of ten miles of frontage being privately owned, thus making possible the only economic harbor development upon this continent under like conditions.

This possession enormously increases the value of the Port of Montreal as a natural asset, and with proper terminal development and proper use of the waterways already in existence the Port of Montreal will afford:

To the growers of grain in the great Northwest,

To the fruit and farm products of the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec,

To the lumber interests of British Columbia and New Brunswick,

To the coal and iron interests of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton,

To the importing and exporting merchants of the entire country,

To the farmers producing cheese and butter,

In short, to every Canadian citizen doing business throughout the country the cheapest, safest and quickest delivery and receiving point on this continent.

The Port of Montreal takes cares of the imports of the iron manufacturer, now amounting to ten and a quarter millions a year.

Of the woollen manufacturer, who imports upwards of seven millions a year.

Of the sugar merchants, importing six millions a year.

Of the cotton manufacturers, importing three and a half.

Of the users of flax, hemp and jute, who import one and a quarter million.

Of the grain plains of the Great West, the grazing lands of Ontario and Quebec, which exported through the Port of Montreal in 1906, forty million dollars worth of animals and their products.

Cheese and butter coming from Quebec and Ontario, eighteen millions more.

Manufactured goods for South Africa, Australia and the West Indies, four millions more.

The forest, fisheries and mines, seven millions more.

And so it becomes truly of broad national interest to all Canadians no matter what be their occupation, or where they may live, that somewhere in Canada there should be proper terminal facilities to handle Canadian business.

Montreal happens to be at the point where the farthest inland ocean navigation on this continent meets the deepest artificial waterway, connecting it with 2,500 miles of water navigation into the heart of this great continent. For that reason during seven months in the year the cheapest, safest and quickest trade route for the large export and import business of this country ought naturally to gravitate toward Montreal, and it is a national duty that the Port of Montreal should be developed on broad and comprehensive national principles. The plan of this development on such a comprehensive scale should be given the best expert attention in all its details that money, time and experience can afford. In thus laying out a definite and complete plan covering development work for the next 25 years and carrying it on in sections, when the whole is complete there will be harmony in all its parts and a development that will enable Canadians to handle their own business efficiently and economically, and compete for the business of the Western States on a basis that will produce satisfactory results.

Alongside of the transportation question and inseparable from it is the question of the growth of our population. The dream of 100 millions of people in this country is not so far off as might be supposed at first sight.

Last year's crop of newcomers from all sources, on reliable authority, amounted to 400,000 people. Add 100,000 as the natural increase to our own population and you have an annual increase in 1907 of half a million people. If this yearly increase is not exceeded and we go on increasing at the rate of half a million a year, in 25 years the population of this country would be 18 000,000; and if at the end of 25 years all outside immigration should cease, we will then be adding to our population at the rate of two millions a year, which in 25 years more, or 50 years from 1907, would give to this country (Canada) a population of 60,000,000 people.

This is the great future that Canada must now lay the foundation for, that Canada must build railways, canals and ocean terminals to take care of.

The safety of this great future must be guarded by the aggregate individual integrity of her citizens. This wonderful panorama of development is almost unfolding itself without our realizing what is going on, and as the lines of our transportation are extending themselves to the outermost corners of this great Dominion, unconsciously is being established a bond of union under the folds of a common flag which has been the symbol of equal rights, justice and freedom to the least of her citizens since the British Empire began. We may not speak the same tongue, nor worship at the same altar, yet as children of a common flag we are bound together by the thread of a common patriotism over whose strands—like the power of Niagara passing over wires to move in far distant places the wheels of mighty commerce—is passing a force of brotherhood, sympathy and power against which neither the voice of the demagogue nor the roar of hostile cannon can avail.

PRODUCE MERCHANTS' ANNUAL.

Retiring Montreal President Advocates Some Changes—J. A. Vaillancourt Takes His Place.

Montreal, Jan. 20.—At the annual elections of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association the honor of the presidency fell to J. A. Vaillancourt, while John A. Gunn and John H. Scott were elected to the vice-presidency and treasurership, respectively.

The retiring president, A. A. Ayer, in his annual report, drew attention to the great stimulus given the trade by the continuation of the Saturday mail service, which, it was hoped, would be looked upon as a permanent institution by the Government.

Mr. Ayer said further: "In regard to the question of the levying of duty upon the return to Canada of Canadian butter which has been exported, the members were unanimous that the Canadian Government should adopt the principle recognized by the United States Government that the reimportation of any product of our own country should be allowed free of duty, whether such product had passed out of the possession of the Canadian exporter or not. Renewed representations should be made to the Government along these lines during the coming session.

Discrimination in Railway Rates.

Your transportation committee has, with the help of the manager of the Montreal Transportation Bureau, Mr. W. S. Tilston, submitted to the Board of Railway Commissioners a protest against the western or inland shipper being quoted a through rate to Europe by the railway company, which through rate includes cartage in Montreal, harbor commissioners' switching charge, harbor dues and port warden fee, all of which charges the Montreal exporter has to pay in addition to the rail rate to Montreal and the ocean rate to Europe.

Buying Arrangements.

Agreements were entered into establishing buying conditions as to payment and inspection at eastern Ontario and some nearby Eastern Townships country boards, which resulted in a very considerable improvement, and I am hopeful that next session it will be possible to still further extend the arrangements in the Province of Quebec.

In this connection I have to record the success of the effort put forth by this association to improve methods by changing the market day of a number of boards and abolishing Saturday as a market day in Ontario altogether, so that goods purchased thereat can reach Montreal sufficiently early in the week to allow of their being handled to better advantage and of being placed in cold storage for a short period before being put on board the ocean steamers.

C. I. F. Rules.

The need for the revision of the association's rules governing c.i.f. transactions having been shown, a committee reported at a meeting held on 4th May, when a set of rules was unanimously adopted, it being understood that the adoption of these rules by the association would not preclude members from making individual contracts under such terms as they might deem advisable.

Wrong Marking of Weights.

The extension of the practice on the part of factorymen of marking up the weight of cheese five or ten pounds, and the consequent loss and inconvenience suffered by the trade, having, during the past few years, led to frequent and bitter complaints, an effort was made to put an end to the evil. The public weighers were asked to supply the association with copies of all weighing certificates showing excessive shortages in the weights; these certificates were posted on 'Change for the information of the members, who were thus put in possession of information as to the factories habitually guilty of marking up, and were thus enabled to protect themselves when purchasing from such factories. Copies of many of the certificates showing such shortages were communicated to the Dairy Commissioner at Ottawa, who has, we understand, been able to bring the matter forcibly to the attention of the factorymen interested.

Green Cheese.

As a possible means of checking the practice the association this season recommended to the various country cheese boards the posting of the date of make of all cheese offered on such boards. I recommend that the country boards now be asked to change the allowance of weight from half a pound to one pound per box.

This association took a prominent part in the attempt to secure a simple and uniform bill of lading. The question is as yet undecided by the Railway Commission.

We favor pasteurization in all creameries from 15th October until cows are on full grass in spring, and that 'gathered cream' creameries pasteurize all the year round.

The present system whereby the referee can only examine cheese or butter upon the request of the factory or owner results in many lots being rejected without examination, and reduces the usefulness of this important office."

ADULTERATED PEPPER IN THE WEST.

In the daily press there has been considerable of late with reference to the sale of adulterated pepper in Western Canada. There has been a great commotion over the matter, both east and west, and some articles which have appeared have had a tendency to make the public believe that adulterated pepper is being manufactured in Winnipeg and sold to the public throughout the western Provinces as pure pepper. To quote a recent article from a daily paper, "It appears that the chief centres of adulteration are in and about Montreal, although Winnipeg is becoming too prominent in this regard, a recent despatch from Government sources intimating that Winnipeg is considerable of a storm center in the matter of adulteration."

Now as a matter of simple justice to Winnipeg manufacturers it should be noted that there are only three firms in Winnipeg who grind or manufacture their own pepper. There are many firms jobbing pepper which they buy already ground, but there are only three factories in Winnipeg where pepper is ground.

An examination of the department bulletin referred to in the daily newspaper excerpt quoted above shows that some twelve different samples of pepper manufactured by these three firms have been bought at retail and tested by a Department Inspector. All of the twelve were pronounced genuine and therefore the daily newspaper comments have no application to Winnipeg manufacturers.

In the interests of the honest manufacturer and jobber, and for the protection of the trade and the public the Department should trace all adulterations to the manufacturers who are responsible. Retailers and wholesalers alike may sell adulterated goods without being aware that their goods are not absolutely pure as they are stated to be. If every package of spice, or food stuffs even, when packed under a jobber's private brand bore the name of the actual manufacturer it would be an easy matter to place the responsibility. At the next meeting of the Canadian manufacturers' Association, the Winnipeg spice manufacturers purpose presenting a resolution in favor of some such change.

Those present at the meeting included Ald. J. G. Duquette, president, Ald. N. Sequin, vice-president, L. A. Taillon, secretary, and all the directors, as well as four-fifths of the shareholders.

The assets of J. P. Belanger, general merchant, St. Thuribe, were advertised for sale on Jan. 28.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, January 28.

There is an opinion gaining considerable currency, that stocks are much lower than was generally estimated, and this fact, together with the increased demand from England, has imparted a firm tone to the market. From this then, it looks as if that from this on, prices would remain on the high side. A considerable amount of cheese, has gone forward to the account of several English houses which has been held for them here. It is reported that an English house is quietly buying up all the loose ends, and odd lots, that they can lay their hands on. It is also stated that they have paid some fancy prices. This certainly looks as if some, at any rate, expect high prices. Locally finest Westerns are quoted at 12½c to 12¾c and Easterns at 12¾c to 12½c. Receipts of cheese since May 1 up to the present time have been 1,956,691 boxes against 2,053,472 boxes for the same period of last year.

The week has been a quiet one in butter circles and from appearances it is safe to say, that prices will remain constant for some time. Rolls are coming in in good quantities and the price has shaded off a trifle, but this is looked upon as only a transitory condition, as the demand has not been quite as good this week. Fall creamery lines are being held for fancy prices, but not many sales are being effected, as some look upon the condition of things as a fair augury, that lower prices will soon prevail. The English market has not received as much butter from New Zealand as it was expected would arrive by this time. Cables from Australia, state that supplies have fallen off very considerably there. Siberian has been in better demand, and it is thought that the stringency in England will soon re-act on the Canadian market, as prices there will go to a level which will render the export business here more profitable. Locally, finest creamery is being quoted at 27c to 27½c, fresh receipts bringing 25½ to 26c. Receipts since May 1 to the present time have been 414,915 packages against 409,343 packages for the same time of last year.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

Toronto, January 28.

The hog market is still very firm, with another advance of from 10 to 15c a hundred. At this time of the year the hogs are pretty well sold out, and it is difficult to secure enough to keep the packing houses supplied. The keen competition among buyers is the principal cause of the high price.

Butter is very plentiful, and much of it is in the hands of country storekeepers, who are looking for buyers. The quality, as a rule, is the kind that nobody makes, and nobody wants.

The egg market is in good shape, although through the mild weather newlaid eggs came in freely and the feeling is that the stock of held eggs will all be required before spring and therefore prices remain firm. The demand for cheese is only local, and prices are unchanged. Poultry is getting out of season.

PROVISION MARKETS

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS—Another advance of 10c per 100 pounds for live hogs has been announced this week. The supply is only moderate, and demand is exceedingly good. Pure lard is in good demand, while trade in compound lines, is only moderate. No changes have taken place in prices.

BUTTER—The inevitable results which must naturally follow the conditions, which existed in the butter market during the last five or six weeks, have materialized. Exceedingly high prices on the one hand, and poor quality on the other, cannot live together. In consequence the butter remained in the hands of dealers, and is growing in quantity. The country store-keepers, some of whom took it from the farmers regardless of quality, are now looking for buyers, and are not so particular about the price, as they are about getting rid of it. Butter is, therefore, again two or three cents lower, and in order to move the accumulated surplus, which is by no means improving in quality, even a further drop may be expected.

SHORTAGE IN BROOM CORN.

The price of Broom corn like every ather product of the farmer, depends largely on crop conditions and consequently when a shortage exists, higher prices prevail and this naturally means higher priced brooms.

Now people in the country particularly who are familiar with the conditions applying to butter, eggs, hay, oats, etc., should not wonder at the complete disappearance of the 25c broom if they will bear in mind the exceptionally short crop of broom corn last season which has caused the price of it to advance to a figure that simply makes it impossible to make this line. And even at the present high prices it is difficult to buy what is termed "well assorted" corn and this places the manufacture up against a still harder problem, that is if he is to have any margin at all.

Twenty cent butter and eggs are out of the question under present conditions—so are 25c brooms.

OLD SWORD GETS CUSTOM.

Novel Window Display That Got Even the College Professors Figuring—It Brought Results.

Window displays that bring results are the kind the grocer wants to hear about. A window that shows costly goods in a magnificent way is bound to attract attention. It will be admired as a display, and the goods will be admired because they are beautiful goods.

Novel and unique window displays are also good, if they are kept within bounds, and if they are really out of the ordinary and strong enough to compel attention. Ordinarily the novelty window is not desirable, as the design is seldom strong enough. There are exceptions, however.

A merchant in a Western town had a window not long ago in the novelty line that got him a great deal of business and attracted an extraordinary amount of attention to his store. He had a large, old-fashioned cavalry sabre (that had evidently belonged to his dad) suspended in his show window in the loops of a couple of strands of thread. The wind from an electric fan caused the sword to move slightly, thus wearing with its sharp edge on the cord. A card in the window, which was attractively dressed with a line of goods, said:

The Falling Sword.

"This is not Damocles' sword, but it is going to fall, and when it does fall it is going to cut prices right in two on some of our goods. Look in the papers for particulars."

In his newspaper ads the merchant announced a clearing sale on some of his overstock, and along with the ad he printed a coupon which read as follows:

The person guessing nearest to the hour and minute of the night or day that the sword falls (see our display window) will be entitled to $25 worth of goods free in any department of our store. The next ten best guessers 25 per cent. reduction on their purchases. The next fifty best guessers 15 per cent. reduction. The next 100 best guessers 10 per cent. reduction.

Then followed blanks for the name and address of the guesser and a blank line for his guess. The ad went on to state that the sword had been privately tried with the same kind of cord, and that it had fallen in less than a week.

It Proved a Success.

The merchant, of course, with such a unique display as that, had little difficulty in attracting buyers. He cleared away a considerable quantity of his old stock at a fair profit, doing a business much beyond his anticipation. In addition to this, he secured a splendid advertising medium. People from outside the town who had never dealt with him before, and, perhaps, who had never heard of him, sent in their estimates of the time the sword would take in cutting the string.

College professors applied science to their figuring and there was widespread interest taken in the contest. Outside of the newspaper advertising the only real cost, was the $25 to the person who captured first prize. He much more than made this up on his prices, which, while low, still left him a comfortable margin.

BROTHER DEAD.

The grocery store of Arthur Wicks of Dresden, was closed three days last week on account of the death of his brother, a much respected farmer living near Dresden.

C. Galuci, grocer and confectioner, Fort William, Ont., was gutted by fire on Wednesday, Jan. 20th. The stock was valued at $5,000 and the building at $1,800, both being insured.

A man pays his club bill with fond reminiscences, his grocer's with shrieks for economy, remarks The Smart Set.

GILLETT'S PERFUMED LYE

CAUTION.

Put a strong glass on the label and examine it closely every time. Always look for the name "Gillett's."

Like all good articles, which are extensively advertised, Gillett's Lye is frequently and very closely imitated. In some instances the imitators have actually copied directions and other printed matter from our label word for word. Be wise, and refuse to purchase imitation articles for they are never satisfactory.

Insist On Getting Gillett's Lye

and decline to accept anything that looks to be an imitation or that is represented to be "just as good" or "better," or "the same thing." In our experience of over fifty years in business we have never known of an imitation article that has been a success, for imitators are not reliable people. At the best the "just as good" kinds are only trashy imitations, so decline them with thanks every time.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

Decline in Prices of Manitoba Wheat Flours—Reason Seems to be Artificial—Another Advance in Rolled Wheat to Wholesalers.

The past week has brought out something new in the price of Manitoba wheat flour. Prices go down both in Montreal and Toronto and the peculiarity of the circumstance according to local advice is that there is no natural conditions existing to warrant the decline. It is stated that it is due to competing western millers. During the past two weeks Manitoba wheat has gone up in price, the first grade being quoted at $1.15, and best winter wheat at $1.02. These two conditions do not seem to harmonize. Winter wheat flour remains the same as quoted last week.

To the wholesalers locally there has been another advance of 10c in rolled wheat following the higher prices of wheat. Bran seems to be scarce.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—One of the large milling companies dropped prices 30c a barrel, and 15c a bag. This was announced on Jan. 22, and was followed two days later by a similar decline in the prices of the other large milling company. Locally, trade has been only fair, and the decline will stimulate business somewhat. Country orders are improving slowly.

FEED—Bran is exceedingly scarce, and some dealers have found themselves over sold. As a result of the stringency in supply, and large demand, this line has gone forward $1 a ton. Other lines are in ample supply, to meet all requirements, and no changes in quotations have taken place.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The past week has been featured by a drop in the prices of all Manitoba wheat flours by 20c. Local millers claim there is no natural reason why this should be the case and claim that it is due to internal workings in the Western markets, the results of which make their presence known in the East. "There is no market conditions whatever to warrant it," remarked a miller, "the decline is purely artificial." Wheat now is higher, he stated, than it was two weeks ago.

Prices for winter wheat flour are quoted the same as last week. The market is very firm. "Why we couldn't buy ten cars of winter wheat now if we wanted it badly," said one miller.

CEREALS—Another advance is quoted this week in rolled wheat to wholesalers. This amounts to 10c, making an advance within the past couple of weeks to wholesalers of 20c. The cause for this is the increase in the price of wheat. The markets for rolled oats and oatmeal remain fairly steady with prices the same as quoted last week.

TEA SITUATION IN LONDON.

After a short trip to England, W. H. Halford, of S. T. Nishimura & Co., Montreal, has come back, and in an interview with him The Grocer received some interesting information on the present situation in the tea business on the other side of the ocean.

"On my arrival in London at the beginning of the Christmas week the auction sale rooms were, as usual, closed," said he, "and there was practically nothing doing in the Merchants' Tea Rooms. On the following Tuesday, however, the auction was well attended, and while considerable interest was manifest amongst the buyers, there was a decided tendency to weakening, especially in price tea. From this on a brisk business was being transacted in the tea rooms. Orders coming in very freely from all parts.

"As to what has been the feeling regarding the turnover for the past year, judging from the conversation I had with a number of tea and grocery merchants, I should imagine the results of 1908 were somewhat disappointing. Generally speaking, trade has been dull, and stocks exceptionally heavy. Some of the packet tea firms complained of the past year's business, consequent upon high prices, which were ruling for several months, and the enormous quantity of lower priced packet tea sold all over the United Kingdom, and which, of course, shows the least profit. Then again, some of the operators in Ceylon greens informed me that there has been absolutely no money in these particular teas, owing, principally, to cost of preparation, and to the prices realized on them, and other conditions, at their destination. Indeed, I am told on very good authority that in Ceylon there is a very strong feeling in favor of, and in fact, there are now a number of well-known tea estates actually being converted into rubber plantations, which have been good paying propositions for the past few years.

"Regarding the general feeling of the trade towards Canada, the majority of the larger merchants are absolutely unanimous in vigorously opposing the present conditions and terms of sale in Canada, as against the United States, where transactions are practically on a cash basis. There is also a very strong objection to some of our commercial laws, by which, they claim, for instance, in case of bankruptcy in the Province of Quebec, they are placed absolutely in a false position. Until these conditions are changed very considerably there will always exist that "stand off" feeling which is extremely detrimental to our mutual interests."

Other lines are unchanged.

FISH—A stiffening of prices is noticed in a few lines, among them being haddock, which has gone forward a ½ cent; mackerel and sea herring have also advanced. Frozen grass pike is an exception to this as this line is weaker by a cent. Other lines remain constant. Locally trade is fairly good and the market has a strong undertone.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS—Many of the fruit men are wearing a smile of perfect contentment this week, not so much on account of the firmness of the market as from the many good things that were said about them when on their memorable trip to Guelph. Few of them realized the excellent qualities they possessed until they read all about it in The Canadian Grocer. In consequence a conspicuous feeling of self-confidence prevails, and a smartness about the business that was not before so manifest.

The fruit market is firm, with an upward tendency. Almost the only kind of oranges in demand now are the California navels, which are from 25c to 50c a case higher. The first car of Messina lemons since the earthquake has been shipped for Toronto and will arrive here in a few weeks. The disturbance in Italy did not affect the price of lemons as much as was anticipated, and after connections were all made with new shippers the lemon trade will again assume its natural place in the markets of the world.

VEGETABLES—This line is unusually quiet this week, with very little new vegetables in of any kind. The weather is very favorable for handling potatoes. BISCUIT FACTORY FIRE.

Fire did damage to the extent of $12,000 in Montreal in the biscuit factory of G. U. Pichet, corner of Jeanne d'Arc and Ontario Sts., Tuesday morning, Jan. 26. The blaze was discovered at 7.15 a.m., and gained such headway that the Maisonneuve brigade were assisted by engines and men from No. 11 and No. 13 stations. It is thought the fire originated from a defective wire.

Selling Sardines

To "King Oscar"

brand is due to a very large degree the reputation of superiority now held by Norwegian packers.

Fresh, Pure Oysters Sell Best

Your trade knows the difference between good oysters and bad ones. To handle the inferior kind just because they are cheaper is a short-sighted policy. You can get the oyster trade of your town, MAKE BETTER PROFITS and have the best people coming to you if you sell

"SEALSHIPT" OYSTERS

They retain the delicious OYSTER flavor because we pack the solid meats in sealed cans with ice around the cans—NOT TOUCHING THE OYSTERS. They come to you fresh, natural sized, wholesome and clean—no possibility of contamination. Don't handle dirty tub oysters when you can get "Sealshipts."

HOW TO MANAGE COLLECTIONS

A System of Determining to Whom to Give Credit—Three Methods of Collecting Accounts—Grocers Lose Vast Amount Each Year on Account of Poor Pay.

A correspondent of The Grocer, writing from Regina, gives some valuable lessons on the management of a retail grocery store. He says that one of the most important duties of the proprietor in the proper conducting of a grocery store is the right attention to credit and collections. How much money grocers in Canada lose in a year through a neglect to have this department on a systematic basis, is impossible to calculate. But, no doubt, it would amount to a good sized fortune were it all collected and handed over to a single man.

The carrying of the best lines of stock, the securing of the most efficient salesmen, attractive window or interior display, or a superior system of delivery, avail little, in his opinion, towards the grocer's success, unless he is able to get the money for what he sells. The question of credit and collections, therefore, is one to which every attention should be given. There seems to be no other phase of merchandising that needs more diplomatic and delicate handling and none which requires keener judgment.

Giving credit is plainly a matter of faith and confidence in the parties to whom the grocer allows it. Evidently then the matter of successful collections depends to a great extent on the ability of the grocer to judge his customers. When he secures a new patron to his store, he should endeavor to discover his or her occupation—for an industrious man of good habits seldom contributes to the debit side of the profit and loss account. To one who is somewhat doubtful he would not take chances in extending credit with the hope that fortune would favor him in securing payment for accounts when others had failed. Most grocers know that there is always a tendency to give credit in order to swell sales. Pass all the doubtful ones up, is the hard and fast rule to adhere to, and let a competitor have this business. Where there is the faintest possibility of poor pay you cannot be absolutely sure in a credit transaction until the money is handed over the counter.

Rapid Decision Desirable.

Where there is this element of chance it is difficult sometimes not to show reluctance by your face and manner. This "betrayal of feelings" should be overcome and the mind should be trained to act quickly and decisively. If you are willing to give credit, look and act as if it were one of the greatest pleasures in life to do so. If you grant it and your appearance betrays that you mistrust your customer, he or she is not likely to continue purchasing from you. When you do perform an accommodating act towards a customer do it in such a manner that you will get full credit for it, increase the loyalty of the purchaser to your store, and cultivate his or her personal friendship.

On the other hand, if you have determined not to give credit, break the news as diplomatically as you can, and you are liable to secure a cash trade.

A grocer cannot be absolutely certain of any particular account until he has the money. In these uncertain times a millionaire to-day may go broke to-morrow. This shows the necessity of a system for collecting accounts promptly. The sooner you "get after" a debtor when he has bought the goods, the more hope is there in having the account settled. If left running too long he sometimes begins to think he is under no obligation to pay and difficulty follows—until finally you wake up in the morning to hear that he has left the community. The smaller the account, the more palatable does it look to the debtor. Therefore, do not be negligent or over-indulgent with people even if they are considered to be standing high in the estimation of their neighbors.

Methods of Making Collections.

The correspondent goes on to tell how he successfully uses three methods for securing money. He describes them as follows, as well as three classes of merchants: "There are grocers who are of a mild disposition, who always ask politely for money periodically. Then we have a second class who insist upon a debtor paying his account by threatening law, and, lastly, we have the merchant who is sympathetic in his attitudes, with the idea of enticing by gentle words the money which settles the account. All three methods should be resorted to and used upon different people. Many grocers blunder by using the same one always.

With good customers who are constitutionally tardy in settling accounts try the first means; use the second with those who are constitutionally mean and who, figuratively speaking, appreciate nothing but a club, and with those unfortunates who have a limited quantity of money and who pay first those who wheedle them in a sympathetic manner, try the third. Deal with each debtor according to his classification. There should be no difficulty in handling customers of the first variety successfully. Usually there is little cause for worry about the account not being good; it is simply a case of keeping after them persistently, but always courteously. Strict measures must be used with class two. For people of this kind, use a threatening attitude intended to scare and badger them into paying. Be careful, of course, not to call a man a thief in so many words. You can say that "he will be regarded as a thief or a deadbeat if he has to be sued for his honest debts." You will then be certain not to have to make any apologies to him should he think you have used language too strong and unjust.

Majority Want Sympathy.

"The other class is the largest. They have limited incomes and though desiring to be honest they find it an incessant struggle to keep above water. They get into the habit of steering off everything they can and what little money they get they want to use it for paying off their particular friends for whom they have the greatest regard or who are able to press them successfully. Such people need sympathy and encouragement to do their utmost in getting square with the world. They do not expect sympathy from such a source and when it comes they are grateful and show their gratitude by making a special effort to eliminate the debt they owe. It is also a splendid plan with these particular debtors to determine when payday comes and approach them at the proper time.

There is one thing to be observed in all collections, and that is never to make a threat and fail to carry it out. You will soon get a reputation in your community for being "easy," and people will pay little attention to your demands. When you inform a man you are going to sue him on a specified day unless he comes to your terms, do not fail to make good your threat."

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

Flourishes Best in Florida Where Large Quantities Are Now Produced—A Splendid Breakfast Food—Ingredients Beneficial to the System—How to Serve It.

GRAPE FRUIT—Like many other things, the grape fruit has carried many different names during its existence. It first came from Eastern Asia and was there known many years ago as the Pomello. From there it was carried to Spain and by the Spaniards to Cuba and the Islands of the Bahamas, and for many years was there known as Shaddock. The fruit of late years has come to be known as the Grape Fruit, so called on account of the way it grows on the tree, as many as a dozen of various sizes being suspended on a cluster or bunch and resembling a huge bunch of grapes.

Florida Its Present Home.

Progressive United States growers carried the cultivation of it to Florida and even to California, but it thrives best in Florida, and Florida to-day is producing the best grape fruit ever known. The soil climate of California has not as yet been favorable to its growth. The fruit in that State being thick of skin and comparatively little juice, so essential in good fruit.

The fruit itself resembles a very large orange, is of lemon color, and of a peculiar acid taste. The taste for it is easily acquired, and people become very fond of it. Doctors recommend it as an excellent breakfast fruit, containing as it does, many ingredients beneficial to the human system.

A Rapid Advance.

Some idea of the amount that is produced is shown by the fact that Florida alone will ship 1,500 cars of it this season, whereas 10 years ago the fruit was practically unknown.

It is used solely as a table fruit, and in addition to it being a choice breakfast dish, it is also used at luncheons and dinners.

How to Serve It.

The proper method of serving is to cut the fruit in two, across the grain, remove the seeds and core and fill the cavity with sugar, and eat with a spoon. To add to the attractiveness of the dish drop a pitted cherry in the centre and add a dash of sherry to it, which greatly improves the flavor.

Great care should be exercised to protect it from frost in transit, as on being slightly frosted the oil leaves the cells in the skin and causes a brown spot on the surface. This does not impair the eating qualities, however, but merely detracts from its appearance.

Owing to the large production the price has correspondingly been reduced so that it is now in reach of the most modest purse.

JAVA TEAS FOR CANADA.

W. H. Halford, of S. T. Nishumura & Co., Montreal and Japan, has returned from a short business and pleasure trip to England. Mr. Halford states that business generally on the other side is quiet, this applying especially to teas during his stay in London. While in England Mr. Halford made arrangements with some prominent English houses for his firm to represent them in Canada. Mason's O. K. Sauce, put up by Geo. Mason & Co., London, will in future be handled for all of Canada by Mr. Halford's firm. The agency for all of the Dominion was secured also for the Java teas of the Rowley, Davis Co. These people, whose headquarters are in London, own the famous Tijiliwoeng plantation, in Java. Their teas are very popular in the world's metropolis aad will soon be introduced into Canada. Heretofore very few Java teas have been sold in this country. Another agency now in the hands of S. T. Nishimura & Co., is that of Lansberg & Co., London, very large handlers of green coffees. The interests of these concerns will be well looked after by Nishimura & Co.

ARE MOSTLY GERMANS' CAPITAL.

An interesting statement was made by the manager in New York of a tea company while in Toronto last week visiting the local office. He says that out of 90,000 accounts which the company have in New York, only 150 of these are in connection with English tradesmen. The remainder of the 9.000 are principally Germans. The tea trade in New York, he says, is almost entirely controlled by the Germans.

The LATEST "Enterprise" Electric Mill

New ideas applied to rapid grinding of coffee by electric power make these new "Enterprise" Pedestal Mills by far the best on the market to-day. They are Direct Connected. They lose no power in transmission. The grinders are on the motor shaft. The double Mill shown here, No. 0852, is for alternating current; can also be furnished for direct current. One Mill is fitted with tooth grinders which cut the coffee, the other mill fitted with ribbed grinders for pulverizing. Each hopper holds six pounds. The Mill will granulate 3 pounds of coffee per minute, and pulverize ½ pound per minute. The cans or receivers are enclosed as a protection against dust. The Mill is self-cleaning. This compact, graceful 1 H.P. Mill is already in great demand. We invite correspondence and will send facts, illustrations and prices of our 45 sizes and styles of Rapid Grinding and Pulverizing Mills on request.

We supply grocers also with Meat and Food Choppers, Self-Measuring Pumps and Faucets, Smoked Beef Shavers and other "Enterprise" Specialties. You should have our latest catalogue. If you haven't it, write.

It will pay you to get your store in good shape before the Spring rush commences.

Have you a set of scales or scoops for sale?

Do you wish to sell some shelving or a refrigerator in order that you may replace them with new ones?

Have you a biscuit cabinet, a cheese cutter, a computing scale or cash register and all those fixtures which make your store look neat and enable you to give your customers quick service? If not some grocer may have just what you want.

LOSS AND GAINS. You may lose a friendly customer if you sell an inferior stove polish that cakes and streaks on the iron and stares the housekeeper in the face day in and day out, as long as it lasts. She thinks of the man who sold it every time she faces that wretched looking stove. But when you push RISING SUN Stove Polish in Cakes and SUN PASTE in Tins, you gain friendly customers among all those who learn through you for the first time what a really good stove polish is.

We believe we know what you will do—you will push the goods that gains friends for the storekeeper — that means ours.

"Make the Goods Talk"

That's good advice, and that's why Canadian Canners' products hold their supreme position.

It has always been the policy of the Management of the Canadian Canners', Limited, to work for Quality.

The buyer of a can of goods with the Canadian Canners' Label knows that he is running no risks. The quality is guaranteed by a responsible, reliable company.

Why buy inferior goods even if at lower prices only to perhaps incur the ill-will of your customers?

If you secure a name for handling nothing but reliable goods you are on the high road to success.

REMEMBER THE BRANDS :—

"Auto," Aylmer; "Canada First," "Log Cabin," "Little Chief," Bowlby's; "Horseshoe," Lalor's; "Grand River," "Kent," Delhi; "Maple Leaf," Boulter's; "Lion," "Thistle," "White Rose."

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

A Great Success

in the grocery business is only made by the man who makes a strong point of quality. Quality is what builds up a grocer's reputation and adds to the value of his "good-will." In no line of your stock is high quality more essential than in your canned goods department. A can of poor quality is liable to lose your best customer. Grocers who handle are pleasing customers with every canned goods order. Old Homestead Brand is absolutely pure. Nothing is used in Old Homestead Brand but the finest quality of fruits and vegetables; and they are packed in a factory that is peerless in point of modern, sanitary equipment and clean, skilled employes.

Old Homestead Brand
Canned Fruits and Vegetables

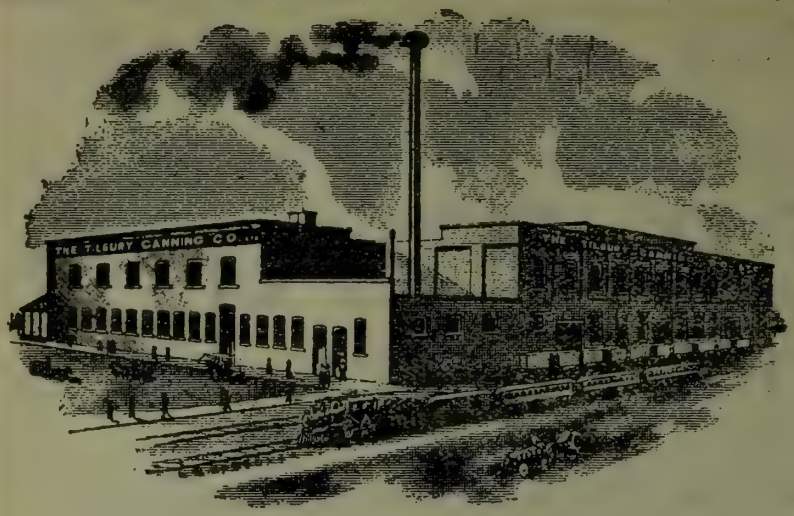
The way to get the people coming to your store and passing by the man 'round the corner, is to sell

FARMER BRAND
CANNED FRUITS AND VEGETABLES



Every can is a splendid advertisement for the man who sells it. The reason we are able to produce goods of uniformly high quality is the fact that all our stock is grown upon our own 3,000 acres of the finest garden land. That's the basis of quality — good raw material. Then, look at our Canning Factory! Positively, it is modern and sanitary in every particular; and the people who operate it are clean and highly skilled in their trade.

Fresh from the Gardens

The importance of absolutely fresh tea cannot be overestimated. It is the life of your tea trade. Few grocers seem to realize the great necessity of keeping only fresh tea in stock.

All tea deteriorates with age. Six months after being picked it has lost in cup quality from 1c. to 2c. per pound. In purchasing Bulk Tea and carrying it over (as many grocers do), two, three and four years, not only do you lose interest and compound interest, amounting to quarter of its original value, but the tea has depreciated in quality from 15% to 30%.

If you must buy Bulk Teas be wise and never purchase more than one month's supply at a time. Let the wholesale dealer carry the burden.

We never have a pound of tea in stock over six weeks. We never speculate on a rising or falling market, consequently never carry a heavy stock.

We always take back from the wholesaler or retailer any "SALADA" that has been in stock over four months.

If you carry old tea in stock, your customers will soon note its want of freshness, and it will have the same effect on your trade that stale goods always have.

To overcome this difficulty sell "SALADA." "Fresh from the gardens." Buy in small quantities and buy often.

Your Share

Are you sure you are getting your share of the tea trade in your town in proportion to the size of your business? It is important.

Tea pays you a good profit and good tea will lead more trade to your store than any other one thing you handle.

Red Rose tea will do more than any other, whether bulk tea or package, to increase your share of the tea trade. Display it well, it will sell itself; push it and you will sell more of it than of all other brands put together.

As Pure as Windsor Salt

$1.00 Sold $25 Worth of Groceries

It was a thirty-mile trip to town and the instructions of Mrs. Smith to husband John were to get a dollar's worth of Windsor Salt at the grocer's—naturally husband John secured his entire list of groceries at the store that was stocked with "Windsor." He spent twenty-five dollars in that particular store.

The reason why Mrs. Smith was determined to have Windsor Salt was and is plainly evident—its uniform excellence, purity, whiteness and dryness. It pays to sell the salt that helps to sell other goods in the store.

Grocers Carrying Confectionery

Opinions Expressed by Many of the Leading Grocers of Ontario on This Important and Growing Question—Majority in Favor of the Scheme—Some Could Get Along Without Confections—Differences of Opinion.

The Grocer, in placing before the retail trade the advantages of carrying confections, has secured direct information from grocers throughout the country as to the profits and benefits which follow. As a rule few members of the trade engaged in business in the central portion of a town or city—where they are in direct competition with the exclusive confectioners—pay much attention to carrying these goods. Often, however, in the suburbs, grocers make a reasonable profit, as will be noticed by some of the statements they have made to The Grocer's enquiry, and which are printed below. Others do not consider the carrying of confections sufficiently remunerative to warrant the trouble, but the majority favor the addition to their stores.

It would appear from the statements and experiences of those who carry confections that where some trouble is taken and a neat arrangement of cakes and confectionery is made and where cleanliness exists, there have been good results.

With Profit in Peterboro.

Your correspondent interviewed a number of the local grocers on the question of the handling of a line of confections in connection with their businesses and the majority stated that they have found it to pay well and gives but little trouble in the handling and disposing of it. The most of the grocers interviewed stated that they carried the business through the entire year and a few found that it fell off when the cold season set in. These, however, were very few.

R. C. Braund has been dealing in this line for six years and his experience has been most satisfactory. With him there is but little difference at any time in the year and it has reached that stage where it looks after itself. John T. Braund, his brother in the opposite end of the city, speaks almost in the same vein. He has been carrying confections for nearly five years. J. M. Donovan finds the business better in summer than in winter and it helps the general business noticeably.

Bert Hunter's experience in this line has extended over four months and he finds this business is increasing.

The general report in Peterboro shows that confections form a line that soon takes care of itself and with but little trouble and besides it is profitable.

Guelph Grocers' Views.

In the Royal City the grocers find that outside of keeping gross goods in the confectionery line, they do not appreciate carrying confections. One grocer, however, who pays special attention to his confectionery department, is well satisfied with the results. In those sections where the ward schools or other schools are very close to the stores they do quite a business with the children. Chas. T. Hicks, Paisley St., has about the nicest display in confectionery, and he does a very good trade in this line. He has splendid ideas in the use of his show cases for confectionery only. In one he displays twenty-four different varieties of 20c lines and always keeps the dishes well filled up. In the other he displays bon bons, in fancy boxes alone. He is quite satisfied with the results. The general opinion is, however, that this department in the outside stores was not a success with the exception of a few gross goods for the children.

Another grocer interviewed said: "In my own experience there is a very nice profit to be made out of this department when a grocer will take time and give space for show purposes. This department needs a little attention each day to keep the different lines in shape, and if a grocer feels he has not the time to devote to it, by all means keep out of confectionery. The failures to make it pay very often can be traced more to neglect and lack of display."

All the stores here keep a few lines and have always done so, but some are inclined to get out of them. When a grocer sees a line sticking or getting soiled it sometimes pays to put it up in to grab-bags and sell it quickly.

One grocer remarked: "It pays as an advertisement to keep a nice line of mixed candies to give a few to the children and ladies when they come in with a grocery order. It does not cost much and a little judicious liberality once in a while keeps the grocer's name before the people. We all must remember," he added, "that the boys and girls of to-day are the mothers and fathers of the future, and as one lady told me recently, 'You were always very kind to me as a child and I feel I can trust you to be the same to my children.' It seems a very small item in a man's business career, but I find when I have the people's confidence there is little trouble to sell them anything in the store which I recommend."

Good Prospects in Perth.

Judging from a number of interviews with grocers here confection lines are favorably looked upon by the majority who are carrying them. Almost all have done something in candy and feel that if they were to drop this department a loss would be sustained. H. T. Jackson, who has carried on business in the residential section of Wilson St. west for the past two years, when asked if he thought confectionery a good line to carry in a grocery store replied: "It certainly is a good line. I would rather handle confectionery than many lines in groceries. Not only does it pay itself, but it often leads to extra sales in other lines."

N. E. Dodds, Gore St., has handled confectionery since starting business 5 years ago. He believes that money is to be made in the high-grade goods and so confines himself principally to these better lines. He has handled cent lines, but he doubts if they always pay, as a grocer often has to leave a good customer to wait on a troop of children who "have a cent to spend."

Norman Miller, Foster St., has handled confectionery for some time, but has never carried a full line. He thinks there is little money in it and handles it only because his trade demands a certain amount. He thinks, however, that candy would be a good line if given attention.

C. A. Farmer & Son have been handling confectionery since the business was established seven years ago. In their opinion confectionery is a side line which for space occupied and amount of time and cash invested gives a good return. If care is exercised in buying there should practically be no loss through goods becoming stale. "As an all the year round paying line he would not be without it," he said.

A number of Perth grocers control some particular line of high-grade chocolates for the town.

Opinions in Berlin.

Grocers in Berlin are not a unit in their attitude towards confectionery in the grocery store. George Metcalf, of Metcalf & Co., who conduct a fine grocery establishment, said he considered the confectionery department of their business a very important one; so much so that the firm was about to extend this end of their business by putting in machinery for the manufacture of candies. This manufacturing plant will be located in the top flat of their three-storey building. Confectionery always has been a paying part of the business of Metcalfe & Co., due to a large extent to the exceptionally good stockkeeping observed in this, in common with the other departments of the Metcalf store. They keep bulk candies in glass showcases, tastefully displayed in trays, and attribute much of their success in confectionery selling to the care they exercise in this connection.

J. F. Beck, of Beck & Schell, when questioned by your correspondent, said he did not consider the candy business of sufficient importance to push very extensively, excepting at the holiday season. In this he referred particularly to bulk, gross and pail goods. This firm, however, does a very large business with a special kind of chocolates, having the Berlin agency. This does not require much extra effort other than keeping a well assorted stock on hand.

"The quality of these goods," said Mr. Beck, "is such that they sell themselves, so we find it an exceptionally good line to handle."

Arthur Stueburg, of Stueburg & Son, was not at all favorably inclined towards confectionery. They handle candies, he said, rather because they had to than that they wanted to. The only time that confectionery really paid them was during the Christmas trade. They believed in devoting their energies in furthering the staple part of the grocery trade, leaving such side issues as confectionery to take care of themselves.

London Bakers Raise the Price.

The only grocers in London who carry confectionery are those doing business in the outlying portions of the city. Some storekeepers interviewed by your correspondent state that it is not a very great paying line. One dealer in voicing his sentiments said:—"If I had never taken up the line and knew what I know now, I assure you I would leave it alone. As it is, my customers have come to look to me to supply what they want in the way of confectionery, and for their convenience I am obliged to keep it. You see people want nothing but to-day's baking, and if there is any left over we must use it in the house or give it away. Some time ago the bakers increased prices of cakes for which they charged us from 8 cents to 10 cents. They retail them at 12 cents. We have to do the same. They also advanced the price of 22c cakes, which we sold at 25c, to 25c, and we now are obliged to sell them at 30c each. For small cakes which we formerly bought for 8c per dozen we now pay 10c and sell at 12c. The result is particularly unsatisfactory as regards these latter articles. Customers, rather than pay 12c per dozen for the small cakes, will ask for 10c worth, and the consequence is that I, for one, and no doubt others have similar experience, am frequently left with odds and ends of two or four each of several different kinds of small cakes."

It has been suggested that instead of increasing the prices bakers should have reduced the size of the cakes, but they do not seem to care whether the grocers handle the goods or not.

Results in Bracebridge.

The majority of grocers in Bracebridge seem to think the trade in confections a profitable one. E. J. Kirk, of Kirk Bros., claims the investment to be a paying one. They handle bread, cakes, fancy biscuits, etc., and find an increasing demand for them.

Brophy Bros. and J. D. Cummings are interested in it and are very much in favor of handling confections, speaking from the standpoint of the grocer.

The small grocery stores situated around the beautiful lakes near Bracebridge find they have splendid profits, and that they simply could not do business without confectionery.

M. Hutchison, of Hutchison Bros., does not believe there is much gained by selling confectionery, but he could not very well get along without it.

Jos. G. Myers devotes almost all of his attention to groceries, and reports poor success with confectionery.

Armstrong & Gillespie speak along the same lines as Mr. Hutchison.

What Brantford Grocers Say.

In Brantford most of the grocers carry a stock during the Christmas season. The grocers away from the centre of the city are very few who handle confectionery. Those who do nearly all sell the gross goods and not the better lines.

Alfred Patterson, of William Street, makes a specialty of confectionery, manufacturing all his own. He recently opened a branch store in the opera house block. J. Forde Co. has for years had the agency for the city of a particular variety of confectionery, carrying the most expensive as well as the largest stock of any grocer in the city.

Four to One in Stratford.

Does a confectionery department in connection with a grocery pay in Stratford? Out of sixteen grocers called on twelve answered in the affirmative and three in the negative. The most enthusiastic on the question are the larger corner groceries and those who to a large extent make their own candies.

A. Beattie & Co. say it does not pay. R. S. Jones says they have to handle certain lines, but there is nothing in it, as it sells too slowly.

H. T. Barker has been handling confectionery for a number of years and finds it a profitable line, especially the high grade chocolates.

The Barnsdale Trading Co. manufacture the most of their candies and therefore get them at first cost. They also make a good profit out of their fancy chocolates and bon bons.

J. A. Monteith only handles a staple line, but finds them unprofitable.

E. O'Flaherty thinks it a good paying department, as there is no loss, and intends cutting out crockery to instal more confectionery.

H. G. Brown thinks there would be no profit in it for him if he did not manufacture the most himself. Mr. Brown has been handling confectionery for a number of years.

L. F. Killoran finds it not only pays well but makes the store look bright and attractive.

J. L. Barton has been handling it for a number of years and finds it profitable. Mr. Near and F. Pratt are of the same opinion.

McCully & Haugh find the one cent candies very profitable for the school children's trade, and the higher grade chocolates pay well for adults.

Whye Packing Co.'s Market Street store handles only a few of the profitable lines, and in the Queen Street store the confectionery is one of the most successful departments they have.

Oman & Mallion carry a few staple lines, as they have no room for a full stock, but they find it pays.

Walsh Bros. have been carrying candies for years and say they have no kick coming, as it pays them a good margin of profit.

ADVERTISING ADVANTAGES.

F. Homer Moore, Advertising Manager for P. Shier & Co., Uxbridge, Tells of Its Importance.

Does advertising pay? The wideawake business man says yes. Others say they do not know because they have not tried it. That's where the struggling business man makes the mistake of his life.

What would the world be to-day had not the new discoveries, new inventions, been tested? We would have been in the same old rut year after year. But these new things have been tried and the result is progress. Merchants who are employing trained advertisement writers are the progressive merchants. Advertising is to business what the motor is to the automobile. It makes it go.

The man who does not advertise pays the cost of advertising for the one who does, because the man who employs publicity sells more goods as a result and takes away trade from his competitor.

At first thought it seems a simple matter to sit down and write advertisements but to do it effectively and persuasively there's the rub.

For advertising to pay it must be used continuously. In continuity is strength. In disconnection failure. The man who feeds his horse on Monday and gives him nothing to eat on Tuesday will have a sick horse on Wednesday, and probably a dead horse on Thursday.

The biggest fish are in the stream that runs on forever. Some men succeed by intermittent advertising. Some men jump off a high bridge and do not get killed.

Success from intermittent advertising is chance. Make your success an assured fact by continuous advertising. It pays to employ the best advertising brains. Ideas are cheaper than printers' ink. Look at the successful men of to-day, who have in their employ trained advertisement writers. Especially is this true in the grocery trade. People have to eat. But more people will eat more if the quality of the food is temptingly placed before them. People like to buy from the "Grocery on the corner," because the proprietor appears to want to sell.

Advertise continuously, wisely and well and success will be your reward.

A Window Display That is a Sensation

Effigy of a Burglar Kneels Beside the Iron Safe From Monday Morning Until Saturday Night—Everybody Becomes Curious—No Goods Shown in the Window—Makes the Passer-by Stop to Think.

Window dressers on examining fully into the illustration appearing on this page will be struck more by the idea the designers of it have conveyed, rather than the display itself—although the latter is certainly sufficiently novel to command attention. This window has not yet been introduced anywhere in Canada, but in New York and Buffalo it created one might say, sensations.

The window appeared in various grocers' windows in the above mentioned cities—just as you see it. It will be observed that there is nothing in the picture which would indicate even what kind of a store was behind it, not considering that it gave no idea of what sort of goods it was the intention of the designer to advertise.

Therein lies the chief point The Grocer desires to convey to the window dressers. The passing public reads:—"THIS BURGLAR WILL ACCOMPLISH HIS ACT AT 8 O'CLOCK SATURDAY EVENING NEXT AND THE ENTIRE CONTENTS OF THIS SAFE WILL BE DISTRIBUTED AMONG THOSE INSIDE OF THIS STORE." There is a doubt and an uncertainty left unexpressed which at once attracts the attention of the passerby and makes him think. He says to himself perhaps, "Another one of those confounded advertising schemes, but I wonder what on earth it means.?" The next time he passes there is the same doubt and he thinks he will solve the mystery. The third time he probably determines to call around to the store on Saturday night and find out just what is all really means.

WINDOW DRESSING SCHEME.
That has Attracted the Attentions of Thousands of People.

Casts Hypnotic Spell.

Probably he does not desire to show other people he is so curious and he just walks up and down the opposite side of the street with an occasional glance at his watch and one at the window. There is always sure to be a crowd, because no matter what trait of character a human being lacks he can scarcely shake off that of curiosity.

And so at 8 o'clock he notices some person in the window and he crosses the street to share in the results of the congregated crowd.

The originators of this novelty in window dressing are Holbrooks, Limited. who manufacture the Holbrooks sauces, etc. Therefore, when the safe door is opened on Saturday night there roll out small sample boxes of their goods, which are, as stated in the show card, distributed among those present in the store.

Advantage to the Grocer.

The grocer in whose store the window display is certainly gets a good deal of the benefit. It has been found that the public simply "goes wild" over the affair. They wonder all week what is in the safe. Some stoutly maintain there is nothing, but, nevertheless, when Saturday night arrives they are on the spot to make sure. It gets the people talking about the grocer's store where the display is and often the grocer secures customers who call in to attempt to discover what is locked up in the iron safe. They make a purchase and if satisfied they come again.

On Saturday night the store is full of people. They have come to see the safe opened and secure part of the "something" which falls out when the door opens. Instead of going to their regular store to make their week-end purchases, they save this trouble by buying their goods where they are and the grocer very often secures them as regular customers.

It Commands the Curious.

The most important point in this window display is the curiosity it commands. An artist will tell you that it is what is omitted in the drawing of a picture that gives the desired effect. It is the same with the display, only the latter makes the person wonder and imagine the contents, and more so from the fact that there is absolutely nothing in the window which would lead him to determine what the safe contains. Window dressers have here some food for thought and by using some of their undeveloped ingenuity can produce something as novel containing the same idea.

Just before the safe is opened a banner is strung across the top of the window showing the goods that are being advertised, so that everybody reads, and usually in audible tones, the name of the article.

The picture of the burglar in the accompanying illustration was taken from life and represents a real criminal captured in New York City.

The results of this advertisement have been most gratifying. Crowds of people invariably stand around the grocery store for an hour or more before the safe door is opened, just as if a serious accident had happened or a murder committed. It is in reality a sensational window display, and worth more than a passing consideration.

HARBOR IMPROVEMENT.

This has Done Much to Increase Business in Montreal—Officers of Corn Exchange for This Year.

Some interesting points were brought out in the reports of President Joseph Quintal of the Corn Exchange Association at the annual meeting held recently in Montreal. He referred to the improvements to the Montreal harbor and St. Lawrence river, pointing out that the results obtained in increased business justified the making of the changes.

He eulogized the excellent work of the Board of Harbor Commissioners for the improved facilities. Another elevator would soon have to be erected to take care of the growing grain trade of the port.

The action taken by the present Government on the cable toll question was also considered. He hoped that the Postmaster-General Lemieux would succeed in his efforts and secure a reduction in the cost of cable messages. The tariff has stood for many years at 25 cests a word, which seemed to be quite high for the present times. A reduction of 50 per cent. would be appreciated.

He was pleased to state that telephone communication from New York and Chicago, giving continuous grain quotations, would soon be established.

The following was the result of the elections to the board of management for the ensuing year:

President—Joseph Quintal.

Treasurer—Alfred Chaplin.

Committee of Management—R. W. Oliver, P. B. Earle, W. W. Hutchison, J. S. Norris, E. S. Jacques, Jas. Carruthers, W. I. Gear.

Board of Review—T. A. Crane (chairman), Edgar Judge, C. B. Esdaile, H. W. Raphael, J. E. Hunsicker and Alex McFee.

NEW NAME FOR COMPANY.

Mayell & Co. will Likely Be Known As "The Litster Pure Food Co."

The photograph accompanying this sketch will be recognized by many in the trade in Canada as James Litster, vice-president of Mayell & Co., Limited, Toronto.

Mr. Litster was actively interested in the formation of this company, which has taken over and is re-organizing the business of Mayell & Co. The new firm is fortunate in having all its manufacturing processes under the personal supervision of Mr. Litster, as few men possess a greater practical knowledge and experience in the making of extracts, baking powders and kindred lines. The late Mr. Jardine, founder, and for many years, owner of the Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. was a brother-in-law of Mr. Litster, and 24 years ago induced him to join his staff. Since that time his whole attention has been given to the manufacture of this class of goods.

On account of Mr. Litster's familiarity with the trade and his honesty in doing business in the pure food line, his immediate partners, Kent and Jenkins have decided to incorporate his name in a new name for the company, which they purpose to adopt in the very near future. It is likely that the name will be "The Litster Pure Food Co., but announcement will be made on completion of the re-organization work, which is now being carried out.

JAMES LITSTER,

Vice-President of Mayell & Co., Toronto.

NEW SALES MANAGER.

Cecil R. Jenkins Takes Position with Mayell & Co., Toronto.

Cecil R. Jenkins, late sales manager for Gowans, Kent & Co., has joined the newly organized Mayell & Co., and takes a similar position with them. Many of the friends of Mr. Jenkins for some time were speculating as to what his future plans were, as it was generally known he was making a change, and now they know.

CECIL R. JENKINS,

Until Recently With Gowans, Kent & Co.

He had been with the Gowans, Kent & Co. for twenty years. His cut appearing in this column will be recognized by his many friends in the Dominion.

WILL COVER THE WEST.

H. E. Quesnel will travel through Western Canada for L. Chaput, Fils & Cie., the Montreal wholesale grocers, succeeding Newton Hill, who for several years was responsible for this territory. Mr. Quesnel has been in the employ of the company for ten years, and during the last five sold goods in Montreal for them. He knows the grocery business from top to bottom and is a hustler. His many friends will be glad to hear of his success continuing in his new field.

Douglas Campbell, of the Campbell Milling Co., Toronto Junction, leaves in a few days for Nassau, Bahama Islands, on a six weeks' business and pleasure trip.

The Evolution of the Grocery Trade

Member of the Trade of Thirty Years' Standing Tells of the Changes Brought About by Father Time—Schemes of "Dead-beats" He Has Met With—The Part the Telephone Now Plays in the Business—Present Duties of the Clerk as Compared With the Past.

The telephone is being used more and more in the grocery business and the passer-by cannot tell from glancing in the shop of the average grocer whether he is busy or not He may be parcelling up a dozen orders just received over the wire and his clerks literally rushed to death when there are apparently few people on the premises. Another strange thing is that there are grocers in cities doing business for years with leading families and, if the good housewife or her daughter should enter the store tomorrow the chances are that she would not be known by the proprietor or any of his staff. These families may have bought their supplies for a generation from the grocer and have at the end of each month remitted the amount of their account by cheque. This plan has worked satisfactorily both for the customer and the merchant.

Speaking of some changes in the grocery line and its methods, J. F. Morrish, Yonge Street, Toronto, who has been serving tea and sugar over the counter for thirty-three years and has been in business for himself for eighteen years, was in a reminiscent mood when called upon by The Canadian Grocer the other day. Mr. Morrish has probably a score of customers whose table wants he has been supplying for nearly as many years and some of his patrons in that long period have not visited his store half a dozen times.

"I do not think I would know them," remarked Mr. Morrish. "We have found them pleasant and satisfactory to deal with in every way, and they have apparently found us reliable and prompt in our service."

What Evolution Brings.

"It is wonderful to sit down and review the change of the grocer in relation to his customers during the last thirty years. Formerly the down-town man sold many families everything in the grocery line and supplied them with all the edibles they required. All that is altered and one man supplies the milk to the average family, another the tea, another the vegetables, another the fruit and so on, and the family grocer gets only the staples. The corner store is also patronized for little odds and ends; the transient needs and the larger articles are left for the down-town man. This is merely a development of affairs caused by the removal of population farther out in the residential districts. We do not come in contact with our customers personally nearly as much as we did ten or fifteen years ago, and, consequently, salesmanship has also undergone a change, as well as the methods and management of the average household. In former days the lady or daughter of the well-to-do household who did the shopping, did not make out a list of wants. On entering the store we suggested many lines which she might be in need of and presented all the latest novelties and daintiest supplies. We often sold the caller much more than she thought of purchasing. Salesmanship counted with the down-town city grocer and his staff. By the movement of population to the outer sections very few women, comparatively speaking, do the buying now, leaving the matter to the maid. A list is made out, telephoned in and we fill it. We ourselves have helped to bring this system about, as some years ago we ceased sending a wagon and driver around from door to door taking orders. Our customers got to reside too far apart for this to be done conveniently, and the telephone has come into too general use for the practice to be continued profitably. The business system and alteration in the interior economy of the average household is shown in the fact that if the lady of the house does come in she has a definite idea of what she wants before she enters and also the quantity. She will consult her carefully prepared memo and, when that is gone through with, she does not buy much more, no matter what you may show or recommend. All this is not to be wondered at since a certain portion of the income in many households is laid aside each week for supplying the table and a definite idea established of what it costs to gratify the appetite. It is all a matter of evolution.

Grocer Gets Wily.

"Yes," continued Mr. Morrish, "I find that the tendency is more and more in the direction of a cash trade and I have less than a third of the number of accounts on my books than when I began business. Many customers have adopted the practice of settling monthly by cheque and promptly remit each month when their statements are forwarded to them. In my long experience I have had many instances of the wiles of people to get ahead of the grocer and obtain goods for nothing. The schemes they have resorted to are many and some of them original, but we never get caught the same way the second time. If we receive a telephone order from someone whom we do not know we send the goods C.O.D. and, if they are not paid for at the time of delivery, they are brought back. In years gone by parties have tried to induce a good-natured driver to leave the groceries on the plea that the lady of the house was out, that they did not have the right change or did not expect the delivery so soon, and, in some instances, it was impossible on going back to the house to collect the amount. Now our drivers have explicit instructions not to leave any parcels marked C.O.D., no matter how cordial the reception or how plausible the excuse for not having the money ready. If a driver violates instructions he is held accountable and the amount of the loss deducted from his pay. This has given him back-bone enough to say 'no' in every instance and we have no trouble. Where the caller is known to us things are different and we have a running C.O.D. account and, if the recipient has not the change ready or happens to be out, the parcels are left and the sum collected when the next delivery is made. Some persons, who get behind in their monthly accounts, do not pay or evidently do not intend to settle up, will suddenly drop off in their orders from $20 to $25 a month to $6 or $7 and think that we may fail to notice it. Generally speaking, such persons are getting their groceries or the bulk of them elsewhere do not intend to settle for the arrears of account, and are gradually veering to some one else and at the same time making a pretext, with an order now and then, of keeping up a connection with us. We get after the collection of such accounts promptly. It is better to gather in what they owe than to lose all in the end.

Irritating Ingenuity.

"Now, as to the schemes resorted to get goods from the grocer for nothing. Some of them are ingenious. Here is one: A lady will call and give a fictitious name and address. After ordering a large bill of goods to be sent C.O.D. to the name and address given she will say 'Oh! I am just going home and I want the salmon, and the tea for dinner. If you do not mind I will take them with me, and you can send the balance of the things in the afternoon,' as she is not in a hurry for them. In the afternoon the driver sets out to the place designated on the order to discover there is no such a number or that the name is a false one. In the meantime the woman, who gave the order, is perhaps congratulating herself how she cleverly managed to get the pound of tea or fish for nothing, and frequently all trace of her is lost. This practice is getting to be somewhat worn now and is not attempted as often as it used to be. I have already told how we overcome the C.O.D. dodge; the party discovering that she has not the money and how we refuse to leave the goods. I had a peculiar experience once with a man whom I knew. He ordered a large bill of goods and promised to pay me in a few days. After the groceries had been delivered he returned to the store and told me that we had sent him up some butter at thirty-five cents a pound. He asked if we had not some cheaper, adding that he could not afford to eat butter at that price. I told him that we had no cheap butter in just then. He wanted to know then if I would be offended if he sent the butter back. I told him no and he went away satisfied. When a collector called a few days later he discovered that the family had moved away giving no address and we could get no trace of their movements. Now, what puzzles me to this day is, why he came and desired me to take back the butter which he had already in his possession. It may have been a streak of honesty or remorse of conscience in order to satisfy himself that he did not want to get ahead of me too much.

The Clerk's Standpoint.

"Conditions are vastly different to-day with clerks than when I entered the business over 30 years ago. The work is now much lighter and more pleasant, cleaner in every way. In those days there was no flywheel on the coffee mill and the grinding was hard and tedious manual labor that made you perspire freely. We then had to grade all our own sugars, and pick over and sort the raisins. All this required long hours and the labor of grading sugar was heavy, dirty and tedious. The improvements in handling goods and in the methods of stock-keeping are marvellous.

"So you see that, it is not only the average household that the buying system has changed, but also in the way of serving and meeting the wants of the public. Nowadays, if a grocer gives good honest value and fresh clean groceries he can hold his trade as well by the telephone system as he once did when the personal element played so large a share in salesmanship. Downtown grocers have lost the direct contact to some extent, as small shops have sprung up on every street corner, breaking up the trade, yet we retain a large share of the staple lines of family supplies in spite of the way the business is divided up and specialized. Even to-day conditions are changing more perhaps than in the past. But I am not complaining—simply pointing out a few facts and general observations based on my experience and insight behind the grocery counter for over thirty years.'"

Interior Arrangement of a Bloor Street Grocery.

The above picture represents the interior of the grocery store of M. Hollingshead, 896 Bloor Street west, Toronto. Mr. Hollingshead is a grocer who has spent a number of years in the business, having learned it in the old country where his father and grandfather had been grocers all their lives. The interior arrangement is therefore made by a man who knows something about the business. Being of a roving nature Mr. Hollingshead traveled around the world before he came to Canada, and thereby learned a great deal. He spent four years in Australasia and arrived in Toronto seven years ago, his fortune all to make. Time after time he was refused work because he was from the old country, but he offered his services free and in a month he was manager of a branch store. He began business two years and a half ago, and has been successful from the first. His plan as he says himself is "Quality goods at as low a price as possible for cash." His specialty is good butter, he has some customers who come far for that. He sells cooked and cured meats which is another of his particular fads. His personality is engaging, his ideas are progressive, as his store indicates and he is off to a good start in the race for commercial success.

Co-operative Movement Fails in Picton

Up to the Present Nothing Definite Has Been Done—False Impressions Made by Promoters—Governor General Not the President of Dominion Co-Operative Association—Fred Newman, Picton, Makes Some Exposures.

The Grocer intimated a couple of weeks ago that a movement was on foot in the town of Picton, Ont., to organize a branch of the Dominion Co-Operative Association there and to open a co-operative store. The opening meeting appeared to have a rosy effect to the promoters but subsequent events seem to indicate that the movement has been "knocked in the head" even before it was "brought to a head." It now appears that for the present at least no such store will be instituted in the Prince Edward county capital and the cause of the downfall of the movement seems to be due to the efforts of the Retail Merchants' Association in exposing the true nature of some of the alleged facts.

The story of the commencement of the idea and the course later events have taken is one of interest to the members of the retail trade particularly.

The Initial Meeting.

On Jan. 19 a meeting was held as advertised in the town hall and during the afternoon some hundred farmers assembled to listen to the address of the principal speaker. He was H. Macdonald, secretary of the Dominion Co-Operative Association. The chairman was T. O. Demill. Mr. Macdonald spent considerable time in enumerating the benefits to the farmers of the establishment of a store on a co-operative basis, other speakers being Mr. Kemp, of Northfort, who until five years ago, was an educational secretary of a co-operative concern in England, and John R. Sayers. The latter said that the government looked after the farmers well, but took no part in commerce. This was where the co-operative movement came in. He favored the idea saying " as I see co-operation, it is the best for the townsmen, farmers and everybody, except the merchant, and then he is only in competition."

Desired 150 Shareholders.

Mr. Macdonald, before the meeting closed, secured, it is stated, about 100 names of persons who were then anxious to see the institution of the new store. but he wanted 150 subscribers. Another meeting was called for Saturday afternoon, Jan. 30, and almost a quarter of a page advertisement was inserted in a Picton paper to this effect.

The purpose of this meeting, as the ad. inferred, was the "appointing of committees and other organization purposes; also for imparting information to those desiring the same."

The advertisement also stated that the speakers would be "Alex. Fraser, Provincial Archivist, Toronto; Albert Chamberlain, President British Welcome League, Toronto; H. Macdonald, Glasgow, Scotland; and also asked those interested to "remember our president is the present Governor-General of Canada."

Merchants Gets Busy.

During the interim between the two meetings James Eadie chief organizer of the Retail Merchants' Association, who happened to be in Picton at the time called a meeting and the merchants talked over the new situation and decided to take steps to get definite information regarding the co-operative movements.

Picton grocers are readers of The Canadian Grocer and the issue of Jan. 22 contained an article referring to the case of some of the Toronto shareholders of the Dominion Co-Operative Association which came before Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. J. Hanna. This was clipped out and the merchants had it printed in poster form and distributed among the farmers. The poster bore the heading in large type, "Subscribers to Co-Operative Movements, Beware!"

An advertisement similar to the poster in wording and size was inserted in the press also, and on the page opposite the one calling attention to the meeting for last Saturday in the interests of the co-operative movement.

These conditions made things interesting. Saturday afternoon came round, however, and the climax arrived.

The President's Part.

The man who appears to have taken the greatest pains in securing the facts concerning the officers of the Co-Operative Association and their methods is Fred Newman, president of the Retail Merchants' Association of Picton. He sent copies of the Picton paper containing the advertisement to the Governor-General at Ottawa, to Hon. W. J. Hanna, and to C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture.

On Saturday a snow storm prevailed in Picton all day and about fifty persons only attended the meeting. This, however, seemed strange after the co-operative people had pointed out that six per cent. profit was to be expected on the money invested in addition to the profits shareholders would receive by purchasing cheaply.

A chairman was appointed and the local promoter spoke for some time on the advantages of the association, explaining that no stock was yet actually subscribed though a great number were interested, some wanting one and others twenty shares. Mr. Newman was asked to speak next and his address seemed to put a damper on the new movement. He was present he said, not as a representative of the retail merchants, but of Alex. Fraser and Albert Chamberlain, the former being president of the Dominion Co-Operative Association and the latter, vice-president.

Governor-General Not President.

Mr. Newman explained that he was requested to use the names of these gentlemen in saying they had not authorized the advertisement in the Picton press, that the Governor-General was not the president as the advertisement stated, that the scheme was not endorsed by both governments, and that they had never consented to be present. They said that Mr. Sayers had been in Toronto and that H. Macdonald had taken it on himself to make some arrangements with Mr. Sayers without consulting or even informing them or the directors.

At this point Mr. Newman suggested stopping, but the audience wanted to hear more. He explained that co-operative stores that were succeeding had started in thickly populated factory districts and started when the retailers' profits were double or treble what they were now. Their system was to charge top prices and then pay back the profits in dividends. Here the people preferred keeping thir own money and if an article could be sold for 80c they did not believe in paying $1 to have the extra 20c to be paid as dividend among all the stock-holders at some later date. He stated that all such business ventures from the very nature of things here must prove failures and disastrous to all stockholders. He also said that over 800 similar co-operative societies had failed in the last 20 years and that one most favorably situated in Spring Valley, Que., had not paid for the last five years, though it was perhaps the ideal spot in Canada for a co-operative store, if such a store could be made to pay here.

A Dangerous Practice.

He read part of a letter and telegram from high government officials to himself, that it was considered no light matter to use without authority, the Governor-General's name to sell stock or promote a company. He quoted government reports, facts and figures which seemed to convince all present that he knew what he was talking about.

Other Speakers.

Next followed Mr. Kent, an Englishman, who was quite enthusiastic on co-operation stores, and had, until recently, been a small stock-holder in one in England, and thought they would pay here. He explained the method of giving back checks to customers on which they drew a percentage of profit but admitted there was no bargains in their prices.

J. Sayers called on, made a few statements of importance. The audience, finding that there was no other defence for co-operation and apparently disgusted with the movement, at once to a man picked up their caps and started for the door.

There was no attempt to continue the meeting and as some said, there was nothing left of the movement—not even the smoke.

BEET GROWERS SEE RUIN.

United States Growers Anxious Over Proposed New Bill.

Beet sugar men in the United States see ruin of the industry in that country. The House Committee favors the admission of 30,000 tons annually of Philippine Island sugar free of duty and the beet growers declare that this free importation will paralyze the industry that they claim was bidding fair to reach huge proportions.

The Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee have agreed to insert in the new tariff bill a provision that 300,000 tons of sugar may come in from the islands each year free of duty.

One officer when asked as to the reason which led up to the conclusion of the committee said that it was the desire of President-elect Taft to promote the sugar industry in the Philippines without interfering with the business of the sugar importers in the United States. it was explained that the annual exports of sugar from the Philippines at present amount to only 109,000 tons per year, and that it will be ten or fifteen years before the amount will reach 300,000 tons. In the meantime the free importation into the United States will provide a market and offer inducements to foster the industry in the Philippines.

What Beet Men Say.

Officers of the Great Western Sugar Company state that if Congress allows the admission of 300,000 tons of sugar per annum free of duty there will be few, if any, extensions of the work of raising sugar beets and building of factories in the West. The beet sugar industry would then be compelled to divide the excess demand for sugar other than cane sugar made in the South with a new rival.

Not only would the manufacturers of beet sugar and the raisers of the sugar beets suffer, but the stock men of the state, who are just learning that the beet pulp and tops properly prepared and fed fatten their stock as well as the cattle of the corn belt are fattened, would also be sufferers.

PACKAGE GOODS ONLY.

Montreal Department Store Opening Grocery Department—Demonstration Booths Free.

On March 15 Dupuis Freres, the large east-end departmental store, in Montreal will open a grocery section. A large portion of the third floor will be devoted to foodstuffs. A feature new to the grocery business in Montreal will be the plan on which they will run this department. No bulk goods will be sold. Everything in stock will be in package style, teas, canned goods, spices, coffees, sugar, in twenty-pound bags, etc. The idea is to do away with the loss consequent upon the weighing out of small quantities of different commodities. The progress of the company along these lines will be watched with interest by all the trade. C. E. A. Holmes, advertising manager, has made a couple of trips to New York with a view to securing applicable ideas from similar groceries in the United States metropolis. Dupuis Freres will put in their own fixtures, to suit the particular needs of their department.

As a primary step the firm is awarding free space to all grocery manufacturers desirous of demonstrating their goods, their only stipulation being that they receive a percentage on the sales as is usual in cases of departmental store demonstrations. Booths are being erected at present by several firms, on the proposed grocery floor, while a couple of firms have been demonstrating for some little time past.

POISON AND CANNED GOODS.

The post-mortem examination to determine the cause of the death of Mrs. Samuel Grier, Toronto, who passed away towards the end of last week, indicates she did not die from effects of poison in canned tomatoes. Coroner M. D. McKichan, who was appointed to investigate the case, states he will not hold an inquest, as death was found to be due to natural causes. It seems that almost every time a person becomes ill after eating canned tomatoes, the illness is credited to poison in them. Tomatoes when properly packed so that no air is allowed to enter to produce fermentation, have been found to keep from three to four years, and The Grocer has actual knowledge that canned corn has kept perfectly for fifteen years.

The cry of poison in canned goods heard so often when there is no cause whatever, is becoming too frequent. During each year there are millions of canned goods consumed in the Dominion of Canada alone and how often are we given the positive proof that persons have died from the effects of getting poison from them? Frequently it appears in the public press that people have been seriously ill from eating some kind of canned goods, but it is very seldom, when an investigation is made, that the cause of illness can be attributed to defects in them, due to inferior packing by the canneries.

Often canned goods are opened and left in the can for hours before being used, and if the eating of them causes sickness or perhaps death, the blame usually falls upon the company who canned the goods and not on the carelessness of the consumer.

In these days of competition it is absolutely necessary that the utmost care be taken by canning companies to place upon the market the choicest article within their power. It is to their interest to do so, and it, therefore, does not seem probable that they would allow goods to be sent from their establishments in such a condition that it would be a menace to the health and safety of the consumers to use them as food.

CONFECTIONS AS A SIDE LINE.

From time to time The Grocer has advised the members of the retail trade to carry confectionery along with their regular stock and obtain an extra profit by a little extra labor. As will be observed in another page of this issue direct expressions of the benefits and disadvantages, as the case may be, to grocers in various towns and cities of Ontario are given. A careful perusal of these will elucidate the fact that as a general rule the carrying of confections proves to be a profitable investment. It is true that not all consider the addition worth the trouble. Some believe it to be unprofitable, but this should not condemn it.

If a profit can be made by one grocer there is no very good reason why another cannot do the same. Where there is direct competition from stores doing an exclusive trade in confectionery it might not bring very great results. But in the stores in the outlying districts particularly of a town or city there should be a profit, providing the business is properly handled.

The spring and summer are probably the best seasons of the year to advance sales in confections, such as cakes, cookies and pastry. These are the times the housewife doesn't care much about baking, and when a continuous fire is not necessary. It saves her time, labor and fuel. If she has to go up to the confectionery stores in the centre of the town for her delicacies she may prefer to do her own baking, but if they are in the corner grocery she purchases them there.

It will also be observed from the opinions expressed by the grocers that a clean, tidy, neat show case is necessary. These features are the most striking and if lacking the deficiency is almost sure not to be passed unnoticed by the tidy housewife. The baker or confectioner from whom the grocer secures his goods should also have the reputation of making clean, tasty articles, and if a little attention is paid to this department there is no natural reason why money should not be made in it.

ADVANCE IN SMALLER PLACES.

The results of the recent Christmas window-dressing competition, which appeared in The Grocer a couple of weeks ago, have a greater significance than one supposes at a glance at the reproductions of the photographs. They illustrate the great development within the past few years of the art of producing effective and attractive window displays. Readers of The Canadian Grocer will recollect that it is not long ago since prizes in such a competition were invariably carried off by grocers in the large cities, as Toronto and Montreal.

Now we have Victoria, in British Columbia, Peterboro, Georgetown, and Bracebridge winning the prizes, illustrating not only the widespread interest taken in this department, but the progress made by the grocers in producing good displays. Merchants in the towns and smaller cities are probably more apt scholars in learning the art than those in the large cities.

Window dressing is something, too, which The Grocer has always advocated as one of the best advertisements for the merchant, and the campaign in its favor is now beginning to bear abundant fruit. There is no reason whatever to prevent the harvest from being even better.

THE DIVISION COURT ACT.

In last week's issue of The Grocer a correspondent, who seems to have struck the nail on the head, gave some suggestions for changes in the Division Court Act, as it now exists. Undoubtedly the expense of collecting small accounts by means of this court is far too great, and as the writer points out, is often more than the actual money collected.

A change is certainly required and it needs the co-operation of the merchants who are anxious to remedy the condition of affairs. One person can do nothing alone. It remains for the united efforts of every branch of the Retail Merchants' Association to impress upon the makers of the law the unfairness of it to the men who are so much interested in and who do so much towards the progress and prosperity of the country.

RELIABLE MARKET CONDITIONS.

The belief expressed in The Grocer of a few weeks ago that the price of butter would decline owing to the accumulation of so much, and the somewhat inferior quality of it, has come to be truth. Butter last week was down a couple of cents on account of there being so much of it in the hands of the dealers, as well as in the stores of retail merchants who deal direct with the farmers.

Frequently references similar to the above are made in The Grocer, and as the condition of the markets are received from reliable sources those who are interested and who want to know of prospective changes, should read carefully what is said.

Unexpected changes often occur and these, of course, come so suddenly that it is not possible to express an opinion prior to their arrival.

OLIVES AND OLIVE OIL.

Advices from Spain indicate that the crop of olives in the Seville district is away below the average. The consequence is that the prices have gone up and further advances may be expected. As a matter of fact the price of the best Queen olives to-day is more than a hundred per cent. higher than at this time last year and about forty per cent. higher than a short time ago. Spain is one of the great producers of table olives and the failure of the crop there as well as in other places has been the cause for the advance. The actual production of good Queen olives in the Seville district was only 500 casks or 80,000 gallons which is estimated at about only eighty per cent. short of an average crop. Other olives have also advanced considerably.

The olive oil situation is somewhat similar. Italy and Sicily produce the fruit for the manufacture of this oil and on account of the poor crops the price which began to advance a few weeks ago is still going up. There will be no further crop now until December, so it is therefore impossible to estimate what the advance may be. The cause of the failure in the crop is said to be due to dry weather and disease.

ENCOURAGE CASH PAYMENTS.

All grocers prefer to receive cash for their goods and it is plain to be seen that the cash system is coming more and more in vogue in the merchandise world as the days go by. Many grocers throughout the Dominion are now carrying on strictly cash businesses and when once a good reliable trade is worked up the plan proves successful. If you do not desire to make a sudden plunge into the new system, encourage customers by working out some new idea which would gradually and eventually terminate in a cash business.

A grocer recently tried what he termed a "lucky day" sale. He instituted a plan by which his customers were returned the money or its value which they had paid in cash on the "lucky day." He advertised he would do this once a month. Each purchaser was given a dated receipt from the cash register, all the customers being told to save them. At the end of the month the lucky day was determined by an uninterested outsider by drawing a slip of paper from a hat with the date on it. All money paid as cash for purchases made on that day was refunded.

This meant that approximately 1-26 of the total cash receipts for the month were refunded. The effect of such a scheme naturally would be that customers would pay cash every day in order to hit upon the lucky one. The grocer might place another restriction on the plan by stating that those owing accounts at the end of the month would not be eligible to receive the refund.

ATTRACTION OF THE TEA ROOM.

Grocers who are in a position to do so will accomplish a great deal by establishing tea-rooms in connection with their stores. At the first glance this may seem extravagant, but it is sure to bring results if the tea-room is carried on in the proper manner.

The most important point in its favor is the attraction it has for the feminine purchaser and all grocers know that the majority of the buying is done by the mistress of the household. She comes down street to do her shopping which is principally confined to the grocery and dry goods stores. If a particular grocery store offers refreshment such as a cup of tea, that is the store that will have the greatest attraction for her providing all other things are equal. A hot cup of tea on a cold day will be very much appreciated and in addition it attracts the custom.

Grocers who establish tea rooms should take special care to have them neat and clean and they should provide good cups of tea for their guests. Tea sales will depend on this latter feature to a large extent and often it leads to extra sales. When they are instituted they should be well advertised in order to attract new customers. The establishment of the tea room is one of the coming events in the life of the successful and modern grocer.

OPTIMISM DESIRABLE.

Complaining about dull business and hard times is a mistake too often made by grocers. There is no necessity for it inasmuch as there is very little possibility of creating sympathy in the hearts of those who have to listen. On the other hand, it only serves to assist in sending out a pessimistic idea that injures business. People will hold on to their purse strings if they think times are going to be hard. This was partially exemplified during the past year, when the cry that money was scarce kept a great deal of it from circulating which otherwise would have moved among the merchants. Optimism among the grocers should be cultivated. The customer, at least, should not know that you are selling few goods. It may lead him to believe that other people are getting better results at competitive stores and you are apt to lose a good customer. Periods of inactivity in the grocery trade are bound to come, but they are also bound to pass. Be hopeful and prepare for better things in the future.

CHANGE IN BUYING METHODS.

A manufacturers' agent recently established in Winnipeg, in conversation with the Canadian Grocer the other day, explained the reason which had induced him to give up a splendid position in the east to start in business for himself in the western metropolis. For years he had charge of the sales of a large manufacturing concern, with particular responsibility for the western territory. He was accustomed to make three or four trips a year to see the more important customers in the west himself and on these trips he was able to sell his goods. Three and four trips a year were all that were necessary.

He found, however, that during the last couple of years there has been accomplished a quiet revolution in buying methods in the west, a revolution which has been hastened by the slight depression of the last year, but which bids fair to be lasting in its effects. Customers who formerly bought in car-lots are not willing to do so any more. They may buy as much during a season as formerly, perhaps more, but they prefer to buy as they require the goods. They are no longer inclined to tie up so much money as formerly in their stock.

For this reason the sales manager in question resigned his position in eastern Canada to become western agent for his firm, and in addition, to handle the goods of some non-competing manufacturers.

FIRM CHANGES AFTER FIRE

Kingston Becoming Important Wholesale Grocery Centre—Personnel of the Firm of W. G. Craig & Co.—Description of a Modern Establishment, Pointing Out the Conveniences.

The Limestone City is rapidly becoming an important wholesale grocery centre for the surrounding district. There are some splendid wholesale grocery stores doing business there, among the number being W. G. Craig & Co., whose establishment not very long ago was destroyed by fire. Rising from its ashes, however, it is again doing business in larger premises than before and with good results.

New blood has been introduced, in the personnel of J. Arthur and W. H. Craig, C.A., nephews of the senior member of the firm, and sons of Jas. Craig, of Kingston. The new premises, which have been secured are situated at the corner of Brock and Ontario Streets, and are convenient and suitable for the work to be done.

Equipped in Modern Manner.

The main building has four storeys, splendid cellars with cement floors, is well lighted and has an electric hoist, and its office accommodation is roomy and airy. It is adjacent to wharfage and the G.T.R., C.P.R., and K. & P.R. freight sheds, and there is a private siding to facilitate the handling of merchandise. In so far as the warehouse is concerned, it is complete in every respect, the new firm have decided to start with an up-to-date equipment, and a capacity to meet the expected increased trade.

W. H. CRAIG,

Accountant for Wholesale Grocery Firm,

The senior partner, W. G. Craig, has had a life-long experience in the wholesale grocery business. He was with John Carruthers & Co., and when A. Gunn & Co. succeeded to the business, he became a member of the firm and remained such until he took over the business himself some thirteen years ago. Mr. Craig is president of the Wholesale Grocers' Exchange of Ontario, is an alderman of several years' standing, and president of Cereals Limited, of Kingston.

New Members' Qualifications.

J. Arthur W. Craig has been connected with W. G. Craig & Co. for the past twelve years, and his experience in the office and as city salesman has given him a thorough knowledge of the business.

W. G. CRAIG,

Senior Member of the Firm and President of the Wholesale Grocers' Exchange of Ontario.

He is an officer in the 14th P.W.O.R., and in him Kingston claims to have the best baritone vocalist in Eastern Ontario. In this connection his services are in great demand.

W. H. Craig has been for the past eight years accountant for Messrs. Fenwick, Hendry & Co., wholesale grocers, of this city. He is a member of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario, and also an officer in the 14th P.W.O.R. His end of the concern will receive that care and attention which his qualifications indicate, and which is so much appreciated in the business community.

Interested in Church Affairs.

All three members of the firm are of Scotch parentage, and in consequence are Presbyterians, W. G. Craig being an elder, Arthur choirmaster, and W. H. treasurer of St. Andrew's church.

As all the old firm's goods, which were not destroyed by fire, were disposed of to Montreal dealers, W. G. Craig & Co. of to-day start out with everything brand new. Under these circumstances they will no doubt retain the confidence extended to the old firm in the past.

J. ARTHUR W. CRAIG,

A Soldier and City Salesman for W. G. Craig & Co. for Twelve Years.

TRADE NOTES.

The Cobourg Board of Trade held its first annual banquet on Tuesday evening, Jan. 26th.

The Fraser River Canners' Association has been merged into the British Columbia Canners' Association. W. D. Burdis, for many years secretary of the former company, continues as secretary of the enlarged organization, which has its headquarters at Vancouver.

Laporte, Martin & Co., Montreal, have just completed their inventory, and buyers who are looking for opportunities should purchase now. On some lines prices have been reduced in order to reduce stock, while broken lots of staple goods are being offered at greatly reduced prices. It is an opportunity for those who wish to complete their stock with standard products at less than regular market prices.—Advt.

The annual meeting of the Canada Brokerage Company was held at the office, 9 Front Street East, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 27th, at which the annual statement was presented. The following directors were re-elected: W. F. Morley, R. S. Hudson, H. H. Hudson and F. W. Hudson. At a subsequent meeting of the board, F. W. Hudson was re-elected president, and W. F. Morley, vice-president. Those present were well pleased with the satisfactory results obtained, and that the company was able to continue the usual dividends on preferred and common stock, as well as adding to their reserved fund.

DAMAGES AMOUNTED TO $25,000

Federal Court in Florida Town Awards That Amount to Private Individual in His Suit Against Consolidated Grocery Company.

The Journal of Commerce of New York in a recent issue contains the important announcement that the Consolidated Grocery Company of the United States has been fined $25,000, having been found guilty by the Federal Court at Jacksonville, Fla., of compelling John T. Hammond of Jacksonville, to close his business owing to alleged effects of the Association of Grocers' influence with the large producing firms. This case is different from that of the Crown versus Wholesale Grocers' Guild, since in the former the action was brought about by a private individual. Nevertheless it will prove interesting. The Journal of Commerce says.

John T. Hammond, of Jacksonville, Fla., who has been suing the Consolidated Grocery Company et al to prove an alleged combination of wholesale grocers to control prices in restraint of trade in the Federal Court at Jacksonville, Fla., has been awarded $25,000 damages. In view of the suit of Hinton G. Clabaugh vs. J. A. Van Hoose, president of the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, which is now pending in the Circuit Court of Jefferson County, Ala., as well as sundry other similar suits in various parts of the country, the case is one of widespread interest.

According to the Florida "Times-Union," published in Jacksonville, Hammond asked damages in the sum of $200,000 against the wholesale grocers in Florida, whom he charged with being members of the association. The list of defendants included the Consolidated Grocery Company, C. W. Bartleson Co., J. H. McLaurin & Co., W. B. Johnson & Co., Baker & Holmes Co. United Grocery Co., Stringfellow Bros. & Co., Hillsborough Grocery Co., Miller & Millard Grocery Co., C. H. Hargraves Co., Jacksonville Grocery Co., McNerny Grocery Co. and the Wright Grocery Co.

Hammond, who began his suit several years ago, alleged that he began a wholesale grocery business at Orlando, Fla., in March, 1905, and that he was compelled to close his business owing to the effects of the association of grocers' influence with the large producing firms. Basing his suit on those allegations, Hammond sought to prove that the combination existed and that it was through its influence that he was forced out of competitive business with other firms, who were members of the association.

The suit brought by Mr. Hammond in the Florida court was quite similar to the one brought by Mr. Clabaugh in Alabama. In his suit Mr. Clabaugh alleges that the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, of which Mr. Van Hoose, the defendant, is president, is a combination to control prices and in restraint of trade in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act.

Mr. Clabaugh attended the trial of the Florida case. In a letter to a friend in Birmingham he had the following to say with reference to the case:

In a nutshell, the plaintiff proved beyond all shadow of a doubt that the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association was an illegal combination and Judge Locke has already stated that he will relieve the jury of the obligation of deciding that and several other facts.

The honorable judge has already stated that he will, in substance, charge the jury that the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association is an illegal combine, etc., and about all the jury will have to decide is how much damage Hammond is entitled to; how much he actually lost and how much he would have made had he been permitted to continue in business unmolested, in addition to general damages.

Mr. Van Hoose came down to the trial and was a witness.

The evidence introduced showed conclusively the direct active connection between the local associations and the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association, and Judge Doggett, of the counsel for the defence, was called down by the court for arguing about the prominence of the wholesalers involved and trying to show the organization was justifiable. The court informed counsel that the jury would be charged on that score and to confine his arguments to other points. The court remarked that the speech might sound very well in the halls of Congress, but not in court.

Hammond made an affidavit that he would maintain prices, and counsel for defendants laid great stress on the fact that Hammond had done so and was equally guilty. Hammond also made the statement that his father, who was interested with him, was also interested in the retail business, and the association claimed he was therefore not "entitled" to buy goods from first hands.

The court has ruled the combination is illegal without reference to whether a merchant is a wholesaler, retailer, broker, any two of them or all of them. It simply holds it to be illegal in restraint of trade, fixing prices, etc., and the jury hands in the amount.

Mr. Van Hoose was also asked on the stand whether he was the same Van Hoose who was the defendant in a suit in Birmingham, and he replied that he was and that it was a most iniquitous suit. He said he would easily clear himself. Mr. Van Hoose was asked to explain some of his own documents and statements and "proceedings."

Attorneys for plaintiff laid stress on the fact that they were not trying to convict the wholesale grocers criminally, but merely trying to get just damages.

Mr. Van Hoose was asked if he had heard the result of the case, and replied he had been informed that the jury in the case had returned a verdict awarding the plaintiff $25,000 damages.

When asked if he cared to make any statement relative to the case, Mr. Van Hoose said:

"About all I can say relative to the case is that it will be appealed. In view of the case pending against me in the Jefferson County Court, I cannot discuss the Florida case."

In view of the above it will also be interesting to read the following excerpt from the report of Commissioner H. K. Smith, of the Bureau of Corporations, Washington, D.C., which he submitted to Secretary Strauss of the Department of Commerce and Labor, dealing with combinations and corporations. In his report he says:

In the last five years the country has made great progress in the problem of corporate regulation. As a result of the work already done we are now, I believe, in a position to make a further and very definite advance in our general policy.

Three considerations should guide that advance:

(1) That the real issue is: What are the intent, methods and effect of a given combination or corporation? What a great corporation does and how it does it is of far more practical importance than the mere question whether it is legally a combination or not.

(2) That the first step in such an advance must be to establish a broad system of corporate publicity through a Federal office.

(3) That the system adopted shall provide, as far as possible, a basis for the conference and co-operation of all interests.

There is an irresistible movement toward concentration in business. We must recognize the fact that industrial concentration is already largely accomplished, in spite of general statutory prohibition.

Movement Towards Concentration.

Recognizing these facts, the aim of new legislation should be to regulate, rather than to prohibit, combination. It is an obvious absurdity to attempt to do both at the same time and prohibition has practically failed. Our present law, forbidding all combination, therefore, needs adaptation to the actual facts. It is now inflexible and indiscriminate. It takes no account of the intent, methods and results of combination. It often operates against concerns which are morally and economically beneficial, while its defects admit of its easy evasion by corporations whose purposes and results are largely indefensible. In prohibiting combination agreements it has gone far to drive corporations directly to the most extreme and complete form of consolidation. In short, as a practical scheme for the handling of the present corporation problem the sweeping prohibition of the anti-trust laws has been altogether unsatisfactory.

If we are to do anything effective with the corporation question we must make an advance on our present legislation. The practical object is to see that business opportunity and the highways of commerce are kept equally open to all; to prevent fraud, special privilege and unfair competition.

To do this we must recognize concentration, supervise it and regulate it. We must do this positively, through an active Federal agency and not merely by the negative prohibitions of penal law. We must have co-operation with corporate interests as far as possible. We must have, of course, effective penal laws against specific forms of unfair competition and the misuse of monopoly powers."

This, it might be stated, is practically what the retailers, the wholesalers and manufacturers are trying to persuade our Government to do and it is something worth the closest of consideration.

PERTH.

February 3.—N. E. Dodd's store, on Gore Street, received a scorching on Sunday afternoon. The fire which was supposed to have started from an old closed-in fireplace, broke out about 3.30 p.m., and before it was extinguished all the stock on the shelves was practically ruined by fire and water. This store was remodelled and a new plate glass front put in just last summer. The insurance will pretty well cover Mr. Dodds' loss.

A. V. McLean is well pleased with his newly established system of accounting.

January trade is reported to have been about average.

The stock of Harry Murray, grocer, was recently purchased by J. T. Conway and W. S. Robertson.

In the issue of the Grocer of Jan. 15th it was stated that Codville Co., wholesale grocers, Winnipeg, were burnt out. This should, of course, have read "Brandon."

SAVING OF $18.

Here is another example of the effect of the advertisements in The Canadian Grocer. Beverly McDonald, grocer of Picton, Ont., states that he purchased a Dayton computing grocer's scale through an advertisement of that company which appeared in The Grocer. He paid $57 for the scale and states that he was just on the point of buying a computing scale of another company and of a similar style for $75. He has thanked The Grocer for thus saving him $18.

WORK FOR CHEAPER SUGAR

Wholesale Grocers in United States Trying to Attain This End—Think the Duty Too High.

A movement is on foot in the United States among the wholesale grocers to work for cheaper sugar. Sugar, it is claimed by men well informed in the trade across the line, pays practically 80 per cent. duty—and it a household necessity—whereas luxuries such as automobiles, pay only 45 per cent. duty.

A paragraph surmounting a circular is being circulated by a committee of wholesale grocers in New York "formed to assist in obtaining cheaper sugar for consumers through reduction of duties on raw and refined sugars." It says:

"Sugar, a household necessity, pays practically 80 per cent. duty. Luxuries, such as automobiles, pay 45 per cent. duty. We desire the greatest good for the greatest number."

"There is no good reason," says the committee, "why this one product should be singled out for such an oppressive tax, which falls chiefly on the farmers and workers of the country. The consumption of sugar by the average family of moderate means is as large as that of the wealthy classes, many of whose luxuries are taxed at much lower rates than this necessity."

The committee enclose with their circular a copy of a statement by Claus A. Spreckels, president of the Federal Sugar Refining Company. Mr. Spreckels said, speaking for himself, he would be perfectly satisfied if free trade in both raw and refined sugar should be finally decided on. "I would, of course, appreciate," he continued, "and I think we are entitled to, a moderate protection on refined sugars, but would prefer absolute free trade to the present schedules, under which the sugar trust is the principal beneficiary and enabled to exact special privileges and conditions on sugars produced in Louisiana and the Hawaiian Islands.

"It is evident," continued Mr. Spreckels "that the country desires a revision of the tariff, and expects a reduction of duties wherever it can be shown to be reasonable, feasible and advantageous. Personally, I take no stock in the old and threadbare theory that the duty on sugar cannot be abolished on account of the Government requiring the revenue, and have full confidence that your committee and the Senate Finance Committee can, after your years of experience, raise the necessary revenue from other sources."

"As far as the production of the domestic sugar is concerned, I claim that beet sugar factories located in proper localities, such as Colorado, California, Utah, Idaho and Oregon, should, and I am informed, can produce granulated sugar at 2½ cents per pound. Of course, if it be the purpose of this Government to impose a tariff which will enable the production of articles in unsuitable localities at the expense of the American public, then an import duty is necessary and will always have to be maintained. As far as Louisiana is concerned, I contend that the Sugar Trust is in a position to seize at its discretion a large share, if not all, of the benefit of the protection granted. As far as our colonies are concerned, they to-day are able to produce sugars in competition with the rest of the world.

Under the circumstances, I believe the sooner our Government reduces and gradually wipes out entirely the duty on sugar the better it will be for the country and all concerned. Of course bearing in mind that the differential afforded refiners should be reduced in proportion to the reduction in duties on raw sugar.

The Chairman—You think the result of that would be that the beet sugar factories east of the Rocky Mountains could not exist in proper localities?

Mr. Spreckels—They are not in their proper localities. If you want to raise beet sugar in Florida, or cane sugar in Michigan, put a tariff of 5c a pound on it, but those are unnatural conditions.

The Chairman—They could not raise cane sugar in Michigan if you put 50c a pound duty on it. What effect would that have on the Louisiana cane sugar; it would put them out of business, would it not?

Mr. Spreckels—I am not so certain about that. They sold their sugars last year on practically the basis of 80c per hundred pounds protection.

Mr. Underwood—What effect would there be upon the business of the refiners of this country if we reduce the tax on sugar one-half a cent a pound?

Mr. Spreckels—I think it would be a great benefit to it, stimulate the trade, stimulate other trades, such as the canning of fruit and preserves; for example, England is the greatest consuming country for sugar per capita in the world. Their consumption per capita is nearly 100 pounds, while in this country it is only 80 pounds. We all know, or think we do, that the English people do not actually consume that sugar. They do not eat as many sweetmeats as the American probably, but they export that to their colonies and to foreign countries in the shape of marmalades, jellies, jams and all sorts of preserves. England does not raise those fruits, but we do. If we have cheaper sugar our fruit can be exported in the shape of these marmalades, jellies and jams.

Mr. Underwood—The present prices that the American Sugar Refining Company pays the Louisiana people and the Hawaiian people is at least one-half a cent under the European cost with the tariff added, is it not: the Hamburg price with the tariff added?

Mr. Spreckels—A little more than one-half a cent—about 0.68 of a cent.

J. Mitchell Jones, who has spent his business career with Andrews, Gillespie & Co., Liverpool, and who for the past four years has been in charge of the Montreal office, has been admitted as a member of the firm.

PROOF OF SELLING AT COST

Interesting Treatise of This Phase of Ink—Thinks Public is Becoming Skeptical—How it Can be Proved to Satisfaction of Buyers.

Getting Rid of Merchandise in Printer's

Printer's Ink of Jan. 13 has the following of interest to the trade: If, when the phrase "Marked Down to Cost" first came into popular use it had been turned over to a board of public utilities and its use restricted and hedged around with difficulties and moral obligations it might still be doing valiant service in emptying the shelves of overstocked merchants and the pockets of eager customers. But long and careless use has dulled the edge of the phrase and the worthy old actor on the advertising stage is back among the chorus while the spot light plays over newer and less familiar soubrettes.

Jones, with child-like faith in the efficacy of the conventional, advertises his sale of dry goods and after a pica explanation of the reason for his sacrifice, remarks in 72-point black face gothic that "everything will be sold at cost." The public having bought much goods and a few chattels at previous sales of this sort, does not grow excited over the remarkable opportunity for buying goods from Jones.

The public is skeptical about the ability of any man to remain profitably in business while selling his goods at cost. The theory involves some propositions in merchandising which the public doesn't understand, and probably doesn't want to. So the fact that goods are sold at cost must be proven.

A merchant in a western town did this by means of his invoices. "Come and see our original bills, read the prices on them and compare them with the prices marked on our goods," read the posters his delivery boy nailed on the walls and telephone poles. It was explained that the invoices on all goods offered in the sale would be posted in the store where everyone would have an opportunity to inspect them and see that goods were actually being sold at cost.

At the store, the show windows were filled with the bills, scattered on the floor of the windows and pasted on the sides. Inside the bills were seen all over the store. When it was possible to do so they were placed near the counter containing the goods listed. A big counter full of shoes was accompanied by the bill on which these shoes were invoiced.

Probably few customers went to the trouble to compare the listed figures. It was not necessary for them to do it because the evident readiness of the merchant for every one to investigate was proof enough that the goods were actually being "sold at cost."

Another merchant made his cost mark public. "I mark all my goods with the cost mark 'white sugar,'" he announced. "At this sale nothing will be sold but by this cost mark." Large newspaper advertisements explained the method of marking cost on goods by letters instead of figures and showed how to tell the cost of goods by means of the cost mark. To make the sale more effective, a number of little cards were printed containing the explanation of the cost marking plan and a key to it. These were distributed to be brought by the customer to the store as an aid in figuring out the cost price.

This plan not only proved popular, but enabled the sale to be put on without the usual work of going over the entire stock of goods and marking new prices thereon.

STEPPING STONES TO SUCCESS.

Persistent Work an Important Feature —Old and New Methods Should be Diligently Studied.

An address on the attainment of success delivered a short time ago by W. F. Tupman at the Merchant Ventures' Technical College, Bristol, is of particular education to grocers and should be read by all with interest. He believes that there is nothing that leads to success better than persistent effort. He says that in all matters appertaining to the grocery and allied trades, as is the case in every calling which demands combination of manual labor intelligently applied together with mental faculties of a high order, keen perceptive powers, and shrewd business acumen generally, there is no royal road to knowledge. Only steady persistent and prolonged effort suplemented by determination to excel can result in the acquisition of that all round type of information, which is imperative to the would-be successful trader of to-day. It is to foster the desire for this information, to render every possible aid in its easy assimilation, and to encourage and assist, by all legitimate means those who desire help to efficiently help themselves that the programme upon which we are just entering has been arranged.

"My sincere hope is that it may prove not only interesting and instructive in itself, but will also, as the session develops exhibit a full measure of practical utility, and that its ultimate end will be not only the stimulation of keener interest and better service on the part of ourselves as assistants; but what is of even greater moment, increased business, and wider public support, to the principal under whom it is our duty to serve.

The Old and the New.

Those who study the trade papers will doubtless have noted the fact that allied traders of a certain school of thought—which we may well designate the old-fashioned—hold the view that Technical Training for grocers' assistants is uncalled for and unnecessary. These gentlemen argue that all the requisite information, and the general knowledge called for can be gathered during the daily routine. With this view it is impossible to concur. The best proof of its fallacy is afforded by the fact that all the keenest men in our business cordially support the idea of supplemental training, and those who have been most successful are profoundly convinced of its high utility.— Not only so, but assistants of the shrewd and thinking type have readily and with profit to themselves eagerly taken advantage of the facilities hitherto proffered, and deplore the fact that the classes were not inaugurated during the period of their early service These facts should carry weight with you.

At the same time, however, care must be taken not to attach too much importance to the theoretical, as compared with the practical side of business training. Certain duties can be outlined here, and hints given as to their efficient performance, and proper carrying out, but the place to learn and practice them is in the shop itself. Ideas can be conveyed to you as to the art of salesmanship, the modes to be adopted in the introduction of certain classes of goods, and full information given as to the constituent parts of the goods themselves. But, none the less, the practical part must, in the main, be necessarily left to yourselves. The efficient assistant; the good all-round man whom some employers aver they find such difficulty in finding; is the one who combines theory and practice in equitable proportion. Not as some cynical would-be philosophers have told us one ounce of the latter is equal to one ton of the former, but a fair half and half blend.

CHANGE IN DISCOUNTS.

Woodenwares, Brushes and Brooms are Affected—Into Force on Jan. 1st.

In common with the general trend of getting business down to a cash basis, or nearly so, the woodenware, brush and broom manufacturers of Canada have issued circulars to the grocery trade reducing the terms and discounts on their products from 60 days net and 1 per cent. 30 days, to 30 days net and 1 per cent. 10 days. The new rate on woodenware came into force on January 1 and that on brooms and brushes on February 1, although one large manufacturer had these new terms in force the greater part of 1908. Practically every manufacturer of woodenware, brooms and brushes now enforces the new terms.

The Toronto fruitmen won in the bowling tournament on Wednesday afternoon against the trundlers of the Retail Grocers' Association, by some 70 or 80 pins. The grocers were up in the A class but the B class lost by a big margin to the B class of the fruiters ranks. The games were played at the Toronto Bowling Club alleys and a pleasant afternoon was spent.

CANNERS NOW IN CONVENTION

Many Visitors in Louisville This Week—Secretary's Report Read—Advances Made Within the Year.

The big canners' convention in Louisville, Ky., opened on Monday, Feb. 1. This is the second annual convention of the National Canners' Association, and that includes as well the National Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, the Machinery and Supplies Association and the National Food Manufacturers' Association. A Louisville despatch says: From one end of the country to the other have come canners and their allies numbering almost 2,000.

Unlike many previous conventions, this one's activities are centralized in one place—the big armory. Here is a veritable beehive of mechanical development, the large drill shed having been converted into an immense cannery, where almost evry process known to the industry is exemplified by various types of machines. Every new conceit of the inventor, every labor-saving device, every ingenious process of modern development is shown in operation and canners are deeply interested in everything that promotes the advance of their art. The machinery exhibit is said to be the largest and best, and the facilities for display the most complete the association has ever held.

The Louisville reception committee, comprising Leopold Levy (chairman), V. H. Englehard, Fulton Gordon, Louis Hirsch, George R. Ouerbacker and Marc Blakemore, is making itself manifest in many bits of thoughtful courtesy, and the guests are warm in their appreciation of the efforts of the four organizations—the Louisville Commercial Club, the Board of Trade, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association and the Retail Merchants' Association—which are playing host with such signal effectiveness.

The report of the secretary-treasurer, Frank E. Gorrell, which was read at the convention on Tuesday showed the uphill character of the work of building up a representative association. He said in part:

"There never has been a time during the year when the office has not felt the embarrassment of poverty. Coming from Cincinnati last winter without enough money to discharge old obligations, the treasurer immediately began a renewed campaign. An examination of the treasurer's account will show that over $400 has been spent in postage. This indicates that over 20,000 pieces of mail have been sent out. A conservative estimate on this basis shows that over 100,000 pieces of literature have gone through the United States mail. We have endeavored in every possible way to present to the canners the importance of our organization and the necessity of their support, and it is gratifying to say that our appeal has not been entirely in vain. Your secretary has also written several thousand personal letters.

"One of the most important early acts of the executive committee was to change the location of the convention from Chicago to Louisville.

"Our great effort of the year was the collection of reliable statistics on the pack of tomatoes, corn and peas. At the meeting of the executive committee held in Chicago on April 4 a committee, consisting of Mr. Orem, chairman, and your secretary, was appointed to consider the advisability of the national association taking up this work. This committee recommended that the same be done, and the executive committee approved.

"As is usual with most experiments, the response at first was not general. An urgent letter brought better results and replies were received from several hundred canners. They, however, formed but a small portion of the whole, and it was necessary to send another letter. Canners by this time were commencing to recognize the value of the work and the probability of its success. Still there were many who held back for one reason or another, and it required numerous communications, in some instances as many as seven or eight, to land the coveted figures. In some localities we found it necessary to cover the ground by special agents, as well as personal reports. The completed work presents an absolutely accurate count as nearly correct as can be possible.

"The collection of these statistics meant three months of the hardest and most exacting kind of work, realizing the value of the same to the trade and desiring that they should be accurate beyond question.

Bureau of Publicity.

"A great many suggestions have been made during the year in regard to a bureau of publicity and your secretary sent out a blank to test public opinion on this question. There were received a flattering number of intelligent letters discussing the subject in all of its phases, and it is believed that if brought about in the proper shape almost every representative canner in the country would be willing to contribute a sum of money for the purpose of intelligently acquainting the public with the uses of his product. Of course, a campaign of education would mean that only truthful labels could be used. I know of nothing more calculated to harm our interests than for a consumer to buy a tin can with the picture of a red-ripe luscious mushy peeling and two handfuls of juice on the inside.

Benefits of Trade Papers.

"If the association has accomplished any decided good this year it should give the proper credit to the trade papers, who have labored unselfishly for the cause. The president has already thanked each one personally, but the secretary cannot refrain from also adding a word of praise. We look forward to still greater good next year and commend our successors to the trade papers for inspiration and assistance."

Canned Goods Association.

In addressing the convention on Tuesday, President Walter A. Frost, of Chicago, of the Canned Goods and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, called attention to the need of a broader co-operation between canners on the one side and jobbers and the Government on the other. He spoke substantially as follows:

It is impossible to correctly estimate the value of these conventions to the canning industry of the country. The bringing together of the people engaged in any industry for a free exchange of ideas must result in great good to that industry. In addition to this the canners in convention have had put before them all the new mechanical appliances demonstrated in a practical way, enabling them to keep pace with new methods at a comparatively small expenditure of time and money.

The value of organized effort is too clearly apparent to everyone to need comment. The National Canners' Association has only been put on its present basis by careful thought and hard work. To bring forth the results that will benefit every canner it needs and must have the support of every one of you; not only moral support, but financial. The benefits that can be obtained by such support are well demonstrated by the results that have crowned the efforts of the officers of the Wholesale Grocers' Association.

A closer union and a better understanding between the Canners' and Brokers' Associations represented in this convention and the Wholesale Grocers' Association, is very much needed. There are many evils now existing that can be corrected by joint action, and I believe that when these conditions are fully understood by all a fair solution to any question that arises will be found and adopted.

The Wholesale Grocers' Association, while one of the youngest organizations of any interested in the canned goods business, is the best equipped. In all matters concerning the marketing of canned goods that need adjusting, I believe it is the disposition of the jobber to be perfectly fair. Naturally, he looks at the question from his standpoint and is at times, inclined to ask concessions that are not fair to canners and brokers. In order that the canners and brokers may be fully protected you should be equally as well organized and give your officers the backing necessary to enable them to maintain their position. Many of you who are members and pay your dues still do not give them your active support, and it is that actual support that is essential to their success.

Montreal, Feb. 3.

Travelers returning to the city report conditions in the country showing a very marked improvement. This fact however, is not largely reflected in the volume of trade passing between the wholesale and retail trade, which is explained by the fact, that many retailers are going along with more caution this year. Last year they found themselves overstocked, and they do not intend to repeat this mistake. In this way, retailers are working off, what remains of their old stock, and are not incurring large obligations. To a great extent, this policy of retrenchment is being followed by the large wholesalers also. Collections have been fairly good, during the week, some firms report the liquidation of old debts and prompt meeting of current expenses. The market has not shown many changes during the week. In spite of the fact that vegetables are arriving in greater quantity, from the South, the market is slightly stronger this week. Onions are decidedly scarce. The close approach of the Lenten season is speeding up the fish market somewhat, and practically all lines are in good supply. A good fish trade is expected during the Lenten season. The recent drop in flour has helped the market considerably, so far as demand is concerned, which has increased largely. Sugar is strong at the recent rise. Fruits are a shade stronger, and distributing demand is good. Barbadoes molasses continues strong, with prices well maintained. The scarcity of molasses has stimulated the syrup situation somewhat. Sugar is in better demand, notwithstanding the recent advance. Buyers have been reminded, that the price of sugar is very low, and many are hastening to cover their requirements.

Provisions continue strong, owing to a recent advance in the live hog market of 25c per 100 lbs. Tea and coffee are selling steadily. Evaporated apples are maintaining a strong position, owing to scarcity, and good demand. Dried fruits with the exception of raisins, are somewhat neglected. Beans have advanced again, owing to scarcity. Storage eggs are practically exhausted and new laids are increasing slowly in size of receipts. Butter is steady and unchanged in price. Steadiness marks the cheese market with limited export demand.

SUGAR—The sugar situation is strong. The late advance of 10c per 100 pounds has stimulated business, and buyers are taking more interest in the market. Prices have been fully maintained.

TORONTO.—Trade in canned goods on the local market is quiet as yet, but it is expected that a good movement will take place within the next couple of weeks, particularly in fish and fruit.

The express companies seem to be desirous of having the question of rates on fruit settled from the fact that they have made a proposal for a conference with the fruit men at St. Catharines. The date of the conference has not been decided as yet, but if satisfactory arrangements to the interested parties can be made it will likely be held soon.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Molasses—Market is firm.

Peels—Market unsettled.

Olives—Rapid advances.

Currants—Advance expected.

Beans—Prices go up.

Toronto, Feb. 4.

This week's market brings forth some interesting features. No further fluctuation has occurred in sugar, the market being steady but quiet. The molasses market is very firm, the demand being particularly good but syrups are rather quiet.

The olive and olive oil markets are interesting. They have been soaring for some time, as will be observed from the fact that the best Queen olives produced in the Seville district, Spain, are more than 100 per cent. higher now than at this time last year, and about 40 per cent. higher than a short time ago. The reason is the scarcity. Advices from Spain show that the production of good Queen olives only amounts to 500 casks or 80,000 gallons, which is only about 20 per cent. of the average.

The olives for the manufacture of olive oil are grown principally in southern Italy and in Sicily. The crops there have not been good and prices have been going up.

The peel situation is also very unsettled. The cause of this is the Sicilian earthquake and the uncertainty of the shipments of lemons. England imports lemons, citrons, etc., and manufactures the peel which we use in Canada and English manufacturers have cancelled their prices altogether on account of the chaotic state of affairs. Prices should advance. Citron and orange peels will go up in sympathy with the lemon peel market.

A scarcity of beans in the United States has had the effect of advancing prices slightly here.

A splendid trade in Easter goods for grocery and confectionery stores is reported and the general impression is that business is much better than last year at this time. Prospects for the future appear to be bright.

SUGAR—Nothing that can be considered as a feature has occurred in this market since the advance announced last week. The market is quiet and steady and so far as can be seen there are no natural reasons why any change should occur in the near future. Since last week a new sugar has been placed on the market by the St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co., known as the St. Lawrence Crystal Diamond Dominos. It is especially made for coffee and put up in five-pound boxes only, the sugar being in the form of a rectangular solid.

TEA—At the present time the tea trade is rather quiet. Towards the end of last week it was much better, so one firm stated, as it sold a considerable quantity in British Columbia. The tendency to purchase higher grade teas on the part of the consumer is still manifest. Few 25c package teas are now on the market, although quantities are being sold at that price in bulk.

COFFEE—There is little local demand for coffee at present, the market being about the average. Advices from Mexico state that the Salvador and DRIED FRUITS—There is an improvement in this market in many respects. Prunes are not very active but a strong market is predicted for them. They are more widely sought in the five months beginning with March, as at that time people want a change from meat and prunes are splendid food. In the northern districts they are in good demand. The market in apricots and dried peaches is also firm. Advices from Greece indicate stiffer prices for currants may be looked for. The market in peels is in a sort of a chaotic state just at present. English manufacturers will not quote prices.

GIVE THE TRAVELER A HEARING.

"Yes sir, the man who refuses to see a traveler makes a mistake every time if he will look at the matter in a calm reflective light," said the manager of a large establishment to the Canadian Grocer this week. "I believe he can get pointers, even if he is stocked up with goods and does not need anything, that will well repay him for the time taken up in conversation or in looking over samples.

A traveler called on me some weeks ago. I was pretty busy, so when he asked me how my supply of globes was I pointed to my stock and replied that I was stocked up to the neck. "Well," he added, "I would like to have you look at my samples." I hesitated but finally said that I would give him a few minutes.

In getting the prices I learned more about buying and the prevalent quotations than I had for months past. I found that he was twenty per cent. lower than what I had been paying even under the most favorable arrangement. "Are these your regular prices," I asked, and he assured me that they were. I knew that a glass combine had existed on the other side but I was not aware that his house had broken away from it. The representative added that the bottom would soon drop out of the whole affair and I found that he was right.

I firmly believe that goods well bought are half sold as I have found it true in my experience. Yes, sir, time spent with travelers often repays you in many ways and I always make it a point to give them a friendly reception no matter whether I am stocked up with goods or not," concluded the jobber.

Governments Refuse to Own Elevators

Western Legislators Say it is Unconstitutional—Formal Opening of Moose Jaw's Big Flour Mill—Important Winnipeg Real Estate Deal—Potatoes Frost-Bitten and Prices Soar—Condition of the Wheat Market—The Situation in the West.

The Western Viewpoint, by our Special Correspondent.

Winnipeg, Feb. 3.—The most important event, commercially, of the week was the final decision handed out by the Premiers of the three Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, on the question of provincial Government ownership of interior elevators. The decision was made public on the 30th instant, and it has been awaited with no little interest and anxiety. The Grain Growers Associations that had called for this very radical change in the handling of the chief industry of the West seemed very confident that their demands would be acceded to in a measure at least, but they were doomed to disappointment. It is whispered that not a few of the line elevator companies that are finding little profit in their houses were somewhat disappointed also.

In brief, the decision was an emphatic refusal of the demands of the grain growers, based, of course, on constitutional grounds. The Premiers declined to act in accordance with the wishes of the grain growers on the grounds that they deemed it necessary to secure an absolute monopoly of the grain trade in order to insure the success of such a great governmental undertaking, involving the estimated expenditure of from seven to ten million dollars. To create such a monopoly would be unconstitutional under the British North America Act. In explaining their position the Premiers state that the consideration of unusually grave and complicated questions, constitutional, financial and legislative, are involved, and that unless the British North America Act is amended to give them the powers already alluded to, the Government ownership of elevators might "fail and prove futile, and possibly be followed with disastrous results."

In this decision there is no doubt the Premiers have, to a certain extent, side-stepped the question, as there is no absolute proof that a complete monopoly of the powers specified is necessary, and indeed the Grain Growers' Association stoutly maintain that it is not. But outside the ranks of the more rabid of the grain growers it is not likely that the Premiers will be at all severely criticised for at least gaining time for a more full and lengthy discussion of the whole question.

It is not to be supposed for a moment that the question has been disposed of, but at least it has been given a hoist that will give time for the collating, sifting and discussing of evidence in connection with such a project before the country is committed to costly and perhaps wholly impractical legislation whereby existing trade relations with Great Britain might be seriously impaired.

New Stock Exchange.

Promptly at 10.30 on Monday morning in a room of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange Building, the first call on the long talked of Winnipeg Stock Exchange was given. The charter for this exchange was obtained some years ago by A. M. Nanton, Hugh Sutherland, J. T. Gordon, M.P.P., of Winnipeg, C. E. Lewis, of Minneapolis, H. H. Beck, of Toronto, and R. H. Agur, of British Columbia.

The opening of such an exchange was talked of from time to time, and two years ago W. Sanford Evans, now Mayor of Winnipeg, took the matter up in an active manner and collated a large amount of data which was finally laid before an organization meeting. It had been the intention to open the exchange about the time the new Grain Exchange building was opened, and offices were secured for that purpose, but many matters lead to delay. Finally the date of opening has been definitely fixed for Monday morning, Feb. 1st, at 10.30, and from that time on the Winnipeg Stock Exchange will be open for the transaction of business on every working day from that hour until 12 noon, when the exchange will be formally closed. As the exchange develops the hours will be extended, but for a time at least it is felt that an hour and a half daily will be sufficient for the transaction of business. There will, however, be an unlisted department of the exchange, which will somewhat resemble the curb section of the grain exchange, in which trading can be done at any hour of the day.

Listed Stocks.

Many inquiries have been received from local organizations with stock to list, but the only stocks formally listed at the opening on Monday were:

Winnipeg Street Railway, Canadian Pacific Railway, Canadian Fire Insurance, Great West Life, Canada Landed and National, Northern Trusts.

Before the end of the first week it is expected that this list will be more than doubled.

The Membership.

The membership of this exchange is limited to 24. There were 12 charter members and four others have been elected since; this makes 16, so that there are only 8 memberships to be filled and it is understood that there are about 150 applications on the waiting list. The price of membership is $200, and it has been decided to only consider applications from active resident brokers, as it is felt that such men will be most helpful in promoting the business of the exchange.

The officers of the stock exchange are:—A. M. Nanton, chairman; H. T. Champion, vice-chairman; W. Sanford Evans, secretary-treasurer; W. R. Allan, Hugh Sutherland and R. T. Riley, managers.

The active work of the trading room will be conducted by Angus Purkis Cameron, assistant secretary-treasurer. Mr. Cameron is a son of D. M. Cameron, of the Inland Revenue Department, Hamilton, Ont., and has been resident in the city about three years. Since Mr. Evans has been associated with the organization of the stock exchange Mr. Cameron has acted as his secretary, and is thoroughly conversant with the preliminary work.

List of Members.

The list of members, in addition to those already quoted, contains the following names:—J. T. Gordon, R. H. Agur, H. H. Beck, C. E. Lewis, G. R. Crowe, Arthur Wickson; Hugh Ross, W. J. Christie, W. T. Kirby and T. R. Billet.

Mills and Flour Trade.

The Saskatchewan Flour Mills Company, of Moosejaw, opened their new mill during the past week and the event was marked by a grand banquet tendered by the Board of Trade to the owners and employees of the mill. Up to the present time Moosejaw has had a mill with a 200 barrel capacity. This was bought out by the present company and practically rebuilt into a splendid modern 1,000 barrel mill. There are two elevators in connection with it, with a combined capacity of 175 to 180 thousand bushels. In addition to the mill proper there is a fine modern packing house and oatmeal mill.

The enormous number of homesteads taken up in the Moosejaw district during the past year, and the general increase in wheat growing on the Moosejaw plains indicates the possibilities of Moosejaw as a milling centre, so that the opening of the present mill is not only regarded as important in itself, but also as an augury for the future.

The Western Canada Flour Mills, Ltd., had its new issue of stock officially listed on the London Stock Exchange, and a large portion of the £225,000 six per cent. first mortgage 20 year sinking fund sterling bonds have been taken by British investors.

Movement of Real Estate.

The most important real estate transaction of the week was the purchase by T. D. J. Farmer, of Hamilton, Ont., of 98 feet on the east side of Main Street, immediately south of the site on the southeast corner of Portage Avenue and Main Street, recently acquired by the Bank of Montreal for their new western headquarters. The property bought by Mr. Farmer is at present occupied by the O'Connor Hotel, a very ramshackle place, but quite a famous hostelry of the olden days. The Bank of Montreal are getting out most elaborate plans for their new building, and as soon as these are completed and the style of the building definitely decided upon, Mr. Farmer will have plans drafted for an office building, to be erected on his property, that will be, in all essentials, in keeping with the bank building and also with the National Trusts building which bounds his property on the south. The property purchased by Mr. Farmer has a depth of 155 feet to a lane. The price paid for the property was $2,000 per front foot, or a total of $196,000.

The Potato Situation.

There has been a sudden and sharp advance in the price of potatoes on the Winnipeg market. This is due to an unexpected demand from both British Columbia and Alberta. The extremely cold weather of the early part of January caught the potato men of British Columbia and Alberta napping, and many thousands of bushels of potatoes were frosted. During the past week three car lots were shipped to Vancouver, B.C.; three more cars are on the way, and ten cars have been ordered for Calgary. The Manitoba and Saskatchewan crops were not so heavy as usual and these demands from unexpected quarters will go far to make the farmers with cellars full of "murphies" rejoice, as prices are liable to go very much higher. Purchases made during the past week were at the rate of 65 to 70 in carlots, track, Winnipeg. Potatoes in the United States immediately to the south are dearer than our own, so that when a 30 per cent. duty and the freight charges are added there will not be much relief from that source.

Range Cattle in Good Shape.

Mr. Ryan, of Ryan & Fares, has just returned from an extended trip returned from from an extended trip through Alberta and reports that he has never seen the range cattle and horses looking better. The fall and early winter were ideal for stock and they got as fat as butter. At the time of the extreme dip in the first week in January there was no snow to cover up the feed and the cattle sought sheltered places and took no harm. Since that time the weather has been as mild as spring and the cattle are in a thrifty and altogether satisfactory condition.

Settlers Arriving.

Mr. Ryan, who is an old westerner, states that never in his experience has he seen so many settlers come in in January. Many of those arriving are Americans who come in over the Soo Line by way of Moosejaw, many of them are going into that district and the districts round Maple Creek and Crane Lake.

Wheat Market.

The market has held strong all week with a decided increase in export trade especially for May and June delivery. Low grade wheat have been principally in demand for this trade, but Ontario millers are good buyers of contract wheat. Receipts continue to be very light, in spite of the mild weather which prevailed up to Friday morning the 29th when there was a sudden drop in temperature.—H.

MANITOBA MARKETS

(Market quotations corrected by telegraph up to 9 a.m. Thursday, February 4, 1909.)

From the business standpoint January was a most satisfactory month for the grocery trade. Wholesalers report country collections in good shape and the volume of business for the month very much in excess of the same month last year.

NEWSPAPER RETRACTS.

Threatened With Libel Suit by Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada.

The first meeting of the Board of Directors of the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada was held on Saturday afternoon of last week at their office, Toronto. The business was entirely of a routine character, but nevertheless something of interest has occurred within the past week. It was due to the following item which appeared in the Toronto Mail and Empire on Saturday, Jan. 30th, 1909 :

"When the late James T. Cooper joined the Commercial Travelers' Association, in 1899, he took out a policy of insurance for $900 in favor of his mother. Later he married and notified the association that he wished to make his wife the beneficiary. For some reason which the officers of the association cannot explain, the request of the deceased was never entered upon the books, neither can they find the papers providing for the change in the policy from the mother to the wife. The case was before Chief Justice Mulock at the Non-Jury Assizes yesterday, and after several hours discussion the matter was amicably settled. The mother is to have $369 and the widow the balance."

The Real Facts.

The truth of the matter was the Commercial Travelers' Association was not to blame and could explain everything which they have done to the satisfaction of the above mentioned paper which was threatened with a libel suit if it did not retract. The fact was that the late Mr. Cooper through a substitute called at the office of the Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society, located in the same building and had the matter adjusted there. The books in the office show that the change had been made, but the Commercial Travelers' Association secretary was not approached in the matter at all. The two are entirely different. It will be observed that Chief Justice Mulock succeeded in making an amicable settlement of the case after two witnesses had been heard—the lady who said she had called at the office of the Commercial Travelers' Association to effect the change in the name of the beneficiary and the lady in that office who claimed she had not. The former of course was apparently merely mistaken in the office. There was no opportunity, therefore, for an explanation of what actually did occur.

Statement Retracted.

Being threatened with the libel suit the Mail and Empire of February 3rd, retracted its former statement as follows :

' In the case of the widow of the late James T. Cooper, who claimed to be entitled to a mortuary benefit on the life of her husband in the Commercial Travelers' Association of Canada, which was heard by Chief Justice Mulock last week, it was made to appear (in the Mail and Empire) as if Mr. Cooper's request had been ignored.

"Mr. Cooper was said to have asked for the substitution of his wife for his mother, as beneficiary, which was not done. The evidence given before the Court was that no such assignment had been filed with the association, and that consequently no such change had been effected, as that on which the widow based her claim."

BENEFIT TO TRAVELERS.

Good Work Being Done by Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society—Annual Meeting Held.

The Commercial Travelers' Mutual Benefit Society held its annual general meeting on Saturday, Jan. 30, in the society's rooms.

The president, S. R. Wickett, presented the annual report, which showed that 176 new members joined in 1908, and $32,500 in death claims was paid out. H. Goodman, treasurer, drew attention to the fact that the investments, amounting to $55,068.97, were all firs-class and drawing good interest.

Two proposed amendments to the by-laws were considered but not adopted. The first was by E. Fielding, "That the president, vice-president, and treasurer should be elected for a two-year term instead of one." The second was by the the late C. E. Kyle, "That all the nine Toronto directors should be elected yearly in place of for three years as at present."

The vice-president, Mayor Oliver, offered some valuable suggestions for the guidance of this year's board. Messrs. Laurie, Hector and others discussed methods for increasing the membership and limiting the number of lapses, and the members appeared satisfied with the year's work and the prospects for the future. John Burns past president of the Commercial Travelers' Association, took his seat as a director in place of C. E. Kyle, deceased.

The officers for 1909 are: S. R. Wickett, president; Mayor Oliver, vice-president; H. Goodman, treasurer; E. M. Rowley, secretary; Richard Ivens, superintendent of agencies; Dr. Norman Allen, medical referee. Directors: John Burns, Robert Forbes, S. M. Sterling, John Gibson, W.S. B. Lawrie, A. J. Tipping, C. S. Parsons, R. G. Hector; Auditors: C. N. Sutherland, C. A., F. W. Thompson.

This society has been of incalculable benefit to the widows and orphans of commercial travelers, having since its inception in 1881, paid out to beneficiaries over $500,000, and whilst it was established for the benefit of commercial travelers the society has extended its field and now accepts all mercantile, commercial and professional men who are able to pass a first-class medical examination, and are not engaged in any dangerous or risky business.

John Edward Hoare, at one time associated with the Morse Soap Co., the Comfort Soap Co., and latterly with the Atlantic Soap and Oil Company as its vice-president, died in Eglinton of pneumonia on Sunday morning of last week, aged sixty-five.

AN ODD WANT AD.

An odd advertisement appeared in Hardware and Metal last week, a hardwareman, D. J. MacNab, of Lanark, Ontario, soliciting correspondence from merchants in other parts of the country who want to secure a pure maple syrup. Mr. MacNab supplies sap buckets and other sugar bush supplies to the farmers who own the trees and he is in a position to secure large quantities of the pure article, which he feels he can guarantee to other dealers unable to secure pure syrup in their own districts. In securing customers for the sugar bush owners he is doing them a favor while also turning an honest penny for himself in a season when trade is none too brisk.

The incident illustrates a point The Canadian Grocer has frequently made, that retail merchants should always be on the lookout for special lines to develop in connection with their own trade. This is where money is made, as it is an addition to the regular business and, if taken up in seasons when regular trade is dull, the returns for the time spent is clear profit. Then, too, anything the merchant does to increase the income of the farmers in his locality is bound to result in more business for himself.

The want ad. pages of this paper offer innumerable opportunities for the wide-awake merchant. They are read every week by clerks, merchants, travelers, jobbers and manufacturers in every city, town and village in Canada. Half a dollar spent in a want ad. brings the message to the attention of thousands of possible buyers. When opportunity knocks at your door, therefore, be careful to remember the key which unlocks the door to let the welcome visitor in.

TRADE CHANGES AT ATWOOD.

H. M. Ballantyne, who until recently conducted a furniture and undertaking business in Atwood, Ont., has purchased the general store of Langford & Co. Mr. Langford will remain in the employ of the new proprietor.

W. J. Powell, of Atwood, has disposed of his general grocery business to C. Forrest. The latter is a young man of ability who since the death of his father two years ago, was manager of the Atwood Flour Mills. Mr. Powell has not decided what he will do in the future.

TRADE NOTES.

E. A. Shoebotham, London, representing the North Western Cereal Co., was a visitor at the Toronto office of The Grocer on Tuesday of this week.

George Fraser, for many years a resident of Montreal, and a member of the firm of Fraser Bros., grocers, passed away last Saturday at Chicago.

L. E. Thompson, proprietor of Le Semaine Commerciale, Quebec, was in Montreal last week, attending a meeting of the newspaper men of the Province.

R. C. Gerow opened a new grocery store on Main Street, Picton, on Jan. 20th, 1909. Mr. Gerow is a hustling young man and has a nice bright establishment.

VANCOUVER.

Feb. 2.—Eggs and potatoes are the principal articles of interest just now in the local trade. The former are very scarce, and only small shipments are coming in. A couple of years ago the commission men were caught with large stocks when a spell of warm weather came in, and they lost more than they made all season on eggs. Now when they are again very scarce, they are loth to bring them in in large quantities, as the first of February is here and warm weather may come at any time. A week or two of summery spring and there would be all kinds of fresh eggs, especially after the spell of egg famine that has obtained since the first of the year.

Potatoes, which went first to $35 a ton, and then dropped back to $28, are now up to $30. Locals are quoted at $25. The general opinion is that this high price will not last long, as there must be potatoes around somewhere. Word was received by The Grocer from Cariboo to-day that large quantities of potatoes are held there by growers, but lack of transportation facilities prevents shipment to the markets here. It is through Cariboo that the Canadian Northern railway is projected, and with a line there a large producing territory would be brought into close touch with the consuming cities. But the railway is only just spoken of, and though D. D. Mann is now on the coast it will be some time before there is anything substantial doing.

Jobbers report a reduction in prices of tobaccos placed by Wm. McDonald & Company. Briar and Napoleon have been reduced four cents per pound, the figure now being 79c and 78c respectively, and Index and Prince of Wales have been brought down three cents, their prices now being 77c each. While the cost has been made easier there has been no lessening of weight, there being still nine plugs to the pound.

Speaking to The Grocer yesterday, a dealer remarked that when a certain line of goods has been placed on the market those who introduced them should make a point of keeping supplies on hand. What called forth this remark was the fact that New Zealand tongue in pound cans could not be had at present. This was introduced some months ago and secured a call, but now when there is a demand there is nothing to meet, the market being cleaned out. This sort of thing does not happen with the older established firms or commission houses, and is a thing to be guarded against, as efforts to get business will be rendered abortive.

The shipment of winter apples made by the Enderby, B.C., Fruit Exchange to Australia through the Central Fruit and Produce Association, has proved so satisfactory that Mr. Lawes, the principal contributor to the shipment, has received offers for his crop of winter apples of 1909 to be shipped to Wellington, New Zealand.

A number of general stores in the Ladner district, on the south bank of the Fraser, have suffered from the depredations of burglars. Among them were H. I. Hutcherson's, Marshall, Smith & Co.'s at Ladner and E. G. McBride's at Port Guichon. The thieves were evidently looking only for money, as no goods were taken. They got nothing, however, as the time is past when merchants leave money in their tills over night.

J. D. Lumsden, manager of the A. E. Howse Company, which has a large general store at Princeton, B.C., has returned home from Vancouver. He was away five months taking a special treatment for illness, and is able to resume business with his wonted vigor.

The difference in dairying districts is shown by the annual reports of the Victoria Creamery and Milling Supply Company on Vancouver Island and the White Valley Creamery Association in the Okanagan Valley. The former declared a dividend of 5 per cent., after paying out to the farmers of Saanich $50,542, being $600,000 in eight years. The butter output for the year was 135,000 pounds. The directors appointed were: J. Nicholson, A. H. Peatte, L. Sea, M. Dean, A. Bancroft, J. W. Sluggett and A. G. Snelling, re-elected as managing director and secretary. This creamery operates on the coast where there is plenty of rain and where the markets are close at hand. The White Valley Creamery Association, which operates in the Okanagan where the weather is much drier, has had to work hard to make the institution prosperous, and has decided to continue this year. A direct appeal will be made to the farmers to give their patronage, as the concern bestows a mutual benefit. Even in the Okanagan, creameries should be successful, as general farming is carried on. J. T. Bardolph was elected president, and C. Levasseur, vice-president.

In the legislature on Tuesday, W. Hayward, M.P.P., who represents a constituency on Vancouver Island, appealed to the Government to establish egg collecting stations, similar to those in Denmark, to help the egg industry in his district, which was a rural one. Mr. Hayward comes from Cowichan, and he brought this same subject up at a recent meeting of the Cowichan Creamery Association. There are many large farms in his locality, and a fostering of the egg industry would not only mean much money to the farmers, but would alleviate the stringency in this line, which is felt here from time to time, and is nearly always apparent as regards the freshly-laid variety.

VICTORIA.

Feb. 2.—W. J. Clark, late of Nelson, B.C., and formerly of Woodstock, Ont., has bought the business of S. C. Thomson. As effort will be made by the grocers to get their representatives in the provincial assembly, which has opened its proceedings, to amend the law and make man and wife jointly liable for necessaries ordered by either, and for their common good. At present the man is frequently acting as the responsible head of the house and ordering goods. The bill is not paid after several applications, the grocer sues the man, gets judgment, and then finds the wife owns the furniture, etc, and she repudiates the account.

W. Jamieson, of the Hudson's Bay Co., a most promising young traveler, has died.

The Retail Grocers' Exchange was induced to give its support to a "Pure Food Show" to be held here on Jan. 25 to 30, but for various reasons manufacturers generally excused themselves from participating and the show has had to be abandoned for lack of support.

PERSONAL ITEMS.

J. Mitchell Jones, manager of Andrews, Gillespie & Co., Montreal, has returned from England.

John S. Cass and W. W. Schmidt, of Armour & Co., Chicago, with C. L. Marshall, of the McLaren Imperial Cheese Co., called at the Toronto office of The Canadian Grocer on Saturday. The Chicago visitors were in Toronto in connection with some new developments concerning their Canadian trade which will be made known later.

At the annual meeting of Ontario Motor League, held recently in the King Edward Hotel, Toronto, Wm. Dobie, president of E. W. Gillett Co., was the unanimous choice of the 540 members for the presidency of the association. Since beginning the use of automobiles Mr. Dobie has himself driven over 50,000 miles. Therefore, not only is he prominent in business affairs, but is also a very enthusiastic automobilist.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

February 2.—Changes in the local markets have been very slight during the past week. Business in all lines seems a little quiet, but now that stock-taking is over, the merchants are looking forward to a brisk trade. The past year was fairly good and a little improvement is looked for this year. Butter is reported a little easier, but eggs have advanced a cent. All grades of sugars were advanced 10c on Jan. 23, and lard, both pure and compound, is up about one-half cent.

Charles D. Trueman, wholesale grocer and commission merchant 2 and 3 south wharf, is in business difficulties, and a meeting of his creditors has been called for Friday, Feb. 5. Mr. Trueman has been in business at his present stand for about 22 years.

Walter R. Small, retail grocer, corner Queen and Carmarthen Streets, assigned January 29. His liabilities are placed at $3,500 and the value of his assets is not yet known. It is stated his principal creditors are the Sussex Milk Co., George E. Barbour, Geo. S, de Forest & Sons, and the F. E. Williams Co.

Forty-one steamers which have made returns at the customs house up to January 30, took away cargoes valued at $8,293,418, of which $5,968,852 was Canadian goods, and $2,324,566 foreign products. Included in the cargoes were 154 293 bags of flour; 26,545 boxes of cheese; 2,545,565 bushels grain, and 11,561 cattle.

James Sinclair formerly in the grocery and feed business here, died last week rather suddenly from paralysis of the brain. He was 38 years of age and is survived by his wife and one daughter.

HALIFAX.

February 2.—The recent advance in the price of molasses is due to the shortage of the supply, states H. R. Silver, of the Dominion Molasses Company, to The Grocer's correspondent. When the demand exceeds the supply, said Mr. Silver, the price naturally goes up, and that is the case this season. There has been a very heavy demand for molasses right along, and stocks are now pretty low. It is thought in some quarters that the high price of butter has had a tendency to create a greater demand for molasses, and then last season the receipts were not as heavy as in former years. It is estimated that there are thirty thousand puncheons of molasses consumed in Canada annually. Among the largest dealers is the Dominion Molasses Company, of Halifax, which handles probably fifteen thousand puncheons annually.

Newfoundland also consumes a large amount of molasses, the average imports per year being about fourteen thousand puncheons.

"At the present time nothing can be said regarding the crop outlook" declared Mr. Silver. "All depends upon the weather in the West Indies. The new crop generally commences to come along about March, but the largest receipts are much later. The indications are that the demand will continue and, of course, the condition of the market will regulate the prices."

The Nova Scotia Farmers' Association held its annual meeting at Digby this week and over one hundred delegates from various parts of the province were present. All the speakers referred hopefully to the prospects for the coming season. It was made evident to all that the markets for farm products are increasing. The feature of the convention was the address of J. A. Ruddick, cold storage and dairy commissioner.

Two hundred thousand barrels of apples from the warehouses in the Annapolis valley, and not one barrel available for local consumption is the condition that exists in Nova Scotia at the present time. All these apples have been bought up by speculators for shipment. There is general complaint among the dealers that they cannot secure a barrel of first-class fruit. The majority of the stock on the local market is of the poorest quality, and consequently sales are slow.

The Avon Valley Development Company, Limited, has been incorporated to plant with fruit trees some 1,800 acres on the Falmouth Mountain. The following are the directors of the company:—Hon. B. F. Pearson, Halifax, president; J. B. Black, M.D., M.P., Windsor, vice-president; Sir Frederick Borden, M.P., Canning; George H. Vroom, Middleton, chief Dominion inspector of fruit; Geo. Wilson, Halifax and Windsor manager Dominion Textile Co.'s mills; William Sangster, Upper Falmouth; Bret Black, M.D., Windsor.

The evaporator factory at Grenville, N.S., was destroyed by fire this week. The building and plant had recently been leased by J. W. Smith, of Halifax. A large quantity of goods stored in the building were also destroyed.

MONTREAL.

February 2.—Capt. Johnson, manager of the Skeena River Navigation Company, a G.T.P. affiliation, who was at the Grand Trunk general offices recently, stated that the Skeena river was the greatest salmon river in the world.

The captain stated that the weather along the Skeena is milder in winter than it is in Montreal, but navigation closes there as here in December, and the company's half-dozen steamers are put into winter quarters, to be trimmed for the work of summer. Amongst the other traffic carried by the boats last summer was considerably over a million dollars' worth of canned salmon, from the canneries, some fifteen in number, that flourish at different points on the river. Neither the Fraser nor the Columbia rivers can, the captain said, match the Skeena for salmon, either as regards quantity or quality, and whatever else it may develop into, Prince Rupert is bound to become a great export port for the fisheries. He spoke interestingly of the other industries in that section, and in closing, stated that they were only laying the foundations and it was too early to speak of results.

The chief item of interest among the members of the Retail Grocers' Association is the euchre and dance, which in every way was a huge success. The only difficulty which was encountered was the problem of handling 750 people, instead of the 400 which were expected. This little matter, however, was well met and practically no inconvenience resulted to anyone. It was, however, a severe strain on the caterers, who had made preparation for about one-half the number who attended. Some handsome and valuable prizes were distributed among the prize winners.

The rumor that the liquor licenses of grocers was to be increased does not show any signs of becoming a reality. The city council are turning their attention to the hotels, and restaurants, and the prospects are that the gentlemen who conduct these businesses will have to pay more dearly for their licenses.

E. J. Cowan, who for many years has been the Montreal representative of the Cowan Co., of Toronto, chocolate manufacturers, has resigned, and accepted a position with the Montreal Biscuit Co.

Herb McManus, Montreal representative of the Stewart Co., Toronto, spent a few days last week in Toronto visiting his firm.

A. F. White, tea jobber, St. John St., has been confined to his house for a couple of weeks by illness. Mr. White is one of the "veterans," and his friends who are many will be glad to know he is well again.

H. P. Cowan, of Toronto, is now representing the Cowan Co., of that city, in Montreal, succeeding E. J. Cowan.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association executive, of this city, held an informal dinner, at the Canada Club, in the Board of Trade building, on the evening of January 27. Ald. G. W. Sadler acted as chairman. Principal J. W. Robertson, of Macdonald College, was the chief speaker of the evening. He spoke at considerable length on the great importance of the agricultural interests of Canada, and also made an appeal for good feelings between the manufacturing and agricultural interests of the country. He deplored the bitter animosity which existed perhaps in some sections between these two elements of Canadian industry, and throughout his words were marked by homely sagacity, Scottish humor, generosity and kindliness.

Professor S. J. McLean, of the Board of Railway Commissioners spoke on the development of Canada's waterways, especially the Great Lakes system. He indicated in how far the United States had succeeded in diverting the western trade of Canada from Canadian routes by paying great attention to the Mississippi river route. He was of the opinion that this bit of strategy had been practically fruitless, and he showed how the ominous depletion of wheat production in the western States would greatly diminish traffic by the Mississippi route. Referring to the advantages of the proposed Georgian Bay canal route, he stated that this route was 600 miles nearer the Atlantic seaboard than the Mississippi route, as far as carriage of products was concerned. He showed how proximity to traffic and short distance of carriage were points in favor of the Georgian Bay route, as against the Mississippi route. In conclusion he said: "Canada must look to it that its own traffic should move over its own routes to its own seaports."

The engagement of Major G. W Stephens, ex-M.L.A., and chairman of the Montreal Harbor Commissioners' Board, is announced in London, Eng. The bride-to-be is Signorita Bisacchi di Belminte, daughter of the late M. S. Bissachi, of Naples, Italy. The wedding will take place in London some time in February.

Ottawa Grocers Deal With Transient Traders' Problem—Guelph Retail Merchants Elect Officers—London Wholesaler Swindled—Merchants at Brantford to Oppose Suit of Oil Company.

OTTAWA.

Feb. 3.—The Ottawa market Saturday morning was the best seen for a long time. However, prices were as high as they have been at any time almost since they first started to go up. As usual, meats and oats were the main offering but there was a fair quantity of butter. Eggs were also more plentiful than for some time past. Beef sold as on the previous Saturday, at a general price of 7c, but there were a few vendors with stock which they considered exceptionally good quality who asked 8c. Pork was valued at $10 per cwt. Lamb was plentiful at 10c to 12c. Fowl prices showed but little change but the supply of the feathered product of the barn-yard was better than has been for some time. Chickens were quite abundant at prices from $1.25 to $1.75 and their older sisters, ranging as high as $2. Turkeys were more reasonable and could be purchased as low as $1.75 for some specimens, though 25c a pound was the general figure at which they were valued. Ducks at $1.25 per pair and geese at $1.25 to $1.50, made up the rest of the offering.

Butter and eggs still continue practically unchanged. Butter, however, does not go quite so high as it once did and 27c for pail is about the top notch, while creamery blocks are quoted at 28c for best brands. New laid eggs are coming in more plentiful the price asked being from 40c to 45c per dozen.

At a meeting held on Jan. 27, the Retail Grocers' Association decided not to urge legislation against the transient traders as was at first proposed. The transient traders do not materially affect the grocer, and since the merchants did not attend meetings called recently with the object of getting co-operation of these other lines in the work, the grocers have decided to make no further efforts in this direction. However, it was decided to instruct the solicitor of the association, A. E. Fripp, K.C., M.L.A., to urge legislation with the object of taxing the peddlers and allowing only producers to peddle in the streets, after they paid the market fees, without further tax. The association decided that it would be better not to do anything definite with regard to holding a pure food show at the next exhibition. A letter was received from the Central Canada Exhibition Association congratulating the grocers on the success of the Pure Food Show held last autumn and hoping that it would be repeated and further asking that in order that this branch of the exhibition should receive proper consideration a committee and chairman be appointed from the Grocers' Association. The feeling of the meeting was that a pure food show in the same building as was used for the purpose last year would not be advisable and that the association would not undertake it there. Another objection was that the exhibitors want to rent space for a term of years instead of one year at a time, as they would be able to build substantial booths and not have to build booths to fit different spaces each year. It would also be easier for the association to fill the building if it rented the spaces for a term of years. A. G. Johnson and F. W. Forde were appointed a committee to wait on the exhibition executive and find out just what provision could be made for a show next year, and as the meeting was of small attendance the committee suggested by the exhibition association will be appointed at a later date. The treasurer, C. J. Provost, announced that the Grocers' Association had a balance on hand now of about $600. At the next meeting, Feb. 10, a lecture on coffee will be given by C. H. Cochrane, coffee expert, which will be open to all grocers and their clerks and the association hope to have a large attendance on that particuar date.

A. M. Piper, representing Pure Gold Manufacturing Co. has been calling on the trade this past week. It will be remembered that H. H. Livingstone was their former representative in Ottawa, but is now working in the interests of Mayell & Co., Toronto.

Geo. H. Hopper the Bank Street grocer, expects to occupy his new premises about May 1st, which will be situated on Elgin St., near Waverly.

LONDON.

February 1.—Business is fair both in wholesale and retail lines. Brokers report staples unchanged. Refined sugars are rather quiet. Raws keep high and are likely to remain so until the new crop comes in. Very fine teas, India and Ceylon, are strongly competed for, while prices harden. Mediums are unchanged and common are rather slow of sale. Rio and Santo coffees keep high there being no change in milder qualities. There has been a distinct advance in sulphur. Oranges are plentiful and low in price.

For the month of January the wholesale grocery trade compares favorably with that of the same month last year.

There is a general cutting of prices of canned goods among local retailers, one dealer selling three-pound tins of tomatoes at 7c each, or 84c a dozen.

The date of the annual banquet of the Retail Grocers' Association has been changed from Feb. 18th to Feb. 17th, on account of the orchestra, whose services the committee desires to employ being engaged in Strathroy on the former date. Some good speakers have been invited, and with the musical talent there is known to be among those in the trade, these features of the evening's entertainment should be above the ordinary.

Ex-President Harry Ranahan of the Retail Grocers' Association has opened a bakery and confectionery business in the Bourne Block, Hamilton Road.

A rather smooth swindle was worked on a local wholesale house one day last week. Some one 'phoned the office to send a caddie of tobacco to a certain retailer at once. Shortly afterwards the 'phone again rang and the enquiry came. "Has that tobacco been sent yet?" As it had not the inquirer said, "Never mind, then, I will send a boy for it." In due course a boy arrived and was given the tobacco, which was worth $17 or $18. Subsequent investigation showed that the retailer in whose name the tobacco has been obtained had neither ordered nor sent for the goods and it was then the wholesaler realized that he had been victimized.

Christmas prices for poultry still rule in the local market, from 19c to 21c per pound being the ruling prices. Dressed pork brings $9 per cwt., and live hogs $6.50 per cwt. There is a big demand for butter, grocers picking up everything in that line in sight. Fresh eggs easily bring 28c to 30c per dozen

BRANTFORD.

February 3.—It was a veritable indignation meeting that was held last week by the firms and individuals who declare they have been "taken in" on an oil, grease or other such material scheme by an American Oil & Drug Co. Sixty persons were present and thirty telephoned that they regretted they could not be there, but would stand by the other victims of the deal. It was decided that a test case would be made of the first suit that was brought against any individual, and the league will prosecute the defence with vigor. It is understood that four local suits have been entered by the company against merchants who accepted "samples." A number of grocers are in it, having accepted the generous samples, mostly of fioor oil.

E. Paterson, the Market Street grocer, who recently underwent a very serious opeation, is progressing favorably.

The annual convention of the Brantfort District Beekeepers' Association in the city last week was a success. Many of the grocers attended the Thursday evening session to witness the demonstration and grading of honey for the city retail trade by H. G. Sibbald, Toronto. The secretary's report showed that there were now about 5,000 colonies of bees in this district, an increase of about one-third over the previous year, and yet the grocers this year find it almost impossible to get enough honey to supply the demand.

The stormy weather partially killed the chance of a big market last Saturday. Where accommodation was provided inside the building there was a good attendance. Prices were as follows: Butter, 28 to 30c per lb.; eggs, 30 to 25c doz.; potatoes, 60 to 70c per bag, and apples 30c basket.

Harry Hagey, of the Bon Marche grocery, has accepted a position on the road for the Wm. Patterson & Son Co., biscuit manufacturers, of this city.

PETERBORO.

Feb. 3.—In answer to the time worn question of "How is business" a prominent grocer stated that he thought that things were brightening. "I have all the work I can attend to, and I certainly have no time to look around to see how others are succeeding. My sales have held on throughout the month and lately they have increased quite noticeably."

Wesley Bros., grocers, have assigned to Jas. Edgar, paper merchant, of this city. The announcement was made a few days ago.

The market price of butter and eggs has shown a tendency to decline of late. The grocers have been selling just as cheaply as on the market. Butter is stated as being down to 25c and eggs at 33c.

One of the youngest and yet most aggressive grocers of this city is Jas. R. Bell, who has just leased another building in the east ward and has purchased the grocery stock and goodwill of John Malane, who for years conducted a paying business in the stand which he has made well known. Mr. Bell will thus have a store on one of the main business thoroughfares and this new one which he opened up last week gives him a good stand in the heart of the east ward formerly known as Ashburnham. Mr. Bell has followed progressive lines in his business, quietly but efficiently applying those principles which bring new customers and please those already dealing with him. He has made a specialty of some lines, particularly in butter, eggs, fowl, potatoes, apples, flour, teas and coffees. He has a good farmers' trade and buys correctly, not only from the country people, but also from the wholesalers. Victor Soward is in the new store and under Mr. Bell's guidance the new business should advance as rapidly as that which he has developed in the business centre of the city.

GUELPH.

February 3.—A great many friends in the trade will regret to hear of the death of Mrs. W. A. Couling, wife of the Endinboro Road grocer. She had suffered for some time from the effects of an accident which happened while she was hanging out clothes. It was considered very simple at the time. The clothes prop slipped and struck her on the head. Complications set in which finally resulted in her death on Wednesday last. The funeral on Friday afternoon was largely attended.

The contracts for supplying the Ontario Agricultural College for 1909 were awarded last week, Benson Bros. again getting the groceries, which speaks very highly of this young firm's enterprise.

F. Tobias, of Todhunter & Mitchell, Toronto, was in the city this week on his first trip for 1909 and reports business in his line very good.

The annual meeting of the Retail Merchant's Association was held on Tuesday evening. President Waters was in the chair and the following officers were elected for this year: President, R. E. Nelson; 1st Vice-President, H. Occomme; 2nd Vice-President, G. B. Ryan; Treasurer, L. E. Rowan; Secretary, D. A. Scroggie; Executive Committee, C. W. Kelly, Jas. Ramsay, W. H. Fielding, G. R. Readwin and Geo. Richardson. The reports showed the association had passed the most successful year in its history, the membership totalling now 80 members, including practically all the merchants in the city. The collection system established last year worked very successfully. There are two grocers on the executive committee this year.

R. Pratt of the Red Rose Tea Co., was in the city several days this week calling on the grocers and, as usual at this time of the year, presenting the boys with neat little pocket diaries.

The by-law forbidding tobacco chewers to expectorate on the sidewalks and crossings is to be rigidly enforced here this year.

Peter Anderson, grocer, has again been appointed a license commissioner for South Wellington.

The market Saturday was not large on account of the poor roads and stormy weather. Butter sold from 24c to 28c and is thought to be inclined to come lower yet. Potatoes still keep from 50c to 60c a bag.

BARRIE.

February 3.—The fishing shacks are to be seen this year in greater numbers than ever on the bay, and continue all the way down to Lake Simcoe. This week has seen one of the best in history so some of the older fishermen say, especially as the whitefish are not only plentiful, but very large. This they attribute to the few shanties and fishermen for the last two years. The whitefish are being sold to the retail trade at six cents a pound and the herring at 20 to 25 cents a dozen.

New laid eggs took another tumble in price towards the middle of last week and were to be had wholesale at as low as 23 cents, and continued so until Saturday's market. But owing to the colder weather at the first of the week they advenced to 25 cents and remain firm at that price.

Butter has become a drug on this market and sold as low as 20 cents last week for quantities, and even at that some of the buyers would not touch it. There seems to be also a lot of poor butter offering this year, more so than other years at this time of the season. For strictly No. 1 goods 23 cents is the figure paid here. Chickens sold at 15c a pound Saturday; turkeys at 17c; geese 10c and 11c, and fowl at 9c.

Quite a number of merchants are taking advantage of the discounts on the prices of gem jars by buying at this time of year, judging from the amounts that have been coming to town this week.

His many friends are very anxious about Wm. Collvelle, who is reported to be seriously ill at "Kenora" with scarlet fever.

ST. THOMAS.

February 3.—Saturday's markets were not much affected by the heavy fall of snow of Friday night. They were not largely attended by purchasers and the supply of produce was about equal to the demand.

Butter was selling at from 25c to 26c per pound and was plentiful. Eggs sold for 30c per dozen, fresh laid. Apples are becoming quite scarce and Spies sold readily at $1.50 per bag, and Baldwins at $1.25 per bag. Cabbage were at 50c per dozen; parsnips 5c per bunch; onions at $1.20 per bag; beets 15c peck, and turnips 45c per bag. Poultry is getting very scarce and chickens were the only kind offered and sold for 13c pound.

LINDSAY.

February 3.—Lindsay was all agog with excitement last week, and large crowds from the surrounding countryside thronged to the shire town, while a large number from other parts of the Province also helped to multiply the concourse. The attractions were the holding of the fourth annual Pet Stock and Poultry Show, and the short courses in stock and seed judging. The poultry show, a decided success, included an exhibit of over 1,000 birds of various kinds and breeds. It was stated by the expert judges that the Lindsay show is the second best of its kind held in the Province, being second only to the Guelph show.

The short courses in stock and seed judging is held in connection with the Government School of Agriculture at Lindsay. These courses were held every day this week, morning, afternoon and evening, and such experts as Prof. Day, Prof. Zavitz of the O.A.C., Guelph; C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture; Dr. Reid of Georgetown, and others, were present and took part in the proceedings. The courses were held in the market hall and in the opera house, and stock being judged on the stage, first by the farmers and then by the experts. Addresses were also delivered by J. Lockie Wilson, Superintendent of Fairs, and by Dr. Falconer, President of Toronto University. The latter in his remarks emphasized to the farmers present the great need of obtaining a higher education. The best men of the country came from the farm and not from the city.

Owing to the recent mild spell eggs were sold at the market at a reduced price on Saturday, viz.: 30c per dozen, a drop of 2c. Hogs in this section have taken another jump in price, and are now selling at $6.60 live and $9.50 dressed. Wheat has also advanced 3c per bushel, while flour remains at the same price.

The grocery trade has been fairly good lately although the poor sleighing has proved detrimental. The roads are bare in spots.

Ald. Babcock, grocer, on William Street South, has been busy for some time clearing the wood off his land west of the town.

Miss Kate Tangney, who has been conducting a confectionery store during the past two years with good success is selling out at reduced prices. The lease of the store expired and was given to a shoe merchant before the present occupant had an opportunity to regain it.

CHATHAM.

February 3.—Quite a few grocers have commenced stock-taking, taking advantage of the quiet winter season, after the Christmas rush. Probably a majority of Chatham merchants do their stock-taking at this season, though some start earlier, with the beginning of the year. January was this year a busier month for the grocery trade than is usual ly is, and as a result some grocers report that they are not in as good shape for stock-taking as usual.

The representative of Edward Adams, of London, called on the trade on Monday.

Ingram Taylor, late of the Bradley & Sons grocery, has taken a position in Detroit.

James Topliffe, who has been for the past three years on the grocery staff of Geo. Taylor, Wallaceburg, has taken a situation with E. H. Ruttan's grocery.

Hog prices on the Chatham market last Saturday were, for live hogs, $6.60; dressed, $8.50. These prices tickle the farmers.

H. Wilhelm, traveler for the Does & Co., biscuit and confectionery works of Merlin, visited Kent and Essex merchants last week.

Gilbert Hebert has again opened a butcher shop in Wallaceburg, opposite the Stonehouse Block.

Thos. M. Seyer and Jas. Mayhew who have been conducting a business as millers and grain merchants at Thamesville, have dissolved partnership, Mr. Seyer continuing the business.

John A. Cameron, manager of the Kent Farmers' Produce Co., Blenheim, is about again after his recent illness. The Blenheim concern has objected to the name of the newly-chartered Farmers' Produce Company, of Chatham, as an infringement on its rights.

Chas. Howes, of Wallaceburg, has disposed of his restaurant and confectionery business to Frank Roberts.

R. S. Rose, grocer, of Duthil, who has also been postmaster, is advertising his business for sale.

The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Hawken Milling Co., Wallaceburg, was held last week. Though hampered at first by a deficient gas plant, which has since been replaced by a steam plant, thoroughly up to date, the company has had a very successful year, and the shareholders will receive a 6 per cent. dividend.

The Leamington Fruit Growers have passed a resolution asking that customs duties on arsenate of lead paste or lime and sulphur chemically prepared, for the destruction of the San Jose scale and other pests be removed.

Mr. Horning, of Leamington, has discovered a means of clarifying sorghum syrup, which is described as something new. He is building a plant near Leamington for the handling of next year's cane.

The vexed question of the market by-law was fought out at great length at the last meeting of the city council. The general consensus of opinion was that there should be some form of restriction, particularly against wholesale buyers; and it was chiefly against the latter that the by-law was aimed. Prior to this evening's meeting, the property committee, which has charge of the market, went into the matter very thoroughly in company with the city solicitor, and the latter drew the by-law and states that it is now in shape to hold good in the courts. The chief difficulty heretofore has been to devise a by-law which would reach the wholesale buyers, to whom, rather than to grocers, has been due the regular depletion of the market. Under the new by-law as finally passed, the general clause, prohibiting buying by anyone for retail purposes or for shipment, before the hour of 10 o'clock, is restored. Several of the aldermen, notably Alds. Sullivan and Baxter, made a strenuous fight to have the hour placed at 12 noon, but Ald. Anderson and others pointed out that this would tend to injure the market, since it left little time for the shipment of perishable stuff when purchased by wholesalers, and that a majority of the householders did their buying long before noon. The clause was modified, however, by permitting retailers and wholesalers to purchase in limited quantities before the hour of 10, the quantities being fixed at four poultry of any kind, five pounds of butter and three dozen eggs. Butchers are also permitted to purchase dressed meat in the whole carcass. The allowing of limited purchases before 10 o'clock is held by the city solicitor to strengthen the by-law, since it does not actually legislate the wholesalers off the market; though, practically, this woudld be the effect, since no wholesaler would care to buy in such limited quantities for shipment. A further clause prohibits "any person" from buying before the hour mentioned more than 13 poultry, 15 pounds of butter and 20 dozen eggs. This has the effect of extending the restriction nominally to all classes. The by-law comes into force forthwith, and notices will be posted in the market right away. Magistrate Houston, in discussing the matter some time ago, is quoted as stating that he would not convict wholesale buyers under any by-law, holding that any attempt to exclude them would be ultra vires of the statute, since wholesalers are not expressly specified in the statute empowering the city to regulate the market. The city council will also ask C. W. Sulman, the local M.P.P., to take the matter up in the legislature with a view to having the statute amended so as to include wholesalers.

CHEESE AND BUTTER BULLETIN

Montreal, Feb. 4.

Steadiness characterizes the cheese market this week. Although the situation is not as active as a week ago, prices have been fully maintained. Export business is only normal at the present moment. Advices from England state that stocks there, are steadily diminishing, and rather an unusual condition has arisen, by the fact, that consumption which is steadily increasing there, has not been affected by the two recent advances in prices. Locally the opinion is held, that stocks are not over 60,000 boxes. In view of this fact some soaring prices may be expected, if the export demand should suddenly enlarge and in passing it might be said, that this is not a too remote possibility. Prices are quoted at 12½c to 12⅝c for Westerns and 12⅝c to 12½c for Easterns. Receipts for the season, since May 1, 1908 to Jan. 30, 1909, have been 1,957,239 boxes against 2,053,591 boxes for the corresponding period of last year.

The butter situation has not changed much during the week, receipts of large fresh rolls are increasing, and prices are showing an easier undertone. Packed Manitoba butter, is being offered here, but so far very little interest has been shown in it. Factory men and farmers are still holding considerable quantities, so this will keep prices at an even level for some time. When this is done, if there should be an outside demand spring up, prices would, in all probability, reach a lofty point, as it will be some time before the new make is available. Reports from England state that the supply of Russian and Siberian butter arriving has declined, and receipts from Denmark have also fallen off somewhat. This looks as though the possibility of a good demand for Canadian stock, a little later is a strong probability. Locally, prices are as follows: Fall creamery, 26c to 26½; winter creamery, 25c to 25½c; fresh receipts, 24c to 24½c and dairy rolls, 21c to 22c. Receipts of the season May 1 up to the present have been 415,886 packages against 410,357 packages for the same period of last year.

THE PROVISION SITUATION.

Toronto, Feb. 4.

The supply of hogs is scarcely sufficient to meet the requirements of the packing houses, and prices, in consequence are very firm. The prices paid for live hogs f.o.b., are from $6.40 to $6.70, and competition is very keen. All cured meats are firm, but without any material advance this week.

The surplus butter which has been accumulating for some time, and which is invariably of a poor quality, is being sold at prices that will make it move and is seen all over the city labelled at 25c a lb. This catches the eye of the ordinary house-keeper who has been paying 30 and 35c a lb. and at first glance is tempting, but when the trying time comes, the quality is there, but not the right sort, and it doesn't sell easily. A good deal of this is now in the hands of the city retailers, and any quantity of it still held by country merchants. That such a state of affairs still exists in a country where so much was done to aid farmers in producing better butter is remarkable, and certainly does not reflect much credit on our butter makers. However, as long as the merchants will continue to take it in exchange for goods the good and poor, at the same price, we cannot look for improvement, and if the loss falls heavily on the merchants they must blame themselves.

The egg market is firm. The stock of held eggs is rapidly diminishing, and many of the new laids are unsatisfactory and unreliable. A lot of 136 dozen arrived at one of our wholesale houses, all guaranteed new laid. By careful candling 89 dozen were decidedly stale, and some of them unfit to use for any purpose. If the hand could be laid on the person who is guilty of such conduct, he should be made to square matters.

Cheese, honey and poultry are very quiet and little doing.

PROVISION MARKETS

BUTTER—Good butter, on account of its rarity is in good demand, which always commands a good price, and although the market is flooded with poor butter, the article wanted by the consumers, and for which they are willing to pay a good price, is not in excesse of the demand. One dealer has 4,800 lbs. of culls on hand, out of which was picked all good and medium butter, and he is short of good butter to supply his trade. When such a state of affairs exists it is time that every one, in any way interested in the handling of butter, should wake up and do his part to check this wasteful and careless method. There is no excuse for bringing bad butter on the market, and whether the country storekeeper will continue to pay the same for poor stuff as he does for good, the consumers will not pay their good money for stuff they cannot eat.

EGGS—Several firms complained about eggs being sent in as new laid, which are far from being even fresh. Farmers have been getting exceedingly high prices for almost everything they had to sell, and are making money, but when they so far forget themselves that they expect people to pay 40c a dozen for old eggs they should at least be reminded of the fact, that they are guilty of a mean way of robbing their fellowmen. As the old stock is diminishing very rapidly and the new laids, including the counterfeit, are not sufficient to meet the requirements, prices are likely to remain firm for some time.

HAS MEDICINAL QUALITIES.

Grape Fruit Used as a Tonic—Its Early History and How it is Packed.

A Montreal fruitman has supplied The Grocer with the following information on grape fruit which was treated in the encyclopoedia of last week's issue:

This form of fruit is probably the first which figures conspicuously in the history of the human race. It is known still in some parts of the world, as "Forbidden Fruit," thus indicating the fact, that our first parents were so keen to taste it, that they sacrificed their chance of Paradise, in order that they might enjoy its palatable qualities. It is also ksown as Adam's apples, Pomeloes and Pummaloes. The Indians who knew of its excellent and medicinal qualities attached great value to it, as a food. It grows in large clusters like the grape, and owing to its mingled flavor of acid, sugar and quinine bitterness, it is an excellent tonic, and is often preferred to the orange, by those who have acquired a taste for it. Large quantities of the fruit are grows in Jamaica, Cuba and other islands of the West Indies, in Ceylon, Mesopotamia and California. Hybrids of grape fruit, are often met with in the market, as sweet oranges, but they lack the valuable bitter quality of the real stock, and its tonic effect.

Grape fruit has sprung into favor in Canada in the last ten or fifteen years, and its popularity is now well established. Hotels especially require large quantities as it is used extensively as a breakfast fruit. The first carload lot to be brought into eastern Canada, arrived in Montreal in the autumn of 1907. Previously, the fruit was brought in from New York by express. It is estimated that during the last year at least 30 cars have been distributed throughout Canada. The fruit is available, practically throughout the whole year, but is most difficult to obtain, during the months of July, August and September. Very great care is exercised in handling the fruit. It is hand-picked, the stem being clipped, and then, it is placed in padded baskets. When it arrives at the packing house it is carefully wrapped, and placed in cases. These cases are then loaded into cars, each standing on its end, with ample space between, which provides sufficient air to circulate, to insure good ventilation. When one tier is complete, it is fastened by means of wood stays, and then another tier is stacked on top of this, and so on, until the car is filled. The fruit is profitable to the dealer, as it does not require only reasonable treatment, and is a good keeper. Like many other fruits, it must be kept in a fairly cool place, with proper ventilation. The fruit should be handled with as great care as possible, to avoid bruising, as this leads to early decay. It makes a very attractive windom display product, on account of its large size, and bright color. Altogether grape fruit may be said to possess the essential features which recommend it to the Canadian market.

CHANGE IN UNITED FACTORIES.

The United Factories, Limited, have decided to separate their Woodenware Manufacturing business at Newmarket from the brush and broom business, etc., in Toronto, London and Montreal, it having been found that their businesses can be handled more advantageously if divided and a meeting of the shareholders has been called for the purpose of getting the secessary powers to carry out the separation.

The company is doing a very large and successful business from coast to coast and employs on an average between five and six hundred work people besides a large number of salesmen and office staff. Its finances and credit are A 1 and the present management has been connected with the business for a great many years. The business of Boeckh brushes and brooms, Bryan's brushes and Cane's woodenware will not be affected in any way by the division into two companies.

THE FLOUR AND CEREAL MARKETS

No Further Change in Flour—Wheat High in Price and Rolled Wheat is Liable to Advance.

Conditions in the flour and cereal market are still interesting, although no changes are quoted this week in prices. The decline mentioned last week in Manitoba wheat flour on account of competition has not been changed. There is little export movement in flour but Mexico still wants more Canadian wheat. The price of wheat is high and this has the result of making the price of rolled wheat very firm with prospects of another advance to the wholesalers. Oats are also high in price, making rolled oats and oatmeal incline towards advances.

The Montreal market indicates that the bran is very scarce and some dealers are oversold.

MONTREAL.

TORONTO.

FLOUR—The decline of Manitoba wheat flour due to severe competition as reported last week was the latest feature in the flour market. During the past seven days no further change has taken place. There is not much of an export movement. Winter wheat is comparatively scarce here and is practically all needed at home. There is, however, still a good export trade in wheat to Mexico. But the flour market on the whole is dull.

CEREALS—Announcement was made last week of an advance of 10c to wholesalers in rolled wheat. The price as quoted then has been fully maintained and one dealer expresses the belief that it will go higher still. The reason of the advance is the high price of wheat which is also hard to get. The prices in rolled wheat are therefore, very firm. In the case of rolled oats the figures as quoted last week remain, although an advance is expected according to one firm on account of the advance in oats. The same applies to oatmeal.

BRANDY CHOCOLATE CASES.

In the police court in Montreal on Tuesday, the "brandy chocolate cases" came up before Judge Bazin. Two cases were on the docket, Joslin Bros., confectionery jobbers, and the Walter M. Lowney Company of Canada. Joslin Bros. testified that they were jobbers of candy to the retail trade, through their travelers, and gave the circumstances of the sale of the brandy cordial chocolates to L. M. Chartrand, secretary of the Revenue Department. Edmund Littler, managing director of the Walter M. Lowney Company of Canada, stated that the brandy seized by the revenue officers was used in the manufacture of their brandy cordial chocolates, but in what quantity he could not say. Professor Robt. F. Ruttan, of McGill University, declared that the two boxes of chocolates analyzed contained 1.51 per cent. of alcohol and 2.13 per cent. respectively. These were the same chocolates as those examined by Milton L. Hersey, according to report, who stated they contained 6.25 per cent. alcohol. The cases were taken en delibere until Tuesday next.

BERLIN SUGAR WORKS SOLD.

The Wallaceburg Sugar Company has purchased the Ontario Sugar Refining Co.'s works at Berlin, which was wound up under and order of the courts by Henry Barber, assignee, Toronto. The money involved is $230,000. The factory cost in the neighborhood of $600,000 to start.

The intention of the new proprietors, it is understood, is to make extensive improvements, placing the building thoroughly in shape as an up-to-date sugar making establishment. When the changes are effected it is their intention also to work the factory to its utmost capacity in the manufacture of refined and white sugars of all grades.

P. T. Trowern, father of E. M. Trowern, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, died at his home on Argyle St., Toronto, on Saturday at the age of 86 years.

C. P. R. MAKES DEPARTURE.

Appoints Commissary Agent Who Will Do All Their Buying.

A new office has been created by the Canadian Pacific Railway in the appointment of A. S. Maynard as chief commissary agent of the company, with headquarters in Montreal.

He will have charge of the purchase of supplies for the company's chain of hotels across the continent, as well as for the dining cars and steamship services, the latter including the boats on the Atlantic and Pacific routes, upper lake steamers plying between Owen Sound and Fort William, the British Columbia lake and river service, etc.

In order to facilitate the handling of this new branch of the purchasing department, the chief commissary agent will have assistants located at St. John, N.B.; Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria, thus effectively covering the entire system from coast to coast.

The idea of the new office is to efficiently control and to bring under one head, the buying of various supplies for the different departments of the company, which was formerly attended to by many.

The promotion of Mr. Maynard to first head of the newly-created office, which bids fair to become one of the most important in the company's service, is looked upon with favor by his many friends in and out of the railway world.

Mr. Maynard has been a grocery man all his life, and his long experience will be of great service to the company in his new office. His appointment was made by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, who created the new department, and was ratified by E. N. Bender, the general purchasing agent, whose assistant Mr. Maynard has been for some years.

A CLEVER ADVERTISER.

Novel advertising schemes are constantly wanted by grocers. Here is a clever idea carried out by a western grocer a short time ago which had a two-fold effect. It prompted customers to read his newspaper advertisements and brought many new customers to his store. One day he advertised that he would give a certain prize to the man or woman who would write the best ten-line poem for his store. About one-third of the families of his town were represested when he listed the poems received. Every week from the time all the poems had been sent in until they were exhausted, he used one of them at the beginning of his advertisement in the local newspaper. As he published the name of the author, every family in town watched for and read the ads. When the winner of the prize was announced the editor of the local newspaper gave him a column of free advertising using cuts of both the winner and the prize. The scheme proved very profitable, adding many new customers to the store, and was the means of creating publicity for this wide-awake merchant which was far-reaching in its effect.

W. F. Todd, whose cut appeared in last week's issue of The Grocer, resides at St. Stephen, N.B., and not at Mount Stephen, as was stated.

R. J. Sharp, representing W. P. Downey, has returned to Montreal after a successful trip through Ontario. Mr. Sharp reports a very favorable outlook for the coming year.

VEGETABLES—There is not much change in vegetables, with the exception of cabbage, which is now worth $44 a ton, or $2.25 a barrel. This is nearly double what it was a month ago. Potatoes are holding their own. The cold spells are not lasting long enough to affect the price. Celery is plentiful, and nearly all kinds of summer vegetables are on hand.

On Saturday, Feb. 6th, the regular meeting of the Ontario Vegetable Growers will be held at the Albion Hotel, Toronto, aad on Tuesday, Feb. 9th, the annual banquet will be held at Orr's restaurant. At the regular meeting a number of prizes will be offered, among them $2, $1.50 and $1 for the best bunch, each, of parsley, cress and water cress.

SALMON UP IN SMOKE.

At Inverness, a short distance south of Prince Rupert, B.C., the Boscowitz steamship Venture was burned to the water's edge on the morning of Monday, Jan. 25th. In addition to the vessel, 5,000 cases of salmon which had just been loaded at the Inverness cannery, were consumed. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it was supposed to have been caused by the upsetting of a torch in the engine room. Altogether 7,000 cases of salmon were burned.

FRUIT GROWERS MEET.

The first meeting of the directors of the Niagara Peninsula Fruit Growers' Association was held in St. Catharines on Jan. 26th. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, W. H. Bunting, St. Catharines; first vice-president, E. D. Smith, Winona; second vice-president, Robert Thompson, St. Catharines; third vice-president, W. M. Hendershot, Thorold; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Fisher, St. Catharines. A committee was appointed to prepare a stated case for submission to the express companies at a friendly conference to be held at the suggestion of the Railway Commissioners. The growers are determined to hold out for their rights, but are willing to meet the express companies on all reasonable grounds.

Easy To Sell—

"Sealshipt" Oysters

They are so delicious, clean and wholesome they sell on their merits and people who once try them order them often. No comparison with ordinary tub oysters which are bloated and bleached with water and often exposed to air, disease germs, dirt, etc. "Sealshipt" Oysters are packed almost as soon as tonged, in steel cans which are then sealed. Ice is put around the cans and the oysters come to you fresh, appetizing, natural in size and color. They look inviting and they taste so different from ordinary tub oysters.

"Sealshipt" Oysters will give you increased trade among the class of customers you most desire to have come into your store.

THE GROCER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA

The History and Manufacture of Salt—Its Use as a Condiment and Preservative—The Canadian Supply—Salt for Tanneries Crosses Ocean as Ship's Ballast.

SALT—Salt is something that finds its way into every home. The principal reason of this is probably its cheapness and secondly on account of its universal use as a condiment. Scarcely anything the hosewife prepares for the table is made without it. The grocer should, therefore, become thoroughly acquainted with its manufacture and its varieties in order to become a first-class salt salesman.

The industry of mining and manufacturing salt, is, in many respects, as interesting as any industrial institution in the history of mankind.

From remote times salt has been an economic necesity, and remains to-day practically the only mineral used by man, in its original state. This, perhaps, is the reason for its prominence in the history of the human race. We read in sacred history of the wife of Lot being turned into a pillar of salt, and throughout the Bible there are many references to it. From these times to the present moment, through the pages of secular history, it has figured more or less prominently. Eminent physiologists have called it the real elixir of life, and they are represented as having even restored the action of the heart after it has ceased, by the use of a saline solution. Its use in a physiological laboratory is indispensable. While the blood of the human being is an exceedingly difficult and delicate part of the organism to experiment with in an intra vascular way, saline solutions may be injected into the blood flow without any danger of precipitating the solids.

An Absolute Necessity.

Thus we see it is an absolute necessity, and cannot be in any way regarded as a luxury. It is gratifying to know that the supply is practically unlimited, and easily accessible. Being an absolute necessity, no such grim contemplation is opened up to view as is the case with the supply of coal, which scientists tell us will last only five hundred years longer.

The methods of manufacturing salt has not changed in any great measure for the last 1,000 years, until comparatively recently, when the vacuum system was introduced, which has facilitated its manufacture immensely. Salt or as it is chemically known, sodium chloride, is produced from three different sources—bay or sea salt, rock or mine salt, (often called commercially, salgem), ,and natural brine or pit salt. Ordinary table or white salt is made by pumping the brine, which is found in deep wells, into elevated reservoirs, from whence it can run by natural gravitation into large, shallow wrought iron pans each 20 or 30 feet square by 10 to 12 inches deep. Throughout this brine is distributed numerous heating pipes, and in this way the water is evaporated, and the solid salt is left. During this process the brine is continually agitated.

The salt thus produced is either large and coarse or small and fine, according to the amount of heat applied. This phase of the manufacture has been greatly improved by the introduction of the vacuum process. By this method relatively less heat is required and a much finer and more uniform grain is the result. The salt which falls to the bottom of the vats is collected and thoroughly dried, after which it is ground and made ready for the market.

Attracts the Moisture.

Salt is largely used as a preservative owing to its property of deliquescence. It draws moisture to it, from any matter with which it comes in contact, rendering these substances hard, and in this way acts as a preservative. Salt, when it becomes soft by absorbing moisture loses in a large degree its flavor.

Many references are made to salt losing its flavor in the Scriptures, and sometimes is said to have turned bitter. This may be puzzling to most people as nowadays salt cannot be said to deteriorate by becoming bitter. The explanation lies in the fact that sodium chloride or common salt in Palestine, is found, largely mixed with magnesium chloride, which, on becoming damp develops a very bitter taste.

Salt as we have it to-day is classified as follows: "Table and dairy," "common fine," "common coarse," "packers," "solar," "rock," "milling," "brine" and other grades. The table and dairy salt includes extra fine, and fancy grades prepared for family use, and all grades artificially dried, used for butter and cheese making, and such special brands. Under "common fine" are included all other grades of fine salt of first quality not artificially dried, such as those known to the trade as "C.F.," "No. 1F.," "Anthracite." "Common coarse" includes all grades coarser than "common fine," made by artificial heat, such as "steam coarse," "No. 1 coarse," "pan solar," "G. A.," "Liverpool ground," "C.C.," etc.

What Rock Salt Is.

"Packers'" salt is the variety used for curing fish, meats, etc. All coarse salts are classed as solar salts, and are made by solar evaporation. "Rock" salt refers to salt which is mined and shipped without any special preparation. Gold and silver workers use a variety known as mill salt. Low grades of salt are known as "No. 2" and are used for fertilization purposes and live stock. Brine is the salt liquor used in the manufacture of soda ash, sodium hydrate, sodium bicarbonate and other sodium salts. Is Italy, Egypt and Spain salt production is a state monopoly. In Italy it is joined to the lottery system, and in this way the seemingly innocent action of drawing a pail of water from the ocean, is fraught with danger, as the tax may be evaded.

Salt is largely used in the arts, especially by potters for making a coarse glaze for their products, and it is also used as a fertilizer. From these few facts it will be seen what an important part this cheap but highly essential condiment plays in the progress of humanity.

Canadian Salt Supply.

Practically all the salt used in Canada comes from western Ontario, Windsor, Goderich, Moortown, Clinton, Sarnia, etc., being the chief centres. This includes the fine and coarse salt for domestic use.

Salt for the tanneries, however, is brought over from Liverpool, England. Salt being cheap there it is produced at little expense and used as ballast in ships coming across the ocean. It is thus delivered in Montreal without cost and distributed from there.

Rock salt is imported from the United States for cattle as a great many cattlemen think it better than the other variety. Canneries, too, import salt from across the line, Michigan producing large quantities.

Salt is one of those few solids of its nature that will not evaporate. It cannot be destroyed by this method. If a dish of a solution containing salt and water is left in the sun the water disappears by evaporation, but not a particle of the salt.

Salt, too, is used with ice to produce a freezing mixture for hardening ice cream.

COURTEOUS TO HIS CUSTOMERS

Methods Used by Halifax Grocer in Building up His Business—Twenty-Seven Years in the Trade—Obliged to Add to His Premises on More Than One Occasion.

Beginning business in a small way 27 years ago at the corner of Birmingham Street and Spring Garden Road, William J. Hopgood has to-day one of the finest grocery stores in Halifax, Strict attention to business has merited its reward. The proprietor of this store has been identified with the grocery busisess all his life, as before he branched out for himself he was behind the counter with his father, who for many years successfully conducted a grocery business on Argyle Street in Halifax city.

W. J. Hopgood saw that the city was growing rapidly in the western section, and he decided to start business at the above mentioned site, which is located on one of the main avenues of the city. True, the business was small at the start, but it grew rapidly. "Tom," after opening, found that the premises were entirely too small and the store was soon enlarged and improved generally.

How He Gained Custom.

Fair in his dealings and always attentive and obliging to his customers, Mr. Hopgood continued to attract new faces to his store until to-day he enjoys the distinction of having one of the largest retail grocery businesses in Halifax, and one of the largest in the Maritime Provinces.

Not only does he draw trade from the locality in which his store is situated, but from all parts of the city. He always has paid strict attention to his business and to this he attributes his success in business. Recently he was again obliged to further enlarge and improve the store, and now it is up-to-date is every respect. The change was made at a cost of about $5,000. Everything new in the grocery line, as well as fittings, were installed, including some fine silent salesmen, which are used to display chocolates, etc. Nothing but first-class stock is handled, and all the goods are bright and fresh. It has been the one aim of the proprietor to keep the shelves well filled with bright, new stock, and he told The Grocer that it pays to do it. He handles a very large quantity of high-class French goods, and fancy English biscuits. Two years ago he admitted his eldest son, W. B. Hopgood, into the business. He is a young man who has numerous friends and who follows in the footsteps of his father, and is, therefore, destined to make a successful grocer.

Attentive to Business.

He is a hard worker and very attentive to business, and these qualifications should assist him very materially in the future. The firm is now known as W. J. Hopgood & Son, and goods from this house have the stamp of reliability on them. Not only is the store well kept, but the delivery teams are always in first-class condition when appearing on the streets.

WHAT QUEBEC GROCERS WANT.

Quebec grocers held a meeting last week to discuss the amendments, referring particularly to the trade, in the city charter. Misael Thibaudeau presided. After some discussion it was decided to request the city council to add to the clause respecting the sale by grocers of meats and fish, the words "poultry and hog meat." A discussion also took place on the proposed separation of the liquor business from the grocery business. The meeting was strongly in favor of the present state of things being maintained, but if this was found to be impossible, it was resolved to ask the council not to amend the charter by seeking the separation of the liquor and grocery business, but that instead the grocers will bind themselves not to sell liquor after seven o'clock on Saturday evenings.

SODA CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Canned Fruits and Vegetables Absolutely Pure

All our Canned Fruits and Vegetables are absolutely pure. The preservation is accomplished solely by sterilization, this being the cheapest as well as the safest method of processing.

We not only guarantee our Canned Fruits and Vegetables to be preserved solely by sterilization, but we further guarantee that all our Fruits and Vegetables are canned when they are best fitted for table use.

Quality is of the greatest importance in Canned Goods, and owing to it being impossible to tell quality until the can is opened, consumers should be very particular as to the brands they purchase.

It has always been the policy of the Management of the Canadian Canners, Limited, to work for Quality.

The buyer of a can of goods with the Canadian Canners' Label, knows that he is running no risks. The quality is guaranteed by a responsible, reliable company.

Why buy inferior goods even if at lower prices only to perhaps incur the ill-will of your customers?

If you secure a name for handling nothing but reliable goods you are on the high road to success.

REMEMBER THE BRANDS :—

Simcoe, "Lynnvalley," "Auto"; Aylmer, "Canada First," "Log Cabin"; Bowlby's "Horseshoe"; Lalor's "Grand River," "Kent"; Delhi, "Maple Leaf"; Boulter's "Lion," "Little Chief," "Thistle"; Lakeport, "White Rose," etc.

CANADIAN CANNERS, Limited

Preserving the Flavor

One of the main reasons for the popularity of Old Homestead Brand Canned Fruits and Vegetables is the fact that the contents of every can have the full, natural flavor.

We claim that our processing methods are up-to-date in every respect. The flavor of Old Homestead products proves it—proves that we have the facilities and "knack" to cook and preserve an article without diminishing its flavor.

This Fact is Important to You

It means that it is within your power to sell canned fruits and vegetables that rival fresh-grown goods in tenderness and flavor.

Take advantage of it.

Tell your customers WHY Old Homestead Brand is best—every can will be a full confirmation of your assertion.

And don't forget, either, that there's more money and better reputation in handling an article that is distinctly superior to anything else of a similar nature.

Wouldn't it help your business greatly if you positively guaranteed every pound of tea you sold to be delicious or you would take it back.

That it was of such exceptional merit as to have established the largest sale on the North American continent.

To have doubled its enormous sale every four years.

It certainly would help business.

Talks with Business Men

No. 2—Salesmanship in Tandem

Trade newspapers make possible a new factor in the distribution of goods—SALESMANSHIP IN TANDEM. Through this medium you may place an auxiliary salesman on the road and it will help every one of your order-taking staff.

A trade newspaper, if it is a good one, makes a periodical visit to the best merchants in the country —they are the men who appreciate most fully the advantages of a trade paper—AND IT IS WELCOME. This is the lead salesman in your tandem. Merchants like him and at a time when they are in a receptive mood, he speaks about the firm he represents—you—and tells something about the goods you sell, or the service you give, or some other distinctive feature of your business. This is, of course, assuming that you use the trade paper for that purpose.

The result is that when the traveler—the second half of the tandem—comes around WITH THE GOODS, HE IS BETTER RECEIVED, because an interest in the firm or the goods has already been aroused, and a desire—possibly an unconscious desire—to see the goods, created.

YOU will be known as a high-class GROCER if you sell the best TEA on the market.

TEAS

Has it ever occurred to you, a wholesale grocer can give better value in Tea than a tea house?

The wholesale grocer's selling expense would be the same if he never sold any Tea, in other words the selling expense in selling all the lines the wholesale grocer does, makes the percentage on the Tea the same as on all other lines, and only matter of a small amount, as a consequence we give better values than tea houses. If you doubt this inspect our travelers' samples, or if they don't call write us.

Relation of the Farmer to the Merchant

Progress of the Former Means Advantages to the Latter—The Educational Work Being Carried on by the Provincial Government—Special Conventions for the Benefit of Fruit and Corn Growers of Western Ontario.

Every dollar added to the purchasing power of the farmer means that much increased wealth to the community. Any organizer, agency or individual, having in view the object of augmenting the resources of a district, either by opening up new lines of enterprise or by instilling practical, profit-producing methods is engaged in a useful work—a work that counts for something in personal and communal life. A healthy and happy farming class of people is Canada's greatest asset. The question naturally arises how can this ideal state of affairs be brought about?

By adding to the purchasing power of the farmer and teaching him how to obtain in the easiest, most economical and progressive way the best results from the soil. A moment's reflection will give anyone an indication of what this all means. It should be a comparatively easy matter to add $100 annually to the income of a farmer. Around any rural town there are at least 200 farms within a distance of a few miles, and this would mean $20,000 more to spend in that section of the country. It is thus seen how vital is the interest of the average citizen to assist the farmer to an increased earning power from his land; and it also demonstrates how closely allied and inter-related are the welfare of the merchant and the tiller of the soil. What benefits the one is of material assistance to the other, and for this reason there should be mutual co-operation.

Progress Being Made.

With the object of pointing the way to larger earnings for the farmer, progressive work along well-defined lines is being conducted by the Ontario Department of Agriculture and a number of special institutes have been held, while several more will be conducted this month in various parts of the Province. C. C. James, the Deputy Minister, is the directing genius, and, in this as well as many other commendable enterprises, is a pioneer whose labors, which give evidence of much foresight and thoughtfulness, cannot be too highly commended. The soundness of his views and the breadth of his ideas have always proved a stimulus to the agricultural interests of Ontario.

A brief outline of the work undertaken by these special institutes will afford an idea of what is being accomplished and the exceptional facilities presented to the farmer and the stock-breeders of the Province to make the most of their opportunities, and also give residents of the towns and cities some conception of the scope and character of the end in view.

Educating the Farmer.

Under the auspices of the Farmers' Institute Branch of the Provincial Department of Agriculture and through the agency of the District Office in Perth, a three days' course was held last week in stock and seed judging in Carleton Place. A similar course was put on in Perth in December, which was attended by over five hundred farmers with most satisfactory results. The object of these gatherings was to convey to the farmer the fine points in the judging of live stock and to acquaint him with the inherent qualities of pure and improved seeds. The yeomen of North and South Lanark enthusiastically voted these courses the most profitable of any series ever held in the county. Prof. G. E. Day, of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, conducted the instruction in cattle judging in Carleton Place, while Dr. H. G. Reed, of Georgetown, had charge of the horses. In seed judging, Prof. C. A. Zavitz, of the Ontario Agricultural College, was the instructor, and grass seed, clover seed, oats and other cereals were examined. The discussion dealt with the cleaning, testing and improvement of seed and the identification of the impurities commonly found. There were also some interesting points brought out on questions pertaining to breeding, feeding and marketing of live stock, to unsoundness in horses and to the common diseases of farm animals.

Fruit Growers Assisted.

Another assembly recently held was the Peach Institute, in St. Catharines, at which many fruit growers were in attendance and specialists gave addresses on such timely topics as "Setting Young Orchards," "Management of Bearing Orchards," "Pruning" and "Recommended Varieties."

A Corn Growers' Convention and Exhibition was held for four days this week in Essex, the object being to stimulate greater interest in the subject of corn growing and the selection of corn seed. The gathering was arranged for by the Essex branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and the Essex and Kent Farmers' Institute. Prizes were given for the best ten ears of several varieties of corn, and a corn judging competition conducted. Lectures were given by Prof. L. S. Klink, of St. Ann's Agricultural College, on the cultivation, breeding and selection of corn, he being particularly conversant with these topics owing to having spent several years in the corn-growing States of Illinois and Iowa. All the different problems in connection with the crop, which is the most important in South-western Ontario, were considered and discussed.

Proper Methods Necessary.

It was pointed out that an increase of one bushel per acre would mean on an average 150,000 more bushels in the Counties of Essex and Kent alone. Recent discoveries have indicated that if proper methods of selection are practised an increase of five or more bushels on the average may be expected which would materially add to the amount of money in circulation in the district. Any one can readily see what this would represent to the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer; in fact, every man, woman and child in two counties, and it was emphasized that the result would be brought through the medium of corn shows, conventions and judging classes, such as the one held this week. The townspeople all attended in large numbers, so great was their interest.

Addresses on "The Preparation and the Cultivation of the Soil for Corn," "Seed Corn Judging," "Field Competition With Corn," "How to Judge and Select Seed Corn," and "Experimental Work With Corn in Ontario," were given by Prof. Klink, of Macdonald College; Prof. Zavitz, of the O.A.C.; Dr. J. W. Brien, of Essex; C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agricultural, and others.

Results Are Promising.

The broad, practical work of the Ontario Department of Agriculture in seeking to increase the output of the farm and to add to the life force of the great agricultural interests, goes steadily and encouragingly on, with widening interest and most promising results. It is a splendid undertaking, the strength and importance of which is not yet appraised at its proper value, but the bigger outlook and the aroused concern, especially where branch schools of agriculture are located in the Province, give evidence of constantly growing appreciation.

Success of Young Ingersoll Grocers

Methods by Which "the Two Macs" Have Worked Up a Splendid Business in Two Years—Their Goods Are All Guaranteed—Assistance From the Telephones—Rapid Turn Over of Stock—Gain the Confidence of Their Customers.

The story of success, whether it be in the commercial sphere, or in some of the more humble walks of life, always abounds with interest. This being true Grocer readers will be interested in the success achieved by Messrs. McLeod & MacBain, of Ingersoll, more commonly known to the local public as "the two Macs."

Those familiar with the ups and downs of the business world are aware that this is really an age of keen competition and of the "survival of the fittest." Not infrequently is it difficult to retain an established business to say nothing of the constant building up process by which success is measured. In this respect the history of the growth of the business of "the two Macs" is of peculiar interest. Two years have rolled by since they succeeded I. W. Kingswood

JOHN J. McLEOD,

A Promising Young Grocer of Ingersoll and One of the Two "Macs."

in the grocery business and that success has been their portion is beyond peradventure. Month by month, year by year, they have witnessed an increase in their business, which is seldom attained in such a short period. In view of this fact the manner in which they have adapted themselves to their business, and the policies which they have followed should be of interest to all in the grocery business.

It has been said that success is the goal of noble ambition and legitimate effort, and this being true the suggestion is strong that in any calling there must be the proper spirit of honesty and determination. This is a formidable combination and when coupled with progressive methods of the present day will usually win success.

Reared With the Business.

Although young men, Messrs. McLeod and MacBain were fortunate in having devoted almost their whole lives to the grocery business. They profited by their long experience. They weighed carefully the successes and failures of others and when at the "helm" on their own account one of the first things they did was to map out their course and to follow this as well as conditions would allow. They have studied conditions, kept in touch with their customers and all matters pertaining to their work, and they have built up a large business, and what is more it is still growing.

Story of Steady Advance.

John J. McLeod has had about nineteen years experience in the grocery business. He is a native of Woodstock, ten miles distant, and first entered the business with J. B. Doyle & Son of that city, with whom he remained for fourteen years. About five years ago Mr. McLeod came to Ingersoll, taking a responsible position with Robinson Bros. When Robinson Bros. disposed of their business to A. Beattie & Co. Mr. McLeod remained with the store in the capacity of manager. He occupied this position until engaging in business with Mr. MacBain under the firm name of McLeod & MacBain.

H. H. MacBain has been identified with the grocery business for the past fourteen years. For about nine years he occupied a position with C. A. O'Neill of this town. Later he entered the employ of A. Beattie & Co. with whom he remained until engaging in the present partnership enterprise.

Confidence of Their Customers.

There are several important factors which may be said to have contributed largely to the great degree of success which the firm of McLeod & MacBain have attained. It is worthy of note that the firm have adhered strictly to business methods and at all times have shown a marked disposition to merit the confidence of their customers. They have found it good policy to take an interest in their customers, to extend them what courtesies are within their power, and above all to furnish them with only guaranteed goods.

The buying public appreciate any little attention they receive; it may only be a word of welcome or a shake of the hand, but whatever it is it has a pleasing effect and there is soon a stronger attachment between the customer and that grocer. It is this spirit of friendliness that also has done much in the way of winning patronage for the "Two Macs."

Guarantee the Goods.

The firm have also made it a point to guarantee every article that is sent out of their store. If the purchase is not up to expectations, in other words if it does not give satisfaction, it is cheerfully exchanged or the money refunded. This shows a spirit of fairness, which cannot be overlooked, and as a consequence the firm have had no difficulty in keeping their customers.

The firm also were quick to realize the advantages of the telephone as a business-getter. With a dual system, the Bell and the Independent, the field is an unusually good one in which to keep in touch with customers "over the wire." In the fruit season and even in the winter months, when green vegetables are rather scarce, the telephone can certainly be used to good advantage. Through the telephone the firm are able to acquaint their customers—they invariably know just which ones to ring up —with what they have in stock that would interest them mostly. The telephone may be used in keeping touch with the country people in every direction within a radius of eight or ten miles and it has proven an important factor in the development of their business.

While the firm carry a large stock, it is well assorted and could not be described as being "too heavy." The object is to make a quick turnover and give their customers the benefit of fresh, reliable goods. The store consists of a basement, ground floor and two storeys above ground. The firm have abandoned the china and crockery departments, and are devoting all their time to groceries.

That their business is an extensive one will be apparent from the fact that two delivery wagons are making their rounds the major portion of the time.

Country Produce Profitable.

The firm have also made it a point to handle practically all the country produce that is offered them. In this heart of the dairy centre, where the great bulk of the milk finds its way to the cheese factories or the condenser, butter is not offered in plentiful quantities. Eggs and other products, however, are usually plentiful and these the firm handle to a great extent, which they in turn market in the larger centres. This is considered as a very important feature of their business, as it has brought them a profitable country trade.

The firm give credit, but the amount is limited and they always insist on early settlements.

All that one would expect to find in an up-to-date grocery store is always kept in stock and the store never loses its bright and attractive appearance.

ASSOCIATION PROGRESSING.

Membership of Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association Rapidly Increasing.

In Montreal on Saturday evening last the executive of the Dominion Commercial Travelers' Association held their usual monthly meeting, and a most gratifying statement was made to the effect that the membership of the body was some two hundred and fifty more than at this time a year ago, while the death rate continued normal.

Amelioration of the difficulties existing between the travelers and the hotel proprietors of the country is one of the aims of the executive for 1909. The hotel proprietors are acting in conjunction with the association, and it is hoped that many little matters which are annoying alike to the commercial man and to the owner of the hotel will be satisfactorily settled. The executive request any suggestions likely to aid them and the hotel men in their endeavors along these lines.

The Canadian Grocer will publish any suggestions sent in, provided they are reasonable.

GROCER STRIKES IT RICH

Gets the Mining Fever and Wanders Into the Silver Fields of the North—J. H. Sanderson, a Former Toronto Grocer and Commercial Traveler—Lakes in New Ontario Named by Him—Indian Guide Directs Course of the Prospector.

More romantic than real appears the story of the wonderful success in the silver fields of Northern Ontario of J. H. Sanderson, at one time the proprietor of a grocery store on the corner of Dundas Street and Brock Avenue, Toronto, and later traveler for Husband Bros. & Peters, wholesale fruit merchants, Toronto. His connection with the latter company has made him widely known to both retail and wholesale grocers in many parts of the Province, who will be glad to learn of his good fortune and who, with The Grocer, will congratulate him on the success he has attained in the mining camps of the north.

When it is considered that he has made his money in less than two years, the romantic side of the story becomes more apparent.

Got the Mining Fever.

It was in May, 1907, when Mr. Sanderson's heart first began to yearn for life in the Northern country where he had often before disposed of many cases of oranges, lemons, etc. So at that time, with Geo. W. Duncan, another traveler for the same firm, he decided to go a-prospecting. He had heard and read so much of the amazing wealth of the Cobalt silver fields and conversed so much with men who were able to talk of money by the "thousands," and who until a short time prior to going into that district had scarcely been able to keep the wolf from the door, that the mining fever got the better of him and off he struck for the scarcely explored districts of New Ontario.

Took the Red Man's Advice.

Mr. Sanderson, together with his associates, decided not to go near Cobalt, but instead began to travel up the Montreal River, guided by an Indian. He was one whom they all took a fancy to, and so they used him "white." The red man, in return, as has always been characteristic of his race, reciprocated the kindness tendered him. He knew of a better "hunting ground" than any in the direction in which the prospectors were traveling, and persuaded them to go with him. There was "good stuff" there, he told them, and they took his advice.

Traveling northwest, they came to what is now known as Discovery Ridge, which is only a few miles east of the much-talked-of Gowganda.

Pioneers of Bloom Lake District.

Many were the hardships—as naturally there would be in such a rocky and undeveloped country—that Mr. Sanderson and his party had to contend with. They had to build their own winter roads and one of these was eighteen miles in length. They cut a road from Elk to Lost Lake, and are the undisputed pioneers of the Bloom Lake mining district, located but a few miles to the east of Gowganda.

The roads were, of course, cut at their own expense, and by the party consisting of twelve men. They have the distinction of naming a large number of lakes in that district, among them being Calcide, Lost, Wigwam and Sanderson. All of these have since been recognized by the Government upon whose maps they have been marked.

The Lake Was Lost.

An interesting episode surrounds the naming of Lost Lake, and Mr. Sanderson gets the credit for it. One day he became lost and wandered about aimlessly for hours, finally coming to this lake. Here he was found by the Indian guide, who inquired if he were lost.

"No, I am not," replied Mr. Sanderson, "but the lake is lost." This is the customary answer an Indian gives, and in this case Mr. Sanderson got even with the red man.

He and his associates had some eighteen claims in that district, nine of which they sold, realizing a handsome sum. They are now negotiating with a Belgian syndicate for the disposal of some of the others, and this deal which is almost closed, will involve a sum that will have to be written in six figures.

Interested in Groceries.

As a Toronto grocer in former years, Mr. Sanderson was widely known. He always took a great interest in grocery matters, and was a valuable member of the one-time Grocers' Baseball Club in Toronto, now a thing of the past. He is a man six feet tall and of splendid physique. He has thus been able to stand the trials and hardships one necessarily meets in such an unexplored region. He was a splendid type of business man, honest in all his dealings, and certainly deserves the kind smile that Fortune has bestowed upon him.

NEW STORES IN HAVELOCK.

The buildings on the main street, Havelock, which were destroyed by fire last August, have been replaced by a very fine block of new brick structures. Messrs. Coon and Childs are the first to get into their new store, having opened for business on Feb. 4th. Their store is modern in every detail. The very latest improvements in up-to-date store methods have been placed in a splendidly arranged manner. In such a new and attractive store Messrs. Coon and Childs should get a good share of the business.

Weigh, count, measure and gauge everything you buy.

MANUFACTURERS DEMONSTRATE

Their Products Are Shown at the Carsley Pure Food Show in Montreal—Education to the General Public— Some Neat Displays Arranged.

On the first day of this month the S. Carsley Company, Montreal, opened their annual pure food show, run in connection with the grocery department of their departmental store. Manager Foreman believes in the educative value of such a display, and of late has annually brought leading manufacturers to see the wisdom of displaying and demonstrating their products to the public of Montreal. The idea is a good one in the opinion of many manufacturers, who avail themselves of the opportunity afforded them of advertising thus directly to the consumers. Many neat displays were made this year, and the leading ones are commented upon hereunder.

E. W. Gillett Co.

Billy Murray, the hustling Quebec Province representative of the makers of Magic Baking Powder is continually after records, and he is beating them right along. His display for the firm this year far surpassed the one he had last year in every way. A large section of the grocery department was roped off and here audiences were collected daily, to be addressed by Mr. Murray on the preparation of foodstuffs in the baking of which Magic Baking Powder is used. An expert chef gave practical demonstration of the good results which can be accomplished through the use of Magic Baking Powder. Professor Murray is becoming quite a public speaker. A feature of the display was the large picture of the company's factory, in Toronto, which took up one whole side of the space reserved.

Edwardsburg Starch Co.

Crown Brand Table Syrups attracted much attention during the fair. The display itself was an excellent one, and, as for the goods, of course no grocer is looking for knowledge in that direction. Expert demonstrators explained the many uses of Crown Brand Syrup and served housewives as well. The company's line of starches was also on display.

Bovril Display.

This fluid beef was demonstrated during the entire fair, the pretty booth in which the display was made attracting a great deal of attention. Manager Seward states he is selling more Bovril than ever before.

Canadian Condensing Co.

Imperial Evaporated Cream and Royal Condensed Milk, the two leaders of the Canadian Condensing Co., Chesterville, were given their initial display at a food fair, and needless to say, their merits at once won approval from those who had not before tried them. S. H. Ewing & Sons are general sales agents for the firm.

Club Jelly Powder.

Club jelly powders, all flavors, were displayed by S. H. Ewing & Sons, who also exhibited Kyko Chocolate paste—for cake icing—and Prince of Wales Extract. These goods are widely known and appreciated by the public as well as the trade.

Ogilvie's Royal Household.

Royal Household Flour was displayed in an attractive booth at the fair. The flour which sells under this brand carries a guarantee of excellence with it, and housekeepers appreciate this.

W. H. Dunn's Booth.

Mackintosh's Toffee and Cailler's Swiss Milk Chocolate were displayed by W. H. Dunn. These confections command considerable attention in Canada. Mr. Dunn's display was as attractive as usual.

Snap Was There.

Snap certainly has become known to the trade and consumer alike since it was placed on the market. Most every lady visiting the fair recognized in this line quite an old friend and the neat sample boxes given away doubtless converted many present non-users of the article to its numerous good qualities.

St. Charles Cream.

St. Charles Cream seems to be gaining headway every month. W. H. Halford, the energetic Montreal agent, seized upon this opportunity of once more bearing in upon the minds of the local public the value of this cream as a household article. Mr. Halford reports sales largely increased within the past few months.

Imperial Ice Cream Co.

Sanitary ice cream made by this company was served to visitors in a new way. Paper saucers were used for holding the ice cream, while tin spoons were utilized. Both are thrown away after one usage. This company has progressed very rapidly since its formation. H. G. Wade was in charge of the display.

Chase & Sanborn.

Seal Brand Coffee commanded just as much attention as it always does. Thousands of sample cups were served ladies visiting the fair, and in this way much good educative work was accomplished for Chase & Sanborn, and pure foods generally.

Melagama Tea.

W. H. Blewett, traveler for the Melagama tea people had more to say about the merits of Melagama than anything else, and such being the case it was not surprising that there seemed to be a continued demand for it. The Melagama booth was very tastily arranged.

Cooks' Friend Baking Powder.

Sales manager C. W. Gregory spent a great deal of his time looking after the interests of Cooks' Friend Baking Powder display. W. D. McLaren, Ltd., are assisting the grocer in every way to create consumer demand for this brand.

Tetley's Teas.

Archie Snowdon can sell almost anything, but he said that the selling of Tetley's teas does not require great ability on account of the quality. Still, Snowdon & Ebbitt, the agents, feel that there is nothing like keeping the name before the public, so they put in an attractive booth which was well patronized.

Oliver's Jelly Crystals.

Something nice was offered the public in this booth. These five cent packages make a pint of jelly, while Custine five cent packages make a quart of Custine.

Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes.

This breakfast food was demonstrated and judging from the expressions of approval uttered by those who sampled the line increased sales should be the result of their exhibit.

Cerisot Wine.

This is a temperance beverage which is becoming quite a favored drink. Michaud, Fils & Cie. are distributors.

Cowan's Cocoa.

This breakfast cocoa was served to thousands during the fair. The John Cowan Co., of Toronto, had their usual up-to-date display.

Maggi Soups.

Maggi Soups, a line of Swiss goods, caused considerable curiosity on the part of visitors. These soups, obtainable in all flavors, are in powdered form, and sell for different prices from 5c up. Maclure & Iangley are the agents and J. G. Gordon, manager of the Montreal branch, was on hand frequently and boosted things along in his usual business-like and pleasing manner.

Laporte, Martin & Co.

These wholesale grocers made a neat display of a few of their high class imported goods. Minerva Olive oil is deserving of particular mention, while the Soleil brand of canned goods were shown as well. Miller's Malt Extract, for which the firm are agents, was visible in this booth, too.

Already Pudding.

A. H. Clements was in charge of the nice booth in which was displayed this pudding, as the name implies, quite ready for the housewife to put on the stove for the meal. The success of this line, Mr. Clements says, has been beyond his expectations.

Comfort Soap.

Frank Cockburn was not able to be around the fair a great deal, as he was too busy hustling for orders, but he had a good showing of the firm's many lines.

Fry's Chocolate and Cocoa.

D. Masson & Co. conducted a booth on behalf of Frys. The booth was nicely arranged and the demonstrators answered all questions.

Suchard's Cocoa.

Frank L. Benedict & Co., who are agents for this line, served tasty sample cups in connection with St. Charles Cream.

Dominion Cocoa.

Schlesinger Bros. & Co. were responsible for the neat display made of the products of the Dominion Cocoa and Chocolate Company.

Canadian Cocoanut Co.

J. Albert McLean had a unique display of his White Moss Cocoanut. Mr. McLean has taken years to build up the business to secure the reputation he now enjoys in the grocery world, but he is not yet satisfied, and, despite the quality of White Moss, he is ever on the look out for a means of improving it.

DECLINE IN SUGAR.

The feature of the market of the past week has been the decline of ten cents in the price of sugar. This occurred on Tuesday morning and the cause is attributed to various things, among them being the easy feeling in raws and the good crops in the West Indies. As United States refiners are free buyers on the present basis large quantities changed hands last week.

The decline has produced the record low figure this season and in fact the price has not been lower for Cuban raws for the last twelve months. The prospects for the future are merely speculative. Some maintain that prices will advance, but it cannot be denied that there is a considerable quantity of sugar in sight.

Don't get above your business. If you do it will gradually sink beneath your feet until you find yourself financially in deep water.

A business that is honest is respectable, and he who discovers that his business is not as big as it should be will do well if he puts more life and energy into it.

Unfortunately most men who are above their business become discontented and disconsolate and allow whatever energy and ability they may have had earlier in life to lapse into apathy.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," is a good motto for store, warehouse or factory. It may help one to do one's best when the temptation may be to do the opposite.

PURITY OF CANNED GOODS.

One of the important features of the annual convention of the National Canners' Association, which closed in Louisville, Ky., last week, was the beginning of a campaign to advertise the purity of canned goods and counteract the popular impression that these goods are treated with preservatives as are some preserves. A board was appointed on publicity looking toward the extension of the use of canned goods, and consumers will be educated to the fact that they are pure and that the makers are constantly endeavoring to make them purer. This board will have as its chief duties the following up and disposing of false and misleading reports injurious to the industry in order to teach the consuming public that canned goods are healthful in theory as well as in fact.

This is along the same line as was commented on last week in The Grocer. False reports concerning poison existing in canned goods are too easily spread. With the care that is naturally taken by manufacturers it is not very easy for them to produce goods that will be detrimental to the health of the consumer.

It is estimated that many millions of canned goods are consumed every month in the United States and when this is considered with the number of persons who are positively known to die from their use, the contrast is indeed a vast one.

The appointment of the Bureau of Publicity, therefore, is a commendable action and one which should meet with the universal approval of the members of the wholesale and retail trade who are interested in the sales of canned goods.

Nothing was more manifest in the whole convention than the fact that canners are friends and champions of the cause of pure food. In every way possible they have tried to perfect their processes, not only with a view to improving the character of the product, but to cheapen it. Nor has this cheapening been with a view to fattening their own pocketbooks, for canners recognize that the more cheaply their product can be placed in the hands of the consumer, the greater will their industry become and their realm for profit larger. The predominating feature of the convention was an effort to secure better quality of tin plate for the cans, that the consumer may feel surer canned goods are in wholesome condition; to find ways of processing which will make better quality canned goods and to secure equitable business arrangements which will give canner, trade and consumer their just shares of the distribution of profits.

PURE FOOD SHOWS.

During the last few years it has been noticed that Retail Grocers' and Retail Merchants' Associations have been induced by what might well be termed "professional promoters" to give their sanction to the holding of pure food shows in various places throughout Canada. While some of these demonstrations have been carried on in the interests of manufacturers and the education of the retail merchants as well as the general public, it seems that the majority are operated for solely the financial benefit of these "professional promoters."

Their system is to rent a hall for the holding of the show and apportion off spaces for the manufacturers who desire to demonstrate, thereby making considerable money. They charge for light, fuel, etc., and usually make good profits on their investments. The Retail Merchants' Associations give their approval of the scheme and the public become interested enough to pay to enter and see the demonstrations. The promoters also charge the food manufacturers for the privilege of having the names of the companies erected among the various signs. In this way they make money at the expense of the manufacturers, as well as the public.

Of course, there is the educational feature of the pure food show to be considered. But could not this be brought about in a much better way? Some demonstrations under the direction of manufacturers have been carried out in a fair, open-handed manner, and such deserve our commendation. This was more the case in earlier days than at present, as now promoters who make it their business establish them.

Throughout the country, however, there are grocers who recently have been educating the public by a better method and by one which tends to bring them more direct results. This is private demonstration. If a grocer is desirous of educating the public to the value of a particular kind of jelly food or breakfast food let him hold a small show in his own store and advertise the fact. In this way he not only introduces the goods he wants to, but in many cases gains custom. In one of the large Toronto departmental stores there is a continuous pure food show which is of a more educative value and of more benefit than all the big demonstrations ever held by the professional promoter. Hold your own pure food show and reap the benefits yourself.

MASTER THE DETAILS.

Much has been written on how to succeed in business, and to make advancement in any calling of life. The qualities of earnestness, industry, energy, perseverance, have all been placed to the fore time and again. There are on every side hundreds of men who possess all these desirable characteristics along with many others, and yet they have not reached any great height in the line of work which they are following. Back of all else, the man who advances the most rapidly is he who knows all there is to learn about the business in which he is engaged. There are, of course, persons who are so blinded by conceit, egotism or prejudice that you cannot tell them anything, They have sounded all depths and scaled all heights in the grocery, the hardware, the dry goods or the plumbing line. You find these men in every town. They are generally the class of fellows who do not take a trade newspaper, refuse to belong to an association of their own trade, and decline to have anything to do with merchants' organizations of any kind. Ask them to join and they say they cannot spare the time, that the association is only created for social purposes, and that you cannot give them any pointers which they have not already grasped in their ten, fifteen or twenty-five years' experience. Such purblind men are dying of dry rot, or the gangrene of conceit is eating their business life away. They are so benumbed with their own opinions that they are not conscious of mortification, and you cannot convince them until too late.

No man can acquire all the knowledge in any particular line of business that there is to acquire in one short life time. The clerk who strives to know all there is to know about a few things is the fellow who forges ahead every time of the one who has a smattering of detail covering a dozen or more departments. The former is the one who is so well equipped that when the door of opportunity opens he is ready to enter. Bluster and broad generalities may carry a man forward for a time, but soon there comes a time when storm and stress are encountered, then it is that he with technical or superior knowledge is selected to fill the post. If the ordinary observer was asked what is the chief cause of some men rising so high in their own line of business or profession the answer, in nine cases out of ten would be, he was a master of detail; he knew a little more than the other fellow and was ready when the proper time came to make good use of it.

After all, success is, in a word, knowing and doing the proper thing at the proper time—not ten minutes after the other chap has done it, then standing off and sapiently declaring, "Oh I could have done that, too." It is too late. After-knowledge and hindsight are not to be weighed in the same scale as previous knowledge and foresight.

ART AND AD DEPARTMENT.

That the advertisements in the Canadian Grocer are attracting widespread attention is seen by the fact that many of them are being copied word for word by trade journals throughout the United States and in Canada. Even the illustrations are reproduced to suit the article advertised.

This circumstance goes to show the efficiency and capability of the ad. writing and art department connected with the Grocer, and that the advertisements contained therein can be relied upon to command the attention of readers when they so forcibly attract the eye and reason of the critic.

ORGANIZED EFFORT.

The result of the movement in Picton, Ontario, to form a branch store of the Dominion Co-operative Association in that town illustrates effectively what can be done by business men when they get together. Undoubtedly had the Retail Merchants' Association of Picton not taken a hand in this matter the enterprise would have gone through and the farmers interested would have subscribed their stock under pretences which do not appear to be according to facts.

The retail merchants held a conference prior to the last meeting of the co-operative people, and determined to get the facts concerning some representations made, and also to vigorously oppose the proposition of the establishment of a co-operative store in Picton. The president was instructed to attend the meeting, and as a result the movement was checked. Organized efforts by the merchants of any town or city count for something, while individual efforts are of little or no avail.

GET BETTER ACQUAINTED.

Our attention has been called to a peculiar condition existing between wholesale fruit men on the one hand and retail grocers on the other in a certain Ontario city. There was discovered a retail grocer in business for nine years who had not seen the wholesale fruit dealers with whom he had been doing business. He remarked that he knew about the firms and pretty nearly where they were situated, but had never met the principals, having done his business principally with the drivers of the delivery waggons. These were the only persons in connection with the wholesale establishments with whom the grocer was acquainted.

This is something which should not be. The wholesalers should at least know the men who are dealing with them, even if becoming acquainted only meant a shake of the hand and a familiar word once or twice a year. It would have a tendency to lead the grocer to feel that the wholesaler appreciated his custom and took an interest in him apart from the financial side of the question.

CUTTING PRICES HURTS ALL.

There is a common idea that a firm, wholesale or retail, can break the price of goods and take business from competitors without injuring themselves.

This is wrong, as the inevitable result of price-cutting by one firm is to force others to meet the cut, the end being loss to all and cessation of hostilities or the failure or financial crippling of one or more of the contestants.

W. H. Thorne, St. John, N.B., very truly said at a dinner to the Canadian Wholesale Hardware Association at Toronto three years ago, that price-cutting was injurious to all concerned and that a failure in any line of business has a damaging effect to all immediate competitors.

This principle is so well recognized by Canadian banks that the Bankers' Association has on several occasions gone to the assistance of weak institutions rather than have them fail and bring disaster on all.

The effect is not so apparent in mercantile failures but there is no denying the fact that price-cutting and failure have a detrimental effect upon all in the trade.

Calgary and Cochrane Boards of Trade Organize—Australian Butter Competition at the Coast—Another Advance in Potato Prices at Vancouver—Petition for Reduction in Weight of Bread Loafs in Saskatoon.

VANCOUVER.

February 9.—With the scarcity of butter that comes about this time of year the retailer is much at the mercy of any of those who would resort to putting an inferior article under the label of a local creamery that has a good name. This has been done at times, though it is only fair to state that some of the best known creameries, if they have a second grade, use a different label, so that a customer may know that it is not the guaranteed article. The prospect of greater profit, which leads so many astray, prompts some to put up Australian butter under a local label. The Australian butter jobs at about 31c say, while the local would bring 40c—a very material difference. If the local butter is scarce, the demand being always good, in goes the Australian, which comes here in 14, 28 and 56-lb. packages. It is hardly fair to the retailer, who has to bear the brunt of any complaints from the user.

Kansas eggs are on the market, and are fairly good. It was expected that eggs would have arrived by this time from California, but they are still absent. Local dealers have very small stocks, as none wish to load up with warm weather to hand almost any day.

Commission men are beginning to think that potatoes are, after all, very scarce. The price which jumped from $21 before the cold snap to $35 per ton, immediately after, and which fluctuated from the latter figure to as low as $26, is now back to $35. These stocks were accumulated in most instances before the cold weather, and the commission men are accused of taking advantage of the occasion and selling potatoes, that were bought at a $21 sale price, at the highest price obtained in a pinch.

Fire destroyed E. S. Lake's grocery store at Penticton, only a small part of the stock being saved.

R. A. Bevan, of Creston, B.C., reports that he has sold his strawberry crop of this year (three acres) at $3.10 per crate, f.o.b. Creston. He shipped his berries, Wilson, Dunlop and Dorman varieties, last year as far as Sault Ste. Marie, with excellent keeping results. This he attributes to his plan of leaving an inch stem on each strawberry, and cooling thoroughly, as picked, in a building with a canvas roof over it, which he kept sprayed with water.

There is some talk of the Armour Packing Company, of Chicago, getting into the local field with a packing house. P. Burns & Co. has long held the monopoly, but following the establishment of a packing house at Edmonton, the Swift people are now aggressively after the business. A proposition to build there is now before the head office of Armour Company. George W. Beeman, of the executive of Nelson Morris & Co., another large Chicago packing firm, was in the city last week, and it is reported his mission was to look over the ground to see if the time was ready to establish a branch.

It is expected that the new plant of the Kootenay Jam Co. at Nelson, will be in operation by June 1st, so as to handle the strawberry crop. The capacity will be 15,000 pounds in ten hours. The company has been floated in England, Lord Brassey being president.

Dear Sirs: Find enclosed postal note for $2.00 for The Canadian Grocer. I have lost date of its expiration. Kindly pay up arrears and extend time from date thereof. I find it a great benefit for prices in past year. First copy saved me over its yearly subscription price for advertising buyers to me.

Yours very truly,

CALGARY.

February 9.—The officers elected for the Calgary Board of Trade for 1909 are as follows: President, A. E. Cross; vice-president, W. Toole; secretary-treasurer, Charles H. Webster; council, T. J. S. Skinner, A. Allan, T. Allan, W. Georgeson, C. W. Rowley, R. J. Hutchings. E. Dagg, C. P. McQueen, J. E. Irvine, A. T. Linton, R. R. Jamieson, A. B. Cushing, D. J. Young, L. P. Strong, J. W. Davidson, W. H. Berkinshaw.

Another step forward was taken by the progressive citizens of the Town of Cochrane when the Cochrane Board of Trade was organized. A largely attended meeting was held a few days ago and the board now successfully started with about fifty members. The following officers were elected for 1909: President, R. W. Widdess; vice-president, J. S. Tweed; secretary-treasurer, A. C. Chapman. Council, J. A. Campbell, James Quigley, Joseph Howard, Jos. Murphy, G. A. Bevan. Charles H. Webster, secretary of the Calgary Board of Trade, was appointed chairman, he having made the trip to Cochrane for the purpose of assisting in the organization of the board, and in a short address he explained the many advantages that would be derived by Cochrane from the work of the board. They are becoming actively engaged at once in having the freight rates adjusted where discriminations exist and are already in touch with a grist mill and tile manufacturing plant. Another important question that is being favorably considered is the question of joining the Associated Boards of Trade of Western Canada. A hearty vote of thanks was passed, expressing their appreciation to Mr. Webster for his assistance in the organization work and in explaining the general routine work of such an organization.

SASKATOON.

February 9.—A. J. Burton is the new manager at J. F. Cairns' store. Mr. Burton comes from Chicago.

W. H. Rowley, president and general manager of the E. B. Eddy Co., of Hull, Que., was in town this week. He was accompanied by J. Persse, of Tees & Persse, of Winnipeg, their Western agents.

J. L. Archibald has purchased the grocery business of T. A. S. Campbell on Avenue D. Mr. Campbell has opened a new store at Zelma, a few miles east of this city.

B. A. Archibald & Co. have now moved into new premises on Broadway. The stock has been attractively arranged on suitable shelves and makes a fine display.

A petition has been presented to the city council by the bakers of the city asking that the weight of bread be reduced from two pounds to one and a half pounds. The bakers state that this is the standard weight in other towns throughout the West.

Storm in Prince Edward Island Ties Up Steamships—St. John Wholesale Grocer in Financial Difficulties—Native of Ceylon in Halifax Tells of Crop Conditions—Pasteurized Butter Advocated in Montreal.

ST. JOHN, N.B.

February 9.—Business generally has been pretty quiet lately and few changes in quotations are reported. In the produce market hennery eggs have advanced from 30 to 33 cents, wholesale. Roll butter is cheaper and is held at the same price as tub butter, 22 to 25 cents a pound. Chickens and fowl are coming in limited quantities and are selling at 60 cents to $1.25 a pair.

Local dealers say that just at the present time the position of Manitoba flour in the market is very interesting. There is now only sixty cents a barrel difference between high grade Ontarios and Manitoba patents. This is considerably less than the average difference since 1906, which was $1 a barrel. The local merchants look upon it as possible that Manitoba will advance in the near future, especially in view of the strong condition which the market has taken in the last few days.

The high figure being quoted for lemons, following the Italian earthquake, is now being dropped and the present price is about $3 a box.

A meeting of the creditors of C. D. Trueman, who carries on a wholesale grocery business on the South Wharf, was held on Friday, February 5, in the office of E. T. C. Knowles. The creditors were largely represented. A statement was submitted showing a direct liability of $3,800, and indirect liabilities in discounts with the Bank of British North America, amounting to about $13,00. The assets, amounting to about $18,000, included an equity of redemption in a property on Duke Street, bills receivable, stock in trade, mining and telephone stocks, book debts and discounted paper. The bank reported that it was expected their claim would be about $5,000. A committee consisting of A. P. Hazen, manager of the bank; H. H. Pickett and C. E. Macmichael, was appointed to look into the estate and report back at a future meeting. The committee was authorized in the meantime to sell the interest in the real estate and realize on all the assets, excepting the stock and book debts.

Walter R. Small, who was reported to be in financial difficulties, has made an assignment to H. W. Robertson. Mr. Small carried on a grocery business at the corner of Queen and Germain Streets. The liabilities are placed at $3,500, with good assets.

Robinson's Bakery, in City Road, was damaged by fire on Monday, February 1. The loss was adjusted for $650, of which $205 was for damage to the building, and the balance for stock, etc.

The general store at Kouchibouguac, conducted by Clifford Atkinson, was entered by burglars on Thursday, January 28, and a quantity of goods stolen.

Robert Richardi, of Arnprior, Ont., is negotiating with the town council of Woodstock, N.B., relative to removing his plant for the manufacturing of clothes pins to Woodstock. The council is considering the matter.

HALIFAX.

February 9.—Trade conditions generally are on a very satisfactory basis. Collections are fair and the volume of business passing is considered very good for the season of the year. Traveling on the roads has been greatly improved by a good fall of snow, and, as a result, business has felt the benefit thereof in many districts. There are no very material changes in the price list, all lines being pretty steady. There is a fairly good demand for canned goods, both fruit and vegetables. Sales of dried fruit are very quiet at present. Breakfast foods, coffee, cocoas, chocolate and other such lines are selling freely. Eggs have again advanced in price and fresh laid stock is quoted at 30 cents per dozen. The demand is light and so is the supply. Butter has a tendency to move upwards. The receipts are very light, only small quantities of fresh made butter coming on the market. There is a fairly good supply of winter butter in the hands of some of the dealers, and on account of the high price sales are limited. Creamery prints are quoted at 28c to 29c, and dairy tubs from 24c to 26c. Cheese is quoted from 12¾c to 13c.

"Ceylon is now enjoying one of the best years experienced in that colony for some time," said H. T. P. Maddocks, a native of the Isle of Tea, who was in Halifax this week. Mr. Maddocks represents a large tea house, and he remained here several days, afterwards proceeding to the Upper Provinces. The crop of tea last year was above the average and the rubber trade was also very good," said Mr. Maddocks, so that the business in the colony is on a very good basis. The tea trade shows a very extensive growth and the quality of the crop is excellent.

The grocery business conducted for some years by R. M. Fulton, in the Imperial Block, corner of George and Townsend Streets, Sydney, has been purchased by H. C. Harrington, of Charlotte Street, and the stock will be removed to the latter store.

The plant of the Halifax Fish Company, at Dartmouth, was destroyed by fire this week. The loss is about $15,000. G. S. Troop is the manager, and the plant had been in operation about three years. The stock in the building consisted of $1,100 worth of fish in packages, and $900 worth of dry fish. The plant will not be re-built until the spring.

The Halifax Board of Trade has elected the following chairmen for the various committees: Reception and Entertainment, C. H. Mitchell; Fisheries, A. H. Whitman; Manufacturers', Jas. Anderson; Wholesale Dry Goods, E. Clayton; Mining, A. A. Hayward; West Indies, C. H. Mitchell; Retail Merchants', A. M. Bell; Tourist, J. W. Regan; Bank, G. A. Taylor; Pilotage and Harbor, W. S. Davidson; Transportation, J. E. DeWolfe; Freight Rates and Local Transportation, G. E. Faulkner; Press, J. W. Regan; Room and Membership, J. A. Neville; Tariff and Customs, R. T. MacIlreith; Wholesale Hardware, A. M. Bell; Finance and Insurance, A. Mackinlay; Wholesale Grocers, L. K. Payzant; Flour and Commission, I. B. Shaffner; Export Lumber, S. M. Brookfield; Commercial, J. A. Johnson; Industries, A. A. Hayward.

V. O. McNamara has purchased the grocery business of R. W. Smith & Co., at Parrsboro, and is now installing a new stock of goods.

MONTREAL.

February 9.—A novel method of pushing trade was brought to light in the Arraignment Court recently, when Ernest Bourbeau, grocer, St. Lawrence Street, pleaded guilty to running a lottery. His method of operation was to issue numbered coupons to customers with every dollar's worth of goods purchased. The duplicates of these were put together at stated times, and raffled, the holder of the lucky number getting in this instance, a pony. Judge Leet said he would have to consider what procedure to take, this being the first case of its kind to come before him.

John R. Hanson, of New York City, has arrived in Montreal, to spend a few days with relatives. Mr. Hanson is an old Montreal boy, and went to New York when a young man, to seek his fortune. He became a clerk in a grocery store, and soon rose to a managership. From this he went into business for himself, on the East Side, but soon, however, he felt he wanted to expand, and taking a partner and more pretentious quarters, commenced a small wholesale as well as retail business. This venture, like the other, was successful. Eight years ago Mr. Hanson retired from active business, and has since spent a considerable amount of his time in Canada and England.

Burglars have been continuing their work uninterruptedly. M. J. McKerley, 114 Park Avenue, being among the latest to suffer. The night raiders gained entrance by a cellar window. The cellar being a deep one, they had to scramble down to terra firma, by means of the water pipe, which ran up by the side of the window, against the wall. The water pipe not fashioned for such a stress, got considerably twisted. The burglars got into the store and gathered up a large variety of fine groceries, and broke out through the front door. When Mr. McKerley came down to business he found in addition to a looted store, that his water pipe was "playing like a fire hose," and his cellar lying three feet deep in water.

The Carsley food fair is now running full blast. The exhibits present a very attractive appearance.

"The position of the factorymen of this Province is that unless they can get a special price for pasteurized butter they will never go to the expense of securing the necessary apparatus to make it, but the moment they see they will be reimbursed for their additional expenditure, then there will be no longer any hesitation on their part, and within five years I can assure you there will not be a hundred factories in the Province that will refuse to make pasteurized butter."

This was the statement made to the members of the Montreal Produce Merchants' Association at the Board of Trade last week, by J. D. Leclair, superintendent of the Dairy School at St. Hyacinthe.

Mr. Leclair is a strong advocate of pasteurized butter, and read to the members present the results of experiments made in the various factories scattered throughout the Province, all of which went to show, that the pasteurizing was beneficial in every way, as regards flavor and keeping qualities. The trouble was not as to whether this was the better kind of butter, but whether the farmers and factorymen would like to incur the extra expense of installing new machinery, to carry out the process.

The leading produce merchants stated they would be willing to pay ⅛c more for the improved make, by pasteurization. Mr. Leclair stated that the cost of installing a plant would be about $125 to $150, with probably a maximum cost of $5 for putting it up.

The Hon. Jeremie Decarie, Minister of Agriculture for the Province, was present and gave his approval to the efforts of those who were endeavoring to introduce the pasteurized butter into the Province.

A gentleman from the Townships, who has been visiting the city, states that the prospects for a good sugar season are bright. "The best weather," he said, "for sugar makers is cold, clear nights, with bright, sunny days, and if the weather of the last few days is any indication of the future, ideal weather is in store for the sugar makers. Cold, cloudy weather does not stimulate the flow of sap like the bright sunshine, and neither does rainy variety. Frosty nights, with sunny days, results invariably in the best yield."

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I.

Feb. 9.—Horace Haszard, Charlottetown, has returned from St. John, where he gave evidence before the Commission investigating express and freight charges. The impression here is that it is time something was done in this direction. Express rates on the Island are reported as excessive, and freight rates equally as bad proportionately. "Think of nine cents per hundred for forty-six miles on sugar and you have an idea of the freight rates," said one grocer.

Percy Manuel, manager of J. C. Manuel's store, lost a driving horse the other evening while landing from the ice on the Montague River. The horse put one foot in a small hole in the ice and broke its leg, The animal had to be shot.

The winter steamers were delayed a couple of days last week and as a result passengers were delayed and freight tied up.

A lot of very fine navel oranges are now on the market and are selling well. The prices are 96's $3.75; 126's $3.50; 150's, $3.50.

BRACEBRIDGE.

February 10.—Merchants have passed the month of January in this town of the north without suffering much through quiet times. They all speak favorably of the year just passed and looking forward to this year with "Success" as the motto.

Congratulations are in order to E. J. Kirk, of Kirk Bros., on winning second prize in Xmas window display contest in The Canadian Grocer.

Some of the grocers in the town are trying to bring back to life the Board of Trade, that was successfully organized here some years ago, but eventually passed out of active existence. This movement should meet with success, and the old order of things established mainly to protect themselves, first against the deadbeat becoming a fixture in the ledger, and the guarding against an increase of book debts and gradually working into the cash system; secondly, to strengthen the Traders Act so that licenses could be made heavier; and thirdly, to arrange prices such as farm produce, flour, feed, merchandise, etc., that would not only benefit the storekeeper, but townspeople and farmers alike.

In sporting circles the merchants and clerks are becoming experts. Among the best curlers they are found and when "Andy" has the broom, look out for trouble.

Some nights ago our fast junior hockey seven went up against seven clerks. The O.H.A. team won, but they went a fast clip to do so. At the oyster supper following, however, our boys won handily.

Butter and eggs still command a good figure. On Saturday both articles were very scarce, eggs bringing 30c to 35c a dozen and butter 28c a pound.

LONDON.

February 10.—Travelers report business rather quiet in the London district the past week. Sugars, both raw and refined, are unchanged in prices. Fine teas are very firm. Coffees keep high and there are no changes in other staples. Nothing is doing in currants and raisins, although brokers report a drop in prices. Fish are slow of sale, there being not much demand even for haddies. In spite of the price-cutting among retailers, canners and wholesalers have large stocks of canned goods—tomatoes, peas and corn on hand, and the indications are that a large amount will be carried over this season.

Arrangements for the banquet of the Retail Grocers' Association on the night of Wednesday, February 17, at the City Hotel, are now pretty well completed, and the success of the affair is practically assured. Among those who have promised to respond to toasts are the following: Mayor Stevely, to "The City of London"; H. G. Nobbs, manager in Canada and the United States for Holbrooks, Limited, who are providing a very handsome souvenir menu card; T. B. Escott, Wm. Turnbull, Col. A. M. Smith and M. Masuret, the four latter representing local wholesale houses. The musical programme will be in capable hands, and will include a duet by Masters Selby and Mullins, and solos by Ed. Webster, Chas. L. Mountjoy, Thos. Ranahan, Clyde Napper, Percy Spence, M. McKeough and Chas. H. Earle, representative of the Atlantic Fish Co.

At a meeting of fruit growers of the London district, held last week, organization was perfected, those present agreeing to co-operate in furthering the interests of the industry. S. Dawson moved that tenders for boxes and baskets be asked for. T. W. Wickerson seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously. The secretary was instructed to write to various firms for prices and samples. It was decided to pay one cent per box for picking strawberries and two cents for raspberries during the coming season. President Baker, of the London branch, was in attendance, and expressed himself as well pleased with the business transacted. Now that they had decided to work in harmony, he hoped they would stand firmly together.

Chas. Cowan & Co., flour and feed merchants have sold their business to Charles F. Reid.

Invitations are out to the annual at home of D. S. Perrin & Co.'s employes, to be held on the 12th inst.

Fall wheat planting was so delayed owing to the dry weather, that the plant has not far enough advanced to enable farmers to say whether it has suffered from the open winter or not. Under ordinary circumstances the frequent thaws and cold dips would have worked serious injury, but the late seeding may prove the very salvation of the crop.

John Goodge has sold out his Dundas Street grocery business to Mr. Rennie, brother of Masuret's traveler of that name.

CHATHAM.

February 10.—The brief spell of sleighing the early part of last week meant quite a boom for business. Unfortunately, the sleighing did not last, and the roads, after a brief spell of mud, have frozen into the worst possible shape. Much produce came in early in the week, but Saturday's market was small on account of the roads. The new market by-law has gone into effect, but there have been no perceptible changes in the prices.

Hog prices seem to be still on the upward trend. Early last week deliveries were numerous, live hogs bringing as high as $7 a hundredweight, though $6.80 was the ruling price. "We haven't got the hogs in the country now," is the statement of a man closely in touch with the farmers. This was due, he stated, to the farmers, during the agitation against the Meat Inspection Act a year and more ago, killing off most of their brood sows. It will be some time before the situation returns to what it used to be, and in the meantime high prices may be looked for.

Ray King, who represented the Chatham Fruit Growers' Association in the West last fall, has been offered a position as Manitoba agent for a large Western fruit firm.

G. A. Malcolmson, of the Kent Canning Co., was in Louisville, Ky., last week attending the Canners' Convention.

Thos. Yazbeck, who has been conducting a restaurant in Wallaceburg, has leased the store at the corner of James and Duncan Streets, and will fit it up as a fruit and confectionery store.

Mr. Chapman, processor for the Leamington Canning Co., has resigned to take a position in Michigan, and will probably be succeeded by Mr. Masters, of Kingsville.

Henry Smith has severed his connection with C. G. Elliott's store at Comber, and will take a commercial course at Windsor. He is succeeded by S. Wambold, of Southampton.

W. F. Curtis, of Amherstburg, has had a hot water plant installed in his bakery, for the purpose of supplying boiling water for the bread factory.

Clark & Sons, of Ridgetown, had a window display last week which attracted big crowds. It was a soap window, and the display comprised two illuminated signs, a number of mirrors, and revolving electric lights.

During the sleighing last week, which put a temporary stop to ploughing, the farmers here and in the vicinity of Blenheim and Ridgetown, were busy marketing their beans. At Blenheim all the elevators were busy, each taking in over 3,500 bushels on Wednesday. The sudden selling state among the local producers was due to three causes; good roads, high prices—ranging at Blenheim to $1.75 a bushel, and a bad fire in the neighborhood when 1,300 bushels were consumed. At Chatham bean prices last week were quoted lower than outside prices, ranging from $1.75 to $1.60.

Tobacco growers in South Kent and Essex are looking forward to a very successful year. Mr. Gregory, buyer for the big tobacco interests, while in the vicinity of Blenheim, in addition to purchasing the odds and ends of the 1908 crop, held out the inducement for the coming season that prices would not be less than 8c or 10c a pound, with probabilities of higher prices. Growers who have experimented in high grade tobaccos, such as Zimmer Spanish, the last year, are shaking hands with themselves. Gordon Fox, of Ruthven, planted four acres last summer and has just sold over 6,800 pounds—which, at 12c a pound, figures in the neighborhood of $204 an acre. Josiah Peterson sold over 11 tons at the same price. The indications are that the coming season will see much growing of finer grade tobacco, in preference to the Burley.

This year's sample, as usual, when growers have been few, is of a pretty fine quality generally. At Ruthven, in Essex County, the heart of the industry, a steady stream of wagons and sleighs were busy all day Tuesday drawing in tobacco to the big warehouse, many tons being handled.

SARNIA.

February 10.—Sarnia at present has no market and all the produce is handled by the grocers. The prices are changed by the leading grocers, according to the quantity offered and the demand for the same. As a rule every grocer has the same selling price for butter, eggs and poultry. When it is felt necessary for a change in the prices the matter is discussed and everyone is notified to change at once. This method is found to be very satisfactory and avoids two or three prices existing at once. By reading The Grocer one can keep right with the markets. Butter is now retailing at 27c lb. Eggs are 28c per dozen. Fowl has been very scarce, chickens being worth 18c lb., and turkeys 18c to 20c per lb.

Sarnia grocers have adopted the early closing. They close at six o'clock each evening and ten o'clock Saturday night. The customers as well as the grocers think it very satisfactory.

Business for the month of January was as good, if not a little better, than the corresponding month last year.

STRATFORD.

February 10.—Practically without exception, Stratford business men, manufacturers and bankers state that business conditions are far ahead of what they were this time last year, and the outlook for a very brisk year of business is very encouraging. The farmers are buying quite heavily now, and sales of sugar, salt, rolled oats, oil cake and groceries in bulk are moving freely from grocer to farmer. Potatoes is a commodity the farmer here finds difficult to change into money, as most grocers will only handle them this year for trade, as the supply is greater than the demand.

Butter has advanced in price since last week, the supply being not so great as in previous weeks. It is now 25c to 27c per lb., while eggs are more plentiful and have dropped to 28c. Fowl is scarce and high in price.

The grain market has taken an advance, the price now paid for wheat being $1 per bushel. It is some time since this article last sold for this price. Peas have also taken an advance to 85c per bushel. We also note a change in the hog market, which has dropped to $6.

ST. THOMAS.

February 10.—Both markets were slimly attended Saturday by both buyers and sellers. The only feature was the scarcity of dairy butter, which was readily disposed of at from 25c to 28c per lb. Eggs were very plentiful and 28c per dozen for strictly fresh laid was the ruling figure. Poultry continues very scarce and the few chickens offered were quickly disposed of at from 80c to $1 per pair. Apples were scarce and retailed at from 30c per peck for Kings and Spies. Potatoes sold from 80c to 90c per bag, and other vegetables were sold at the usual prices.

Owing to the advance in wheat to $1 per bushel the wholesale price of flour has advanced to $2.65 per 100 lbs., but the grocers are watching one another to see who will be the first to advance the retail price.

Lorne Pearson, the secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, was married last week to Miss Boucher, one of St. Thomas' young ladies. Mr. Pearson purchased J. A. Forsythe's grocery business a few years ago and has met with great success, owing to his strict attention to business and courteous treatment of his customers.

At a meeting of the grocers held in the R.M.A. rooms it was unanimously decided to form a grocers' section of the R.M.A., and a committee consisting of

L. Pearson and J. A. Stewart, was named to make necessary arrangements. The meeting was called to protest against the proposed change in the market by-law to prevent the grocers buying before 10 a.m., instead of 9 as at present. Some of the aldermen publicly stated that they were in favor of changing the by-law.

GUELPH.

Feb. 10.—The Clerks and Salesmen's Association gave a banquet in the Queen's Hotel on Wednesday night, in honor of Fred Best, one of their members, who has secured a situation in St. Thomas. He was also presented with an address and meerchaum pipe. A very enjoyable evening was spent. Among the grocer's taking part were : W. Hood, R. Robinson, Chas. Smve, of Hamilton, and E. Carter of H. Walker & Son.

The many friends of Benson Bros., grocers, will regret to hear of the death of their father, which occurred at Drayton last Saturday.

Jackson & Son have received the contract for supplving the county jail with groceries for 1909.

The Guelph free library is giving a trial to the idea of keeping the library open till 10 p.m. each evening instead of 9 p.m. for the winter months.

The Guelph Waterworks Commission have handed over a cheque for $18,000 to the city for 1908, which shows what business men can do for a city when given a chance.

January was away ahead of the corresponding month of last year as a business month in the opinion of a number of the Main St. grocers. In fact all the grocery stores are quite busy, which is something unusual at this time of year.

Somebody must have thought there was some money made in the grocery business last week when an attempt was made to get into two grocery houses on Liverpool Street on Saturday night. He started too early as he must have forgot that the stores keep open late on that night.

The Clerks' and Salesmen's Association have entered a team in the Bowling League for the championship of the city.

ST. CATHARINES.

Feb. 10th.—The local millers advanced the price of flour fifteen cents per barrel Monday. The reason they give is higher cost of wheat.

The J. H. Wethey Co. Limited, an independent canning firm of this city, have placed on the market a beet which they call their "Delicatessen Beet." To help the sale of this special line they are co-operating with the retail trade by supplying attractive price cards printed in two colors suitable for window or counter displays. They are also taking space in the local newspaper to advertise "Delicatessen Beets." This plan of co-operation should prove mutually beneficial to both the retail trade and the producer.

Dairy butter was offered in such quantities on Saturday's market that farmers found it a difficult matter to find purchasers. The price fell to 22c per pound. New laid eggs were also affected and the price declined to 23c per dozen by the basket.

Canned goods are selling in greater quantities this year than last. This opinion seems to be general with the retail trade. Profits are not so good however. One firm is at present retailing corn, peas and tomatoes at seven cents per can.

Nearly every grocer in this city sells candy of some description. Everyone admits that the profit on candy is good and that they should encourage the business more than they do at present. McLean Bros. in speaking about their confectionery department, said that it was the most remunerative part of their business. They have a silent salesman for displaying candies and they said this display is a great business getter. W. A. Sherwood & Son are giving more attention to their confectionery end of the business because profits are much better than on regular groceries. They have a silent salesman on order at present and when it arrives they intend to devote more space and energy to the selling of confectionery. Bradley & Son are also taking more interest in candies, and are making a permanent feature of candies the year round, instead of just confining their selling to the Christmas season. J. T. Petrie, of the American Bazaar, has always been a firm believer in the selling of confectionery for profit. His candy counter occupies a prominent position in the ground floor of his store and is always well stocked with high-grade and medium priced candies. The average grocer here sells only gross candies. The profit on this line is good and many consider selling gross candies a valuable advertisement for their store, as children patronizing the store for candy always think of the same store when sent for groceries.

PETERBORO.

February 10.—On Thursday, the 4th, Coon and Chiles opened up their new general store in Havelock. The affair was very successful, many of the townspeople taking advantage of the opportunity to inspect the fine new place of business which has been erected since the fire that destroyed a large portion of the business section of the town. Everyone was served with a cup of coffee poured from the Kin-Hee coffee pot. Music was furnished during the day by Miss Lottie Chiles, of Peterboro, assisted by a number of the young ladies of Havelock. A complete line of groceries is carried and the equipment is modern in every respect.

Local grocers are retailing dairy butter at 25c a lb., and newly laid eggs are down to 28c. The farmers' market has not been largely attended recently, but this has not prevented the price of farm products getting cheaper.

A new fruit store has been opened on George Street by Jas. Fibian, a young man who has moved from one of the side streets to the main thoroughfare. He is carrying a choice line of fruit and canned goods.

An article appeared in a local paper recently asking how it was that prunes, dried apricots and pears are so dear in Peterboro. The average housekeeper has to fall back on many of these dried fruits at this season, and they are excellent as well as wholesome for family use. The grocers here charge 18 and 20c a pound for a fair sample of dried apricots, while in Toronto a good quality is offered at 12½c.

On Wednesday Jacobi Bros., of St. Catharines, opened up their new restaurant and lunch counter in the premises formerly occupied by Fowler, in the same business.

GALT.

February 10.—The grocery business in Galt has been brisk for the past fortnight, and a steady increase in all branches of trade is noted.

There is a fortune in it for the man who can purchase apples in the fall and preserve them in some manner so that they can be offered for sale in their natural state about this time of year. Your correspondent in making his rounds this week paid particular attention to the quality and quantity of apples offered for sale, and the result was most disappointing. In no case could perfect apples be secured, and in several instances grocers were without a supply. Those offered for sale were mere apologies for the succulent Canadian fruit — wormy, bruised, dirty and in many cases half rotten. The grocers recognize the fact that there is a big demand for apples of the right kind, particularly during the spring months, but as yet they have found no way of securing a supply.

Patrick Radigan, the Main Street grocer, has been elected chairman of the Market Committee of the town council. This committee which is composed of three members, will devote itself solely to market affairs, and with the energetic alderman at its head, big results may be expected before the end of the year. Through neglect the Galt market has fallen off sadly during the past few years.

John Sloan, the president of the Board of Trade, along with representatives from the town council and board of health, will shortly visit other towns and cities with a view to securing particulars regarding a system of garbage collection which it is proposed to instal in Galt.

Hugh Walker, of Deans & Walker, is a Paris old boy. He has been honored by his former Paris associates by being invited to accompany two rinks of curlers to play in a bonspiel in Utica, N.Y. He has accepted and is now in the American city.

Your correspondent last week took an afternoon in interviewing the various grocers with a view of securing their opinion as to whether or not the sale of confectionery was a profitable side line, and in almost every case the answer was in the negative. The corner grocers, particularly, were emphatic in their statements that while it might not result in a real loss, that there was no profit in carrying confectionery. The above opinion was vouchsafed by the other small grocers, all of whom seemed to think that it would be extremely unwise to lay in a large stock of candy. The larger grocers were not so emphatic. All Galt's larger grocers handle considerable confectionery during the year, and at these places can be purchased almost any variety. "We keep confectionery to please our customers," said one, "and at the same time there is a reasonable profit in it for us. Of course we have to buy judiciously. But if we lay in a stock of confectionery that will keep well, we usually manage to get rid of it, and then once laid in it is no further trouble to us. Of course our trade is limited to most of the cheaper varieties, but we have quite a sale of the more expensive confectionery put up in boxes." At Sloan's it was an entirely different story. And it would be unfair to compare Mr. Sloan's experience with that of other grocers. At this store the sale and display of confectionery is a feature. A large space near the main entrance has been set aside for the confectionery department, which is up-to-date in every respect. "We have no reason to complain of the results from our confectionery trade," said Mr. Sloan. "When we took up this line we recognized that the people wanted the best, and this we have endeavored to give them. Our stock comprises everything from the cheapest mixtures to the most expensive boxed goods. We endeavor to set the lead in confectionery and to be always up to date. We want people to know that Sloan's have it. One point of success in the confectionery business is not to let your competitors get ahead of you." Just how large the stock of confectionery at Sloan's is may be made known by the fact that it required two clerks at hard work for three days to take stock.

As a result of the recent demonstration of Concentrated Soups this latest novelty is having quite a demand in Galt.

Annoyed by the taunts of her barber neighbor, the wife of one of Galt's Italian fruit vendors recently invaded the barber's store, drenched his furniture with water, and pummeled the man with a granite pitcher. As a result, the foreigners are now unmolested.

The proposed garbage system will be of great benefit to Galt merchants, many of whom are now at considerable expense in having their garbage removed.

The Hawkers' and Peddlers' by-law in Galt has been amended at the request of a large number of citizens. The change reduces the license for vendors of fruit, vegetables, etc., from $50 per year to 10 cents per day for each day goods are hawked about town. It was claimed that the large license fee was resulting in an increase in the price of vegetables and fruit.

The town council will at its next meeting pass a by-law licensing the sale of cigarettes. The object is to prevent the sale of the "weed" at the corner grocery stores, where the packages are frequently broken open and the contents sold to youngsters at one cent each. The action is being taken at the instigation of the police department.

All Galt industries are now working ten hours a day and the outlook is exceptionally bright.

Bad roads interfered with the attendance at the market on Saturday. Eggs were 30 cents per dozen and butter 30 cents per pound.

BELLEVILLE.

February 10.—William T. Patterson, who for many years represented the Steele Briggs Seed Company, of Toronto, on the road, and who branched out in the grocery business here about a year ago, has again gone back to his old love and joined the same firm as traveler. He has left the management of his store with his son, Murray. It is one of the most up-to-date and handsome grocery stores in the city.

Recent callers on the trade here were: Mr. Scott, of the Taylor, Scott Co., Toronto; Mr. Holden, of the Canada Brokerage Co., Toronto; G. W. Prescott, of Hudon, Hebert & Co., Montreal.

A case of very great interest, and especially of much interest and import to cheese men, cheese factory patrons, and others, was heard here yesterday (Feb. 8) in Division Court, before Judge Fralick and a jury. The plaintiffs were Hodgson Bros., cheese exporters, of Montreal, who sued for $44.38, for four cheese which they returned as being unfit for food and in very bad condition.

The facts are these: In May of last year the Glen View Cheese Factory, of Ameliasburg, an unincorporated company, boarded 70 colored cheese at the Belleville board through their salesman, Cyrus Giles, and these were bought by Morden Bird, who was acting for the plaintiffs. Bird sent over F. W. Brenton, who inspected the 70 cheese at the factory and pronounced them all right. The cheese were then brought over to the Schuster dock and were put on the steamer Belleville for forwarding to the plaintiffs at Montreal. When the cheese reached the dock at Montreal for forwarding to the plaintiffs one box was discovered in a broken condition, and when the coopers went to repair the box it was then discovered that the cheese was totally unfit for the market. This led to an examination of the entire seventy, when it was found that four of them were entirely bad. The Hodgsons notified Giles, who refused to accept the return of the cheese, contending that the cheese had been accepted and that his liability ceased. The plaintiffs then returned the cheese to Brenton's warehouse here, where Giles saw the cheese and refused to accept it. The company then brought action for the price of the cheese, $44.38, and after hearing evidence the judge rendered a verdict for the plaintiffs. The latter brought every man between Montreal and Belleville who had anything to do with the cheese, including warehouse men, coopers, pursers on boats, etc. The cost of the witnesses alone amounted to over $150, so those four cheese cost some money. Some of the cheese produced in court yesterday certainly had a decided "limburger" odor. The jury were drawn from patrons of factories in the second concession of Thurlow.

INGERSOLL.

Feb. 10th.—Although the weather, for the greater part since the first of the year has been more springlike than typical of winter, it has had no apparent ill effect upon business. There was a time and not long ago at that, when merchants generally clung to the opinion that plenty of snow was absolutely necessary to give a swing to business. This may have been the case in the early days when there was heavy teaming to do and the roads were bad the year round. In the well settled districts nowadays, and particularly where there is no lumbering, good wheeling is about as good as sleighing so far as the business interests are concerned.

With February nearly half gone the merchants are beginning to make preparations for the spring. Improvements are being planned and advantage taken of all opportunities to "brush up" their stores. Stocks are also being gone over carefully and when the bright days of April arrive all will be in readiness for the rush that usually follows.

The firmness of market prices for the past few months is a matter which has caused more than one purchaser to "sit up and take notice." The quantity of produce appears to have very little or nothing to do with regulating the prices. For the past several months butter has been hovering around the 30 cent mark, while eggs have also shown practically no decline, notwithstanding the fact that they have been marketed in increased quantities of late. While as high as 30 cents per dozen has been asked, twenty-eight cents has been the ruling figure.

W. M. Scanlon who engaged in the bakery and confectionery business here about a year ago has disposed of his confectionery business to L. Tanner. Mr. Tanner has been a resident of Ingersoll for eight years and he will no doubt be accorded a liberal patronage.

PERTH.

February 10th.—N. E. Dodds rented a store just across from his regular stand and for the past few days has had a very successful "Fire Sale." He hopes to open for business with a new stock in his old stand next week.

Sleighing is practically gone and as much Perth business is country business and wheeling these cold days is unpleasant, business is not as brisk as it might be this week.

HAMILTON.
